15 taxpayers sue city

By RICHARD WILLIAMS
of the Graphic staff

Fifteen taxpayers have filed suit against the City of Newton to return $500,000 plus a $125,000 penalty to the School Committee.

The suit is filed as "Grace C. Whitmore et al vs. the City of Newton" in Cambridge Superior Court.

The other taxpayers are William Carmen, Peter F. Harrington, Hubert E. Jones, Richard J. Durkin, Shirley B. Ahern, Fay G. Cohen, Selma L. Crevoshay, Raymon W. Eldridge, Anne K. Palmer, Frederick G. Fisher, Jr., Henry Gesmer, Anna F. Jones, Edward B. Kovar, and James E. Fenn.

Under Chapter 71, Section 34 of the state statutes, the School Committee has the final say in setting the school budget and operating the schools.

The law states that a minimum of 10 taxpayers can file suit against the city to restore the funds that the aldermen cut March 31.

City Solicitor Howard Levine said he was served with the suit on Monday, and has 20 days to file an answer to it .

However, he said the case will probably not be heard until September.

Mrs. Whitmore was a member of the School Committee from 1954 to 1967, during which time the Committee won a suit on these grounds for $2,000 for transportation funds.

She said she signed the suit to uphold the principal of fiscal autonomy.

She said, "The School Committee and the aldermen were elected seperately and for a different purpose. I want the School Committee to control the schools."

Among the other signers of the suit, Ms. Ahern is a librarian at Newton North High School, Ms. Crevoshay is an English tutor at Newton North, Carmen is a former mayoral candidate, Harrington is former alderman and current state representative, Durkin is former president of the Newton Teachers Association, Ms. Cohen is chairwoman of the Democratic Ward 8 Committee, and Ms. Palmer is a former School Committee member.

Mayor Theodore Mann, noting that the state senate had voted against the bills that would reduce or eliminate fiscal autonomy, said the city will follow the law as it is decided by the judge.

Refusing to say how the city would approach its legal battle, Mann said "There certainly is a prescedence for fiscal autonomy."

He further stated that fiscal autonomy is really in the hands of the taxpayers, and it is their choice to reelect or not reelect the present School Committee.

Ald. Louis Egelson, chairman of the aldermanic Education Committee, had tried to negotiate a compromise between the two groups before the suit was filed.

He said Tuesday, he has tried to get the School Committee to make some reductions with hopes that the aldermen would come back with part of the $500,000.

"I don't feel the situation is hopeless, but too many (School Committee) members have different ideas on (where) specific cuts could be made."

He voted against the Board's cut of the $31.9 million budget, because he felt the members of the Board were trying to attack fiscal autonomy.

Land Use Committee

Norumbega plans denied

The aldermanic Land Use Committee voted this week to deny all requests for building on Norumbega land in Auburndale.

The committee also held a proposal for expanded parking for Newton-Waltham Bank in Newton Corner.

By a vote of 5-2 with Ald. Michael Lipof absent from the entire meeting, all petitions from the Pernini Land & Development Corp. were denied.

This committee action will be reported to the Board of Aldermen at its Monday night meeting.

There may be, however, an attempt to split the Perini plan into two parcels, recommending denial for the proposed condominiums on the North side of Commonwealth Avenue, and trying to work out some agreement for a proposed office building on the South side of Commownwealth Avenue.

This ploy was tried within the Land Use Committee Monday night and later, after debate, withdrawn.

The developers submitted a letter to the Land Use Committee Monday stating they were willing to reduce the size of the office building they propose for the South side of the street from 100,000 to 75,000 square feet, cutting it from five stories to four.

At the April public hearing on the Perini proposal, the developer offered to sell the North portion of the land to the city in exchange for permission to build the office building on the South side.

Ald. Richard J. McGrath argued Monday that Perini was making a substantial alteration from the considerations the committee had before it, and recommended denying the whole thing and freeing Perini to submit a new petition for the office building.

McGrath said that to take the Perini requests, deny part, and approve a modified office building would be "substantially rewriting the petition'" and

Contract for busing approved

A busing contract for the next five years will save the School Committee $76,870 from next year's budget, but the Committee refused to reduce this amount or any other sum from its budget in any attempt to have the taxpayers' suit dropped.

The new contract will be with the current bus company, Garden City Bus, and represents a reduction in the daily rate charged per bus of $3.

The School Committee also has the option of getting new buses in two years when new federal specifications may go into effect.

The new fleet would only cost $64 per day per bus, which is lower than other bids submitted.

Even on the old buses, Garden City will supply two-way radios at no extra charge if a five-year contract is signed.

The contract approval did not allow for optional equipment of electric defrosters

Will revaluation be delayed?

Could revaluation in Newton be delayed at least one year?

Newton's city solicitor is investigating this possibility.

City Solicitor Howard Levine said this week that at the direction of the Board of Aldermen he is checking into the possibility of building a case and returning to Middlesex Superior Court to ask for a delay on the court order that says Newton must put revaluation into effect July 1.

Levine said he would ask for a "minimum of one year."

At least 6600 Newton taxpayers have asked for a hearing on their new assessments. Hearing requests have been pouring into City Hall at the rate of 1000 per week since tax bills were sent out at the beginning of April.

Members of the Board of Aldermen were prompted by the complaints to ask for time to evaluate the validity of the Cole-Layer-Trumble revaluation work.

Levine said he would know within a week or two whether or not the city will go to court for an extension.

Worcester got a delay after a record 13,000 taxpayers balked at their new 100 per cent assessments recently.

Several community meetings have been held during the past week, giving residents and aldermen an opportunity to discuss the issue. At one, it was suggested that valuations might still not be exactly equal across the city.

Taxpayers also are reported ready to form a group, hire a lawyer, and seek their own injunction to stop revaluation from taking effect July 1.

Mayor Theodore D. Mann said this week that Newton's assessors will review "all of the Cole-Layer-Trumble material" and "I expect the assessors to advise the city solicitor on what to do."

Mann skirted answering a question on whether or not he personally felt CLT had done a good job revaluing, saying he is not an assessor and not qualified to comment.

The mayor also went on to deplore the "demagoguery" that has surfaced because of revaluation.

"It is heartbreaking to see how some people are making the worst of this situation," the mayor said. "The vultures are hovering about trying to use this for political advantage."

He said he would like to reassure people that there are provisions under the law to give abatements to anyone who clearly cannot afford to pay increased taxes. The intent, he said, is certainly not to force people out of their homes.

People being 'harassed?'

Reports of real estate brokers "harassing" elderly persons who may have become frightened at the prospects of increased taxes have come to the attention of this newspaper through Alderman Robert Tennant. Tennant said there were accounts of people "trying to buy property by contacting elderly persons in distress situations."

Tennant explained that these elderly people were being told that after purchase their homes would be leased back to them "on a rental basis for five years."

Concerned that some elderly people might fear losing their homes, Tennant

Newton's parade Sunday

The Bicentennial flower will open in Newton Sunday with bands, floats, children and clowns parading from the Jackson Homestead to City Hall.

The parade is set to begin at 1:30 p.m., but in case of rain, the parade will be next Sunday.

Jackson Homestead has been chosen for the stepping off point because it is celebrating its 25th anniversary, and is the home of the city's historical treasures.

The parade will go west on Washington Street, and south on Walnut Street to Commonwealth Avenue and then onto the City Hall grounds.

Featured in the parade will be Jeppy the Clown with many assistants from the Explorers, antique bicycles, a Stanley steamer, and students from Lincoln-Eliot School dressed in costumes they made.

Floats in the paradecoordinated by Anthony "Fat" Pelligrini, will include the Girls Scouts, Warren Junior High School, the Newton Neighborhood Association, the Newton Squares, St. Sebastian's School, the Explorers Indian dance group, and others.

Providing music in the parade will be various Newton school marching bands and bands from Wellesley.

bicentennial

Prior to the parade at 1 p.m., Mayor Theodore D. Mann will dedicate a new flagpole at the homestead, and will cut a cake with 200 hand-dipped candles made by Mason-Rice students.

With the Mayor at the dedication will be Bicentennial co-chairmen Esther Steinberg and Ald. Wendell Bauckman.

People marching in the parade should assemble on Jackson Road at 12:30 p.m., with Kindergarten through grade three children lining up on Elm Road (near Newton High School) at 1:45 p.m.

Many of the leaders in the community based effort behind the parade include Linda R. Plaut, chairwoman; Nancy Goldberg, Rita Dym, and Joel Levin, Parade Committee members, Marjorie Greene, designer of posters for the Bicentennial; and James Bergatino, marshall of the parade.

Working with the line-up of the marchers have been Gene Blumenreich, John Logan, and Norman Riviere.

Also helping with the parade have been Police Capt. A. Charles Mascia, Fire Capt. Joseph Fitzsimmons, Veterans agent Carlton Merrill, and police department safety officials.

Morning breakfast

Before the parade, from 8 to 11 a.m., there will be the annual Mary C. Gianfrante Scholarship Breakfast in the Newton North High School cafeteria.

The full breakfast to benefit Newton North students costs $1.50 for adults and $1 for children.

Next to teacher Jane Roberts on the right is Tara Feeney, wearing her hat and helping with the boys' hats. Other grades at Cabot School have themes of ethnicity and famous persons for the parade. Legality of budget transfer questioned

The School Committee's transfer of $193,150 from its maintenance account to cover deficits in the other areas of the school budget for the current fiscal year may be illegal, according to some City Hall sources.

Under the City Charter, the School Committee is in charge of taking care of and maintaining school buildings.

When Comptroller Lawrence Marino received the request for the transfer Monday from School Budget Director Harry Vienneau, he immediately asked for a ruling from the city solicitor on the legality of the transfer.

Vienneau says its legal.

Solicitor Howard Levine will have to make a ruling on Article 4 Section 3 in the charter which states:

"The powers of the School Committee shall include but not be limited to the power to . . . provide ordinary maintenance and repairs on all school buildings up to a maximum of four percent of the School Department's operating budget adopted for the preceding fiscal year . . ."

With the transfer of the money out of the maintenance account, Director of Support Services John Gilleland said only emergency maintenance will be taken care of from May 1 until the end of the current fiscal year, June 30.

The question apparently for Levine to answer is if the cutback of funds for maintenance results in the neglect by the Schoool Committee of its chartered responsibilities.

Budget Director Vienneau contends that it is a legal action because under state law the School Committee has final say about the upkeep of the schools.

He noted that the city only receives a total figure from the School Committee for its budget, and is not obliged to give further breakdown to the city.

Marino said the transfer request from Vienneau designated that $193,150 be moved from maintenance to transportation, salary, and "other" accounts (the latter of which is a single heading).

Vienneau explained that this breakdown is only for Marino's benefit in making it easier for Marino to keep track of certain accounts which must be reported to the state.

Vienneau said, "The transfer was only for his benefit. I don't understand what they're getting at" with the claims of illegal transfers.

The School Committee took the money from maintenance to pay for deficits in fuel, electricity, water, gas, Blue Cross and Blue Shield, transportation, and clerical salary accounts.

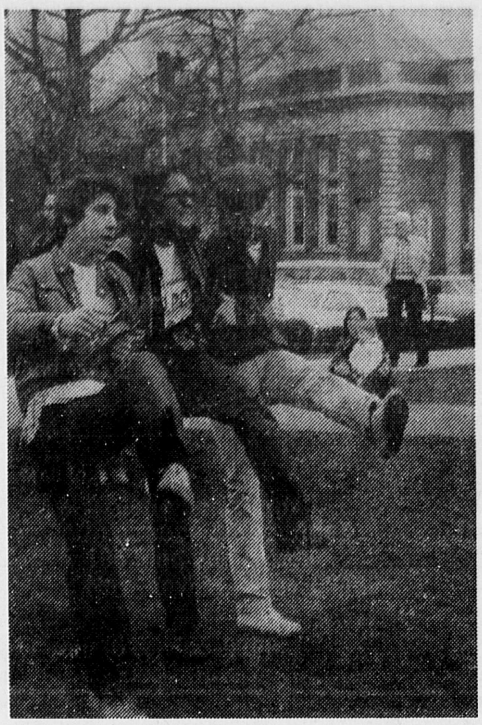
Other accounts that had contributed funds to the $258,400 deficit were professional salary, replacement of equipment, Metco reimbursements for books, supplies, and basic instructional costs, and a program called 21 Inch TV.

Final performances

The Playhouse at Piccadilly Square will offer a Sunday evening performance May 4 at 7:30 p.m. of the final show of the season, "Tartuffe."

Performances will also be given May 1,2 and 3 at 8:30 p.m.

Reservations can be made at 734-0400.



Don Mayer, Jana Tyler and Mark Dennis appeared in Newton Centre Square last Saturday to give an impromptu recital of the songs from "Sweet Charity," the musical being presented at Newton South High School May 1,2 and 3 at 8 p.m. in the school auditorium.

Dial-a-ride up for review

Sometime in the next month there will be a meeting about "public transportation of all kinds" bought about through the efforts of Alderman Mark White who has introduced a resolution "requesting His Honor the Mayor to direct a study of dial-a-ride communities with a report" by August, 1975.

White feels a discussion of this computerized transportion is long overdue. Although he says he has been told it is too "expensive" he asks that he be shown "written documentation."

Dial-a-ride is a "computer oriented demand response" transportation system through which roughly 10-20 buses are dispatched around a city. The waiting time is approximately 10-15 minutes.

The first such system was begun as a federally funded project in Haddonfield, New Jersey. It is not a profit making system.

However, White stated that "we are paying about two million dollars for the MBTA which is inadequate."

He says that while Newton has delayed acting on his resolution, 15 cities and towns have adopted this form of transportation. He said that some of the cities using dial-a-ride are Hartford, Connecticut; Dunstable, Massachusetts; Westford, Connecticut; Chelmsford, Massachusetts and Lewiston, Maine.

Date set for murder trial

Superior Court Judge Cornelius Moynihan has scheduled the trial of Richard A. Johnston on a charge of murder Sept. 22

Johnston, of 5 Hallron Rd., is charged with the murder of Robert F. McGettigan. He was arraigned on the charge March 13 and released on $25,000 bail.

Nomination papers released today

Alan Licarie, executive secretary of the Newton Election Commission, announced this week that nomination papers for the local fall elections would be made available today (Thursday).

Candidates for alderman-at-large or School Committee need 150 signatures. Candidates for ward alderman need 50 signatures.

The nomination papers must be returned to the Election Commission no later than July 29, he said, for certification. Prospective candidates then have until Aug. 5 to make their final decisions on whether or not to file and officially enter a race.

A list of people who have asked for nomination papers will be on file and open to the public in Licarie's office in City Hall.

This will be the first city election in Newton's history without a race for mayor topping the ticket.

In 1973, Newton residents elected the first four-year term mayor.

Licarie said that if a preliminary election (run-off) is necessary, it will be held Sept. 30. The last day to register for this election would be Sept. 10.

The general election will be held Nov. 4 and the last day to register to vote in it is Oct. 15.

A preliminary election is held if there are more than two candidates for any given aldermanic or School Committee seat.

All city elections are non-partisan

$1.1m for North High delayed in committee

A request for a $1.1 million bond issue to construct parking lots and athletic fields at Newton North High School was not acted on by the aldermanic Finance and Public Buildings Committees last week because of unresolved questions about traffic flow on Elm and Walnut Streets and an upcoming public hearing May 8.

The matter must be acted on by May 31 in order to be considered for 65 percent reimbursement by the state Department of Education School Buildings Assistance Bureau. If plans are not submitted to SBAB by then, reimbursement automatically drops to 50 percent, if it is granted at all.

SBAB approval is not granted merely because a school system requests it. SBAB evaluates the entire program in the school, and recently the bureau has given signs of wanting to look at the entire school system.

Most recent disapproval by SBAB of a request by Newton was financial assistance for the Newton South ive teaching center. High School automot

The major aspects of the Newton North site development plan include parking for 300 cars, in three separated areas along the to-be-relocated Elm Road and Walnut Street; six additional tennis courts; and fall playing fields.

The site plan has been approved by by the Design Review Committee.

Newton must refurbish ambulances

To properly equip Newton's eight ambulances to comply with a state law by the July 1 deadline will cost $10,409, but that's just the beginning.

By July, 1977, Newton will be required to have three "Class 1" ambulances that will cost $375,000 a year to operate and staff.

Gene Blumenreich, chairman of Mayor Theodore Mann's advisory committee on emergency health services, told the aldermanic Finance Committee last week that these steps are necessary "if Newton is going to stay in the ambulance business."

Police Chief William Quinn made the financial request, backed up by Blumenreich and another member of the mayor's committee, Charles Lipson, M.D.

When the city acquires the three new ambulances, estimated at $30,000 each, it is not certain what department will run and staff them.

At a meeting of the aldermanic Public Health & Safety Committee some time ago, neither the police chief nor the fire chief seemed anxious to assume the job.

However, 27 policemen have received the mandatory 81-hour training course for ambulance personnel, and Blumenreich said at the Finance Committee meeting that "ultimately the 27 people will be trained in the 400-hour course" that will be required for personnel manning the new ambulances.

Six of the Police Department's station-wagon-type ambulances will continue in use as back-up vehicles.

Finance Committee Chairman Sidney Small complained that again the state has passed a law without funding it, leaving the cities and towns to raise the money for implementation, and Ald. Richard Bull:.inkle asked what would happen if the city did not approve the money for the equipment.

Chief Quinn replied that there would be a daily penalty.

Lipson stressed the need for improved ambulance care and equipment by citing a an accident victim he had recently treated at Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

"The patient complained a of a pain in his neck after I had in effect sewed his scalp back on," Lipson said. "I found he had two vertebrae displaced — he should have been a paraplegic. When they picked him up he should have been put on a spine board, but they don't have spine boards."

The Finance Committee approved the $10,000 request 4-1.

In other action a request from Mayor Mann to accept a state law to increase insurance for city employees upon retirement from $1000 to $2000 brought a loud protest from the committee when it learned that the matter had been a subject of collective bargaining.

"It's not collective bargaining, it's collection bargaining — they got whatever they asked for," Small commented.

Demanding a total annual cost of the increased insurance, the committee did not vote on the item.

Smoking ban bill snuffed out

BOSTON (UPI) — Legislation to prohibit smoking in public buildings has been voted down for the third straight year in the Massachusetts House.

The House defeated the measure Tuesday after opponents said approval would mean an end to cigar and cigaret smoking on the floor of the chamber as well as in city councils and similar local government meetings.

The measure, filed by Reps. Lois Pines, D-Newton, and Garreth J. Lynch, D-Westfield, was killed on a 127-90 roll call. A watered down version, prohibiting smoking in a number of places where it already is banned, was approved without debate.

These involve elevators, supermarkets and buses of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority.

Opposing the bill, Rep. Philip J. Shea, D-Lowell, warned that approval of the Pines-Lynch bill would mean "we couldn't smoke in this chamber," since it is a state building being used for a public meeting.

Lynch rebutted this argument, saying any ban on smoking in the House only could be imposed by the speaker or the Rules Committee.

CATV Bill Killed

The Senate voted 11-3 against a bill which would have allowed cities and towns to enter contracts for cable television without the approval of the mayor.

Newton Corner

Association taking shape

By RICHARD WILLIAMS

The Newton Corner Neighborhood Association took more steps to formalize the organization of the group Tuesday night and was pleased with the recommendation from the aldermanic Land Use Committee that the asssociation be consulted by Newton-Waltham bank before the bank makes any more plans for its use of land on Baldwin Street.

Charles Nelson, chairman of the group's planning committee, said he was as surprised as the bank representatives were at the Land Use Committee's proposal to have the bank leave a 15 or 50 foot-wide pathway across its proposed parking lot as an access route from the Underwood School to the Newton Corner Library.

Nelson said talks he had with the bank's attorney, Anthony Medaglia, gave him the view that the bank's original proposal for a parking lot on the two vacant lots was not its final stand.

He said he got the impression

WNTN replies to challenge

By ELIZABETH McKINNON of the Graphic staff

Charges and countercharges, sometimes of a personal nature, have been sent to the Federal Communications Commission by Charles Bell, owner of radio station WNTN here, and CONCERN, a group of Newton citizens hoping to improve the city's broadcast service.

CONCERN is basing its petition for denial of license renewal on its claim that WNTN has not lived up to its promises about local programming.

WNTN has replied that its local programming has had to be "flexible" in order to keep up with changing needs. .mmunity

CONCuRN (Citizens of Newton for Effective Radio Now) has replied to Bell's reply to CONCERN's challenge of the station's application for license renewal, and now both sides can do nothing but wait for an FCC decision on whether to hold a hearing or to deny concern CONCERN'S petition for denial of the renewal.

The radio station is under a purchase-and-sale agreement to two Boston men, and, according to William Carmen, a spokesman for the 55-member CONCERN, the FCC may reach a decision fairly soon because of the impending sale.

Bell's response to the FCC implies that Carmen, who has run three times for mayor of Newton, is not "sincerely trying to improve" radio service but,"was and is interested in obtaining WNTN one way or another!"

Much of Bell's narrative deals with the programming challenged by the CONCERN petition. He acknowledges that since 1973, the emphasis has been on youth programming, and points out that the station has become profitable as a result.

CONCERN's counterresponse is to ask the FCC to listen to the tapes CONCERN recorded over the past year while monitoring WNTN.

CONCERN points to the many issues of importance to the city of Newton that were ignored by the station and questions whether WNTN's stated purpose — to serve Newton's young people over age 18, most of whom lived in Boston and Cambridge — is not a disservice to the rest of the Newton population.

Bell admitted in his response that the public-affairs programs that focused on purely Newton affairs were failures and attributed the failure to the Boston orientation of the residents; CONCERN wonders whether the failure was due to poor programs.

A collection of testimonial letters about WNTN failed to impress CONCERN members, which wrote that all were written after the filing date for renewal and "have obviously been collected primarily on a personal basis from friends."

At the same time, the CONCERN reponse says, WNTN has ignored the fact that 55 citizens of Newton with varied backgrounds, many professionals, many not, are members of CONCERN.

Among those cited are Harry Crosby, former alderman and chairman of the Department of Rhetoric at Boston University; Daniel MacLaren, an officer in the city workers' union; Charles Dudley, president of Newton Junior College and formerly in the radio business; William Beckett, president of the South Middlesex chapter of the NAACP; and Keith Willoughby, president of the Mutual Bank for Savings and active in business and community affairs in Newton.

Celebration

Some kids never grow up. Dr. Katherine Kelly (seated) is no exception, even at the age of 100. Dr. Kelly couldn't resist sticking out her tongue when her picture was taken at her 100th birthday party last weekend. She was born in Kylegrach, Loughbrea, County Galway, Ireland, and came to this country 86 years ago. Msgr. John L. Parsons (left) said a mass in her honor before a gathering of relatives Saturday night. Also pictured are her grandnephew Michael O'Rourke and his wife, Chris. Dr. Kelly, who used to run a nursing home in Rochester, now lives with the O'Rourke's in Waban. (Williams photo)

Beckwith will run for 11th term

Manuel Beckwith, school committeeman from Ward 4, announced "with regrets" Monday that he will run for relection in November.

Beckwith, 64, of 21 Kingswood Rd., Auburndale, said he had intended to end his career on the School Committee, but changed his mind a few weeks ago because of what he called "a great buildup of acrimony against the School Committee."

Beckwith said he felt the Committee was threatened by three possible opponents of him.

Beckwith said he knew two possible candidates for his seat he considered "destructive," but would not give the name of the other candidate who did not fit into that category.

No one has yet announced their candidacy against the senior member, although Ald. David Jackson once considered it after deciding not to run again for alderman.

But Jackson said Monday night he would not run for either office because of family pressures.

Later Monday, Beckwith said, "I think my announcement will kill off the other candidate . . . who is absolutely anti-school."

Beckwith said if he had the past year on the School Committee to do over again, he would start budget proceedings in September before the superintendent make his recommendations on the budget to the committee.

Also, Beckwith said he would not have voted for the original budget of $30.4 million before the additional $1.5 million was tacked on for salary increases.

He said he voted for the original sum to support the operating procedures of the School Committee, even though he felt there were some further cuts that could have been made.

But when the total figures came in, Beckwith voted against it.

Manuel Beckwith

Beckwith, who voted against the $22.7 million personnel section in the budget, said cuts in the future may have to eliminate program supervisors and coordinators.

The antique dealer said, "When an organization is shrinking, you can't just cut from down here (cutting his hand through the air near his waist), you have to cut up here, too" (motioning near his head).

He would also change the budget process by having meetings on the budget to give direction and instruction to the administration.

He was a bit upset by the content of the administration's introduction to the budget, noting "I don't see the relationship between the budget and the cost of living increase," since running the schools is different from running a household.

Jury questionnaires are in the mail

An estimated 2500 jury questionnaire forms were mailed to Newton residents today, according to Alan Licarie, executive secretary of the Newton Election Commission.

Newton maintains a pool of between 900 and 1500 prospective jurors. A residents' name remains in the pool for three years.

Anyone receiving a jury questionnaire must return it to City Hall by the end of May.

Licarie said that hours have been set aside on May 20 and 21 for interviews with people who feel they should be disqualified from jury duty.

Interviews will be conducted those days between 7 and 9 p.m.

Residents cannot ignore the questionnaire. Anyone failing to respond to it will receive a summons.

Revaluation

If anything has ever rocked Newton to its very foundations, revaluation has.

Revaluation has inspired fear and panic and outrage among many people here. Residents have taken one look at their tax bills and said, "we can't afford to live in Newton anymore."

This is disquieting to say the least.

Certainly, the aim of revaluation was never to drive people out of the city. Time is about to tell whether this dire prediction will be true or not.

The arguments surrounding the property tax almost defy discussion. The property tax is an inequitable base to support a community and its schools. Isn't the inequity of that the favorite battle cry of every politician?

Don't they all tell you it's not fair?

Does that change the realities of revaluation?

No.

There are people in this city who have been asked to absorb an additional payment of hundreds or thousands of dollars in property taxes in one year. That appears to be blatantly ridiculous.

On the other hand, it certainly was not fair to have portions of the city valued at one, low percentage and other portions of the city valued at another, higher percentage.

That is a task Newton, and every other community in Massachusetts, should have addressed itself to long ago. If they had, 100 percent assessments might never have been a court-mandated decision.

Until every community in the Commonwealth is revalued and everyone pays at the same percentage, Newton will suffer. It will suffer along with all the other communities that have put revaluation into effect because it is the law. It will lose state revenues, it will lose tax money.

We have this long tradition of letting the property tax bear the burden of our spending. We have this tradition of consistently penalizing homeowners for owning a home, for improving and maintaining property.

Every politician is fond of saying this use of the property tax is unfair and inequitable.

The next time one says it to you, tell him or her to DO something about it.

Haven't we had enough talk?

Finally over

The word "surrender" may be artfully deployed in the save-face negotiations that spill over from the ruins of Vietnam. But the fact of surrender is there with the full force of reality that follows an end to 30 years of warfare in Indochina.

The last gasp in the war came Tuesday with the crumbling final evacuation of the United States from the capital of Saigon. There may be diplomatic settlements as the Viet Cong and the South Vietnamese administrations work over the ruins and remains. But let there be no doubt about it, the Vietnam war ended with the lost-cause of our support going down in surrender.

The Vietnamese cause did not fail and flounder because of lack of military might. It ended because most Americans said "Stop. We have had enough." The message started as a whisper four Presidents ago. It reached a crescendo within the Johnson administration and has not stopped since.

The message was clear and could not be ignored. And all the political pleading could not still the clamor. And as the end comes so may discontent and anger simmer lower until it is spent in ways that do not include war.

The Vietnam war touched each of us. It took its toll without any fair measure. And most thank God it is finally over .

The busing numbers game . . . and Judge Garrity

By JAMES G. COLBERT

It seems incredible and almost unbelievable that in this nation of self-government one man has it within his power to inflict the harm and havoc upon a great city and its people that U.S. District Court Judge W. Arthur Garrity, Jr., apparently can impose upon Boston.

About the only encouraging aspect to an otherwise bleak situation is that Garrity may go so far and contradict himself so many times that a higher federal court would be likely to throw out his decision.

In his difficult-to-understand Phase 2 rulings and actions Garrity has managed to lose the support of some public leaders and one daily newspaper which up to now have backed him in the school busing dispute.

Home-owners in such communities as West Roxbury and Roslindale, who have no children of school age, are shocked that Garrity apparently is unimpressed by the estimates of school officials that the busing cost under his revised plan could run as high as $40 Million.

That certainly would wreck Boston and send homeowners fleeing from the city into the suburbs in increased numbers. However, that estimate probably is wide of the mark. The indications are that next September there will not be enough children left in the Boston public school system to bus around in order to run up a $40 Million bill. So take heart on that point, for whatever slight comfort it may be.

Incidentally, of Garrity's alleged desegregation experts from Boston University claimed glibly in a recent interview that there has been no flight from Boston.

When he was asked about it, he made a wiseacre reference to Logan Airport and asked: "What flight?" Unfortunately, this is flight as in flee, not as in fly, as he well knows.

Many West Roxbury parents of school children were stunned by the estimate of school officials that as many as 40,000 children may be bused under Garrity's personal plan. That is an unrealistic projection.

Both Judge Garrity and school officials are using figures on the number of pupils enrolled in Boston public schools which they must know are inaccurate. Why they are doing it is a puzzle to this observer.

This writer has followed closely and carefully the proceedings in Judge Garrity's courtroom from the very beginning. We have read and studied every long, complicated, tedious plan. We have sifted through page upon page of decision, statements, findings, recommendations and testimony.

We have come to the conclusion that Judge Garrity has a tiger by the tail and that he may realize it. One reason for the opinion is the amazing manner in which he has been juggling figures on the number of children attending Boston public schools.

Judge Garrity's plan for integrating Boston public schools apparently is based on the premise that there are about 85,000 children in the city's public school system, of whom approximately 43,000 are white and 42,000 are either black or children from other minorities. School officials use that same figure.

Yet, on the basis of public statements made by Garrity during his courtroom proceedings it would appear that at present there are fewer than 75,000 children attending Boston public schools.

Garrity made the statement that he gets daily attendance figures from the Boston School department and that these run from 59,000 to about 61,000. That figure does not include the approximately 11,000 youngsters in kindergarten.

Some children, of course, are out sick every day, but they would not boost the total as high as 75,000.

As far as this reporter can ascertain, the 85,000 figure represents the number of children who have attended school for one day or more this school year. The obvious explanation is that about 10,000 boys and girls have left the Boston public school system this year.

Some have transferred to parochial or private schools. Some are attending schools in the suburbs and are either living with relatives in communities outside Boston or using their addresses for school enrollment purposes and commuting to and from their homes.

While some of the missing 10,000 pupils undoubtedly are black, the great majority probably are white. That leads to the belief here that at the present time there may be more blacks than whites in the Boston public school system and that Judge Garrity may be disregarding that aspect of the problem confronting him.

Judge Garrity should ponder what has happened to the Boston public school system during the period he has been ordering school children bused around like pawns being moved on a chess board.

In June, 1974, at the close of the 1973-74 school year there were about 92,000 children in the Boston public school system. That number dropped to about 85,000 for the start of the 1974-75 school year last September after Judge Garrity issued his Phase 1 busing decree.

The figure has fallen to under 75,000 during the current school year. If Garrity sends shock waves through the city with an order for massive bussing starting next September, another big drop in school enrollment is inevitable.

While school officials presently appear to be using false and inflated school attendance figures for their own purposes, the time is certain to come– probably next September–when some schools will be closed and a substantial number of teachers will be dropped. There will not be enough children in Boston public schools to justify the enormous amount of money being spent for their operation.

This is an inevitable result of Judge Garrity's busing order.

Judge Garrity hired four so-called masters and two alleged segregation experts at considerable expense to the city.

While we don't have much praise for the plan produced by the masters and experts, it would seem that Judge Garrity should have paid more attention to it than he did. If he was going to devise his own scheme, why waste public funds hiring the masters and B.U. experts?

At times during his Phase 2 deliberations Judge Garrity has changed his position in almost bewildering fashion. At one point he declared that "violence, intimidation and white flight" would not influence the design of the plan he would adopt. There are those, including the writer, who believe he should give some consideration to white flight which one of his expert advisers says has not occurred.

On Thursday, April 10, in open court, Judge Garrity declared that city-wide magnet schools would bring peace next September to the troubled Boston public school system. Garrity said the magnet schools would serve as "an enormous valve" to reduce tensions and would serve as models for district schools.

At the same time he strongly endorsed the broad outlines of the school desegregation plan submitted to him by the so-called masters. His assertions were interpreted to mean he intended to adopt at least the framework of the masters' plan relating to school busing.

What he would do about the ridiculous recommendations for the elimination of the advanced work classes in the elementary schools and for wiping out the seventh and eighth grades at the two Latin Schools appeared uncertain.

Five days later on Tuesday, April 15, in what seemed to be an incredible reversal of his position, Garrity instructed his so-called experts to revise the masters' desegratation plan and draft new school districts.

Then he came up with his own proposal for a monstrous amount of busing at staggering public expense. Is this judicial decree by whim, whimsy or what?

Speeders Pass Dukakis As He Drives Family

Governor Dukakis was taking his family for an outing in the Blue Hills like almost any other father on a quiet Sunday afternoon in spring.

High state officials no longer are chauffered in big, black limousines so Dukakis was driving his own automobile.

He was careful to hold the speedometer at exactly 55 miles an hour in compliance with a law designed to save gasoline.

But other automobiles whizzed past him as if he were some kind of poke cluttering up the highway and endangering the safety by going too slow. About the only thing Dukakis passed was a tree.

Enough cars sped past him so that Dukakis was thoroughly annoyed by the time he reached his destination in the Blue Hills. Most of those automobiles had to be travelling at least 10 miles an hour faster than the limit allowed by law.

Of course, the operators of the speeding cars didn't know that the driver creeping along at 55 miles an hour in a nondescript automobile was the Governor of Massachusetts. They probably were going too fast to get a good look at him as they raced by him.

What they would have done if they had known they were speeding past Governor Dukakis can only be a matter of conjecture. They probably would have done exactly what they did when they didn't know.

Then when Dukakis reached the point in the Blue Hills where he was taking his wife and kids it wasn't clean and tidy enough to satisfy him.

These are among the reasons why Dukakis was not in a good mood and why he sounded off at his next Cabinet meeting about speeding on state highways and about a supposed beauty spot in the Blue Hills being dirty.

It also is why it would be a good idea not to let the figures on the speedometer climb above 55 miles an hour if you are driving on a state highway.

The suspicion here is that a lot of motorists, who have forgotten about the 55-mile-an-hour speed limit to conserve gasoline, will be flagged down by state troopers because too many speedsters raced past Governor Dukakis when he was driving as fast as the law allows.

In the good old days, when Governors were being transported in sleek, black, chauffeur-driven limousines, it was the chauffeurs who sped past us peasants as if we were standing still. In those days the speed laws were made to be broken by the powerful and privileged, and state troopers didn't bother slowing down the cars with the registration plates which began with the letter-S.

Who must take the blame for Vietnam?

Analysis by Marquis Childs

WASHINGTON — Sifting the true from the false in examining the fall of South Vietnam will be an endless pursuit. As reflected in Congress and the public opinion polls, most people would like to get it over with and forget it.

But while repeatedly declaring that he has no intention of pointing the finger of blame, President Ford continues to worry the issue with an uncomfortable awareness that he is the commander-in-chief at the moment of this grim climax. He can hardly speak the truth, which is that he inherited the Vietnam disaster, for that would be to pass a large share of the blame to his immediate predecessor, Richard Nixon. And it was Nixon who made Ford President.

So much of Ford's motivation in pounding on Congress again and again for more military aid must seem a futile political gesture. Knowing Congress out of his long experience, he must have understood from the beginning that it was no more than skywriting.

As he began to make his appeals, there was an estimated $900 million in military supplies not yet sent to Saigon. Of this, $200 million was in the pipeline and up to $700 million obligated but not expended.

The bureaucratic process being as cumbersome as it is, the committed materiel, much of it ammunition, has only recently been in the final forwarding stage.

What Ford surely knew, too, was that even if Congress in, say, early March had appropriated the $722 million he was requesting, it would have been not weeks but months before the bulk of it, particularly complex items, could have been on the way.

As one official put it, the real reason was morale. Congress could have told Nguyen Van Thieu and the world that the United States intended to stand behind the South Vietnamese and with this pledge Thieu's armies would have fought on.

In my opinion that is a highly doubtful proposition. The only thing that would have changed the situation is direct American intervention with bombers and troops. That is the morale builder Thieu had apparently continued to hope for. Which was understandable in a man trapped in the blind alley of his own past.

It is tuuly remarkable that President Ford shared this view as revealed in the CBS interview. The Congress, he said, "unfortunately" took away from the President in August 1973 (the Cooper-Church amendment) "the power to move in a military way to enforce the agreements that were signed in Paris." That can only mean that if he had not been hobbled by Congress he would have reopened American participation in the war, as the only way to save Thieu.

We shall hear a great deal as the noose tightens and the end draws near about bloodbaths. Already we have seen nightly on television the desperate plight of the refugees fleeing from Communism. The horrors of the Communist takeover in Hue during the Tet offensive of 1968, burial alive for many victims, were written large.

But in any accounting of blood hatreds it is well to remember there is much on both sides of the bloodstained ledger. When Secretary Kissinger's peace negotiations with Hanoi broke down in Paris in mid-December 1972, President Nixon gave the Communists 72 hours to go back to the table.

When that deadline passed, he unleashed terror bombing on a scale never known before with fleets of B-52s, Phantoms and Navy fighter-bombers.

In a two week period, much of Hanoi was razed. In Thai Nguyen, nearly a thousand civilians were dead or wounded. The two principal hospitals and a dispensary were destroyed. On the walls left standing, angry slogans were chalked, "We will avenge our compatriots massacred by the Americans," "Nixon, you will pay this blood debt."

Opinion around the world was revolted. The newspaper Le Monde in Paris compared the bombing to the Nazi levelling of Guernica in the Spanish civil war. The revulsion publicly expressed reflected the intense feeling in almost every chancellery in the West.

At the end of two weeks of carpet bombing, which by its very nature could have little relation to military targets, the Communists agreed to resume negotiations. At the end of the 24th round of talks in 42 months, the accords were signed — those accords that have proved no barrier at all against a resumption of the war.

"WELL I'LL BE.... PRESIDENT THIEU... PAT, LOOK WHO'S HERE.... IT'S PRESIDENT THIEU.... GEE, WHAT A SURPRISE, CAN YOU STAY FOR DINNER?... WHAT BRINGS YOU TO SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA?..."

City of hypocrites

To the Editor:

After 30 years of living and working in this forward looking community of intelligent, concerned, courageous citizens, I am dismayed to feel compelled to say publicly, "We are becoming hypocrites."

I was away during the period of decision making by the Board of Aldermen concerning the home for six children, ranging in age from 7 to 11 with "special needs." Happy to return home' I was astounded to read of the turmoil centering upon this request to the Board of Aldermen.

Yet I never doubted that Newton would agree to such a minimal effort by a proven organization which wanted to extend professional help to youngsters in need.

"Do not withhold good from those to whom it is due, when it is in your power to do it," states Proverbs 3:27. Many of us are reminded frequently that "When I was sick, ye cared for me . . . Inasmuch as ye do it to the least of these . . . Matthew 25. Both these ancient religious teachings equate our service to each other as service to God.

Yet now, we citizens of Newton must ask, "Have we, members of a community known for its intelligent conscience, become so much a part of our panicky, frightened, corrupted times that we stand defensive and fearful before a few children who need help?"

Which one of us when we had our own children could guarantee that they would never have special needs or be emotionally upset? Indeed which one of us as adults can guarantee the same? Have we never needed the help of others when besieged by problems which upset our own equilibrium.

Let us redefine the rights and privileges of being neighbors. "Being neighborly" has always had the connotation of being helpful, but this action indicates we are isolating ourselves into small selfish unity, slamming the door, bolting and locking it to children. Do we pass judgement on how many children our neighbors may have? Do we predetermine the quality, temperment, or intelligence each child has in a family which wishes to move next door?

Let us continue the proud traditions of Newton which combine intelligence and conscience, preserving our community's ability to steer change in ways that emphasize our humaneness. Let us always have an open community for children who turn to us for a place in which to live and grow so that they can become emotionally secure adults ready to participate in building a disciplined, democratic society for all.

Eloise Houghton, West Newton

Voices in the wilderness

To the Editor:

Mr. Herbert Regal, member of the School Committee from Ward 6, is quoted as accepting "those admonitions" to practice economy and eliminate waste "at face value" (as though he had) and then goes on to lecture the aldermen that they are the ones who are wasting money by inviting a 10-taxpayers suit, which, if filed and if successful, would cost n Newton's taxpayers $125,000 plus legal fees.

Unfortunately, in part he is right. If such a suit should be filed, and I hope it will not be; it would probably be successful.

Regrettably, it is the very people, like Sid Small, who are trying to save Newton some money who will end up looking bad for their efforts. It will be those who file the suit who will actually cost the city the extra amount on the tax rate.

As a former member of the Newton School Committee for 14 years, I am dismayed by the remarkable insensitivity to what is going on displayed by my former colleagues.

During the last few years of my tenure, Al Mandell and I consistently voted against the School Committee budget. We were voices in the wilderness; there was no real support for our positions. ice to warn that 'insensitivity'

After I left, I returned tw on the part of the School Committee to the needs of the city and its taxpayers could ultimately lead to the loss of fiscal automnomy for the School Committee in the wake of a taxpayer's revolt.

How was your reassessment, Mr. Regal? Mrs. Rosenblum?

When is someone—the Newton Taxpayer's Assn.?—going to insist that the Newton School Committee explain the remarkable rise in staffing that has occurred.

When I was elected in 1957, the enrollment in the excluding the junior college, Newton Public Schools' was 16,378 and the professional staff, not counting teacher aides' was 773, again excluding the junior college.

Now, I am told the enrollment is 16,250, without the junior college, and the staff is 1155, not counting the junior college staff and not counting 100 teacher aides (at the cost of two to the teacher).

Chapter 766 can only explain part of this increase. I would respectfully suggest that $500,000 could easily be found in this increase in staff and properly eliminated by the School Committee without causing this controversy.

Kneejerk spenders, like Mr. Regal and the present chairlady (at least when I was on the committee was able to observe them) seem not to realize that programs that could be justified years ago with great rectitude, lose their justification at todays's inflated costs.

And when you read that Mr. Regal has filed legislation to greatly increase Newton's school enrollment, undoubtedly at Newton's expense, by requiring Newton to accept a large number of ghetto children without the assent of its taxpayers, you can only wonder how gullible are the Newton voters who reelected Mr. Regal.

Invective comes easily when reassessment and inflation coincide. I would feel far more comfortable for the future of Newton and its public schools, in which I have invested probably 20 percent of my life, if the Mr. Regals of our School Committee had demonstrated more fiscal responsibility in the past few years instead of demonstrating an aptitude for writing half-truths to our newspapers.

Frankly, I would be very much surprised if, were I to have access to the regular School Committee packet, I could not find $500,000 that was not needed.

Al Mandell tried, and if the newspapers are correct, was completely rebuffed by the other members.

And is it not sad to realize that this was so?

Inaccuracies

To the Editor: as an avid reader of the Graphic editorial page, I have become more and more exasperated with your weekly columnist, Mr. Colbert. His columns are filled with inaccuracies, poor reasoning, and antiquated thinking. His column of April 24 has gone just too far.

His lead story concerning Sen. Owens amendments to the Capital punishment bill was, in one word, disgusting. Referring to Sen. Owens as the "first black state senator "(Should his color make any difference, Mr. Colbert?). he listed the three amendments that the senator proposed which would publicize all executions performed by the State via t.v. and other means. After listing the three amendments, (an amazing effort of superb journalism), Mr. Colbert reveals his true intelligence when he comes out with the brilliant comment: "It appears that Senator Owens was trying to kill the death penalty bill with amendments."

I need a columnist to tell me this?

Mr. Colbert gives no reason why Senator (don't forget he's Black, folks) Owen-samendment should be defeated. Perhaps Mr. Colbert cannot think of a good reason why Senator Owens bill should be defeated? Unless of course, the state is too ashamed of itself to show how "just" the death penalty really is.

Mr. Colbert's next two items contradict each other. Entitled "ABCC Probers Work Against Consumer" and "Lower Drinking Age Proved a Disaster," Mr. Colbert attempts to show that the ABCC is "a wasteful agency" and that the drinking age should be raised back to 21. After Mr. Colbert's brilliant reasoning of why the drinking age should be returned to 21, and then enforced ("The argument that a boy who is old enough to be sent off to war is also mld enough to drink booze in a barroom, is utterly without merit."), he then states that the agency which would enforce the drinking law should be thrown on a rubbish heap! This editorial does a great disservice to those groups that have tried to abolish the ABCC and the 18-year-old drinking law.

I will not even comment on his next two pieces of gossip which would make every professional journalist nauseous.

Mr. Colbert's final, and certainly most stunning, piece is entitled "Why couldn't we win the war in Vietnam?" It was so ridiculous it was ALMOST funny.

His first paragraph states that we should not expect South Vietnam to be able to beat off the North Vietnamese when they were unable to do so with American help. Miracle of miracles, he actually made sense!

Of course Mr. Colbert makes a fool out of himself in the following paragraphs. If America could crush Japan in four years, "why couldn't we bring a small, INSIGNIFICANT, nation in Indochina to it's knees." Why should we try Mr. Colbert? To protect the great democracy of President Thieu?

He continues that perhaps it wasn't America's fault that we lost the war but, in fact, the fault of "college students and left wing kooks." I guess some of those left wing kooky organizations consisting of Gold Star Mothers, State Legislatures, and just about every single religious affiliation in the U.S. are all fronts for Subvert America Inc.

Mr. Colbert's final statement that "America lost a great deal of prestige because of it's failure to win the war in Vietnam" is absolutely revolting. Did France lose all of her respect when she pulled out after Dienbienphu? Did it ever occur to Mr. James G. Colbert that perhaps we lost more of our prestige by staying in that hellish place called Vietnam? Does he remember the multitude of demonstrations in other countries concerning our involvement in Vietnam? I respectfully submit to Mr. Colbert that on rare occasions morality is more important than prestige.

It is at least reassuring that the Graphic is representing the viewpoints of one minority everytime Mr.colbert's thoughts are printed. Neanderthals everywhere can breath easier.

Retain fiscal autonomy

To the Editor

The recent revaluation of property values has caused many taxpayers to become increasingly aware of the Newton school budget. We, as taxpayers, certainly have good reason for concern, since many of our complaints are legitimate.

However, these complaints have given fuel to many who would like to see the repeal of fiscal autonomy the fiscal autonomy law of School Committees. In my opinion, this would be a tragic mistake.

Currently, there are 15 bills before the state legislature which would alter the fiscal autonomy of school committees. Many of these bills, if passed, would take away the authority of the school committees to establish their budgets and would place the authority in the hands of city councils or citizens at a town meeting.

In 1826, the legislature recognized that education could best be served by creating school boards to run our schools and to establish their own budgets. Prior to this date, the school committees were responsible for educating the youth, but had no authority to set the level of funding.

Many individual towns turned down school budgets, leaving the programs without proper funding.

The fiscal autonomy law has worked well for 150 years. It has survived two world wars, a depression and numerous recessions. Its repeal would place educational decisions back in the hand hands of every citizen in town meetings.

If the law is repealed, I suggest that the following possibilities are likely to transpire at town meetings:

—the education of the children would be turned into a political football by each era's political climate;

—the entire school budget would be opened to the political process;

—the school committee's ability to implement state state-mandated programs would be restricted by the rejection of needed funding ;

—the collective bargaining law would be impaired;

—essential funds needed to maintain accreditation would be rejected.

Education is too important to be decided by the political process of a town meeting. If what we want is the best education for our children then I urge every citizen to contact his state senator and state representative to tell them to support the fiscal autonomy of school committees.

I also suggest that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts increase the amount of state aid to education to help relieve the property tax. Massachusetts currently ranks 46th out of 50 states in amount of state aid to education and the Massachusetts Teacher's Association has taken an official position to increase the state educational aid rather than to eliminate the fiscal autonomy of school boards.

I further suggest that the citizens of Newton not reelect the School Committee members who vote excessive spending.

The taxpayer who wants to keep down the cost of education should not be attacking the fiscal autonomy of school instead he should be concerned with increasing the state boards' . aid to education and electing fiscally responsible School Committee members.

Sorry business of revaluation

Dear Mayor Mann:

As I look back on the brief public history of this sorry business of the proposed revaluation of properties in Newton, four elements emerge as major factors in the public trauma: the large amount of increase in the actual projected tax for so many property owners; the interpretation of the term "fair market value;" the failure to consider how the lower taxes on older properties may have inflated their selling prices; and the timing of the public announcement at a juncture where so many people living in the older properties are having a problem making ends meet in the current economic crunch.

I am faced with an increase of almost 50 percent in my projected tax. Most of the people who have talked with me are affected with increases in their taxes of 30 percent to a 150 percent. Most of us don't know where we are going to get the money.

We talk, talk, talk about the need for lower and middle income housing in Newton. Most of the older properties have been middle income housing, and are owned and inhabited by young couples with large families and not-so-large incomes or older employed people or retired people.

The need to cough up 500 to 1500 extra dollars presents a budgetary problem that just cannot be resolved in many instances. The interpretation of the term "fair market value" may be at the root of many of the new valuations. The firm employed to do this job is reported by the papers as interpreting the phrase to mean what the house or other property would bring in today's market. Several people I have talked with agree with my analysis: that under the most favorable conditions, if I could wait until a purchaser with greater need to buy than my need to sell, came along, I might get the proposed value.

But, if I could not wait, I would be lucky to get 85 to 90 percent of the proposed valuation. TV GUIDE for April 19-25 on page 5 cites the IRS in New York describing "'fair market value' (as) the lowest purchase price for an item on the open market."

Why are purchasers willing to pay new-house prices for older houses? One important consideration I have heard referred to time after time, is the lower taxes. When an older house is assesed and taxed at full value as if it were a new house, what advantage does it have on the open market? I suspect that the appraisers did not consider this important factor in determining their "fair market value." If the proposed revaluation goes through as presently planned, I predict that a great many Newton citizens who can least afford it, will be left paying high taxes on properties they can no longer sell at the inflated assessments placed on them by this revaluation.

The timing, of course, could not be worse. Even reasonably good middle-income salaries have been eaten up by the inflation. Retired people have almost no flexibility in their sources of income. Many owners are looking for work. The proposed increases came like thunder bolts on top of all the other bad economic news. And people feel hopelessly trapped.

Hadn't I expected some increase? Hadn't the others with whom I have talked? Of course we had. I had even had an informal appraisal of my house not quite a year ago, and was given a "fair market value" about eighty-five percent of the revaluation figure. My total increase would have been roughly 25 percent — large enough, but I could have found a way to live with it. But 50 percent? And with so many others going astronomically higher? No, something must be off, and I suppose it is up to the Mayor and the Aldermen to cause an adjustment to be made that will be fair.

I have written to you because these four elements seem to be basic to the strong negative reaction. Perhaps a reconsideration of the first three could result in a reasonable and workable adjustment. The fourth — the timing of the announcement — is, of course, water over the dam and probably unavoidable, since the announcement had to come sometime.

Very best wishes to you.

Fiscal autonomy

To the Editor:

I am very disturbed about the atmosphere that now exists in this city with respect to the vituperative attacks upon the School Committee.

I feel that it is important to ask questions and to have a role in the budget process, but I find it destructive now to write the kinds of letters appearing in the "To the Editor's Column" in this city's newspapers. It would appear that certain people are "grandstanding" in an election year.

People — both the citizen of this community and their elected representatives have had ample opportunity to appear at budget meetings and voiced their feelings about how our money is to be spent. This year's budget is record.

While I do support the Board of Aldermen's right of inquiry, I cannot support the challenge to fiscal autonomy of the School Committee.

Those of us who have been involved with state "politics" know the disaster of running between the governor's office' the Legislature and the Department of Education to get funds for programs. Do we now wish this same folly to exist in our city?

Let the aldermen involve themselves with what we have elected them for, namely the operation of city government and support services.

Newton Schools are among the finest in the nation. I, for one, would like to keep them that way. I fully support the School Committee and its legal right to remain fiscally autonomous.

Textbooks and a paper

To the Editor:

As a taxpayer of Newton, I feel justified in writing to you on the subject of paying for our children's textbooks and paper supplies.

Our children attend public Newton schools and yet they are required to pay for certain textbooks, as well as stationery supplies. My husband asked our daughter the other night why she had to buy yellow, lined school paper.

Her answer was, "There's a paper shortage."

She was quoting one of her teachers.

This is only one incident. We are paying a very high price for living in Newton to educate our children. Our taxes are unfair as it is. Why must we pay for our children's supplies in school?

If more of us get together and say "no" to the demands made on our children in school as far as supplies go, maybe we can begin to get somewhere and find out where our taxes are going to.

I' for one, have had it.

Jordan: Invitation from a King

By BRENDA TANGER
Special to the Graphic
Fourth in A Series

Most of us seemed to like Jordan. Perhaps King Hussein's inviting the 37 of us to the place warmed our hearts. But it was more likely the fact that, after Syria, the Hasemite Kingdom of Jordan seemed like a Garden of Eden.

Our new guide held an Israeli identity card because his family lived in Jerusalem, and so he went in and out freely.

"As long as I do not go into politics", he said, there will be no trouble."

From the border, our bus continued, passing the Baqa refugee camp, and on to the hillside Roman ruins of Jerash, only 40 minutes away from Amman, another city built on seven hills.

The guide, meanwhile, was establishing a few basic facts: public transportation was not available, and everyone takes cabs. There were no signal lights in Amman until a few years ago. tourists must stay in the country at least 48 hours before they may cross the Allenby Bridge into Israel, and life gets very expensive if one has the allowable four wives at a time.

We were very curious about King Hussein. In his address to the National Press Club in Washington in March of 1974, he had said two highly provocative things; first, "the existence of an Israel is no longer questioned" and then, in reference to Jerusalem, "we agree that a return to the old divided city with a 'no-man's land' between the two is impossible as a permanent solution."

We were speculating as we drove into town the first morning in Amman and saw the palace sitting high on one of Jordan's hills.

Then the invitation came.

At the base of the palace hill, the bus was stopped and we had to leave while it was searched from one end to the other. It was necessary to be vigilant, for any manner of explosive which might have been slipped on once it had become known where we were going.

After clearance, our bus climbed the hill and deposited us at the front door, just about the way we drop children for music lessons. From the reception room, we were led through an elegant state dining room to the press hall. I didn't have time to measure the dining table's length, but my children and all my neighbors' children would have to be, as the Bible says, fruitful and multiply, in order to fill it.

It was a press room fit for a King! The 30 by 50 foot room was furnished in low slung, wide velvet chairs, each two chairs sharing a white contemporary utility table. There were seven small chandeliers, with six sets of auxiliary double fluorescent lights hugging the ceiling. The air-conditioning was provided by individual units cut into the walls (no central air-conditioning in the palace?) and the beige carpet set into proper perspective a magesterial gold-encrusted desk that faced us.

The chair behind it held a small gold crown on top of the mahogany frame. Above the desk was a projection room so that, in order to have private screenings, the arm chairs had only to be reversed while the curtain on the back wall opened for a screen.

We were kept waiting a kingly 30 minutes and then that familiar face appeared, speaking as we had always seen him on television' with quiet deliberation, halting after every few phrases.

He spoke of learning "from opportunities lost," the exact phrase we had heard from Sadat's press secretary. Yet, no Arab conversation is complete without mentioning the Palestinians (not necessarily the same as the P.L.O.) and their "rights", although in Jordan many Palestinians have prospered. For example, before the Arab Summit in Rabat (making Arafat the sole Palestinian representative) King Hussein's negotiating team had Palestinian members on it. There are also seven (out of twelve) Palestinians in the Jordanian cabinet.

Hussein seemed like an amiable man, measuring each word. I had to remember that any question would be prefaced by "Your Majesty", an alien expression which I has some qualms about mouthing. I asked about the use of an Israeli Mediterranean Sea outlet for Jordan in the event of a peace settlement.

The answer at first seemed to reflect an eagerness for such an outlet, but as the King's lengthy response progressed, he seemed to catch himself, "No it is not a necessity. We have Aqaba" (on the Red Sea) he said.

We noted on the evening news that our questions were given small coverage, while the King's responses were played in full. Obviously, one does not drop any of a king's footage on the cutting-room floor.

Security deposit bill gets favorable report

Representative Lois G. Pines' (D-Newton) bill to protect tenants' security deposits received a favorable report last week from the joint legislative committee on Commerce and Labor.

The legislation requires landlords to place security deposits in escrow accounts, where they would accrue interest and be unavailable to the landlord's working capital, or for speculation or investment.

"This legislation is necessary to guarantee tenants the return of their money," Rep. Pines said. Originally, the purpose of security deposits was to protect the landlord in case of property damage or failure to pay rent by the tenant. There is nothing wrong with this system as long as the landlord is solvent and honest, but there have been too many instances where landlords, using security deposit money, have overspeculated, gone bankrupt and been unable to repay tenants."

"When all the one- and two-month deposits in Massachusetts are added up, the total amounts to $100 million," she continued. "Since this money is held by landlords on behalf of their tenants, it is not taxed. However, under present law, the money is available for investment — good or bad — by the landlord, although it really still belongs to the tenant."

Rep. Pines explained that a further provision of the bill "requires the landlord to supply the tenant with a receipt indicating the name and location of the bank where the money has been deposited, and the amount of the deposit."

Urging passage of this bill, Pines said, "The legislation I have sponsored will guarantee the return of the tenants' money at the termination of their tenancy. Unless these deposits are kept in escrow accounts, some tenants, through no fault of their own, will continue to lose money because of their landlord's imprudence."

Upper Falls historic district ready for public hearing

To prevent the irretrievable loss of an area or areas significant in the history and architectural development of the city of Newton, two years ago the city administration and the Board of Aldermen accepted and set into motion a state law, the Historic Districts Act.

This month, after a year and a half of work, the Historic Districts Study Committee will hold a public hearing on the first proposed historic district, which encompasses much of Newton Upper Falls.

Upper Falls was selected as suitable for preservation because, according to a committee report, "enough of a 19th century atmosphere remains to warrant preservation," and had a history worthy of preservation.

The study committee inventoried about 150 buildings. These buildings lie within an area bounded by the Charles River, Boylston Street (Route 9), the east side of High Street and the south side of Elliot Street, with a few additions outside these rough boundaries.

Design controls and guidelines proposed to help preserve the Upper Falls appearance and atmosphere, as well as other regulations of the historic district, are all governed by the Massachusetts Historical Commission, which recently gave its approval to the Newton Historic District Study Committee's plan for Upper Falls.

The controls and guidelines do not insist on detailed and expensive restoration, but rather try to show better ways of treating details within a limited budget and define what is reasonable and acceptable in the exterior treatment of buildings.

In general, the study committee report says, there are three basic rules in the remodeling of older houses — keep as much of the original exterior and details as the budget will permit, make any elements of modern design that may be added compatible with the original, and never use historical details from a period earlier than that of the house.

The guidelines give pointers on how to replace roofs and windows, repair brickwork and other external work.

Preferred colors will be made available to residents, classified according to "siding," "trim," "door'" etc.

Stores withing the historic district will also be subject to controls.

After the public hearing, which cannot be held until after May 11, the Historic Districts Study Committee will write its final report to submit to the Board of Aldermen.

Land use-

observed that this was not the committee's job.

Committee members appeared to be in agreement that the North side of this parcel should not be developed.

"We are wasting time if we concentrate any further on proposals for the North side at this time," McGrath stated.

"Nothing has been submitted to me that I would support," Ald. Michael Antonellis said. "The city should buy the land and use the South side for a residential purpose.

"That part of the city," Ald. Matthew Jefferson said, "has absorbed enough development."

The aldermen agreed that a firm proposal for a landtaking is needed from the Administration and Planning Director Charles Thomas pointed out that the aldermanic Finance Committee had approved $5000 for appraisals of the land at its meeting last week.

The Newton-Waltham Bank's plans to increase parking to 82 spaces at its Newton Corner location between Centre and Baldwin streets was held by the committee pending discussion on the bank's willingness to give the city a strip of land through the parking site that would allow free access between the Newton Free Library and Underwood School.

Land Use Chairman Joseph McDonnell asked if the bank would be willing to give the city a 15 foot strip of land; Ald. Terry Morris asked for a 50 foot strip of land.

Morris' request would virtually eliminate parking on the Baldwin Street portion of the land that is directly across from Underwood school.

Atty. Anthony Medaglia, representing the bank, indicated the bank would be willing to consider giving up 15 feet, but was less responsive to the ceding of the 50 foot strip.

Further negotiations on the matter are expected among the committee members, bank officials and representatives of the Newton Corner Neighborhood Association.

People-

urged that they be told about "clause 18" under which they could apply for abatements "due to hardship."

Mayor Mann who said he "deplored the fact that unscrupulous people will prey on others," stated that "no person with real financial hardship will be forced out of their homes."

Mann added that the "hardship can't be imagined... it must be real." Assessor Milton Manin said abatements based on financial hardship were purely "discretionary" on the part of assessors.

Applications for abatements may be gotten at the board of assessors office and a private review of each case will be held. He advised people to approach the board of assessors "to see how we can help."

Tennant was also concerned that citizens were spending as much as $200 for unnecessary appraisals of their homes. Paul Reinhard of Cole-Layer-Trumble backed this up stating that "no person has to spend money at this time (before their hearing.)" After the hearing, if any citizen is dissatisfied, they may appeal the findings to the board of assessors.

Canoe and bushes stolen

At 12:26 p.m., he told police that his 17-foot fiberglass canoe was take from his property.

The canoe had "Indian Princess" painted on the side and was a white birch color.

Contract approved-

for exterior mirrors and air brakes on all buses.

These were recommended as safety equipment by State Rep. Lois Pines and other bus safety advocates.

Garden City Bus said in its bid that the defrosters would cost 75 cents per bus per day, or about $945 per year.

The air brake systems on new buses only would cost an additional $3,780 per year in a five year contract.

School Committeewoman Dorothy Reichard, who was among advocates of obtaining the optional cost bids for the safety items, said the company has had no accidents in its service to the city.

This was probably why the optional items were not included by the Committee in the approved contract.

In addition to the day-to-day busing that will cost $357,235 under this contract for next year, from $50,000 to $75,000 will be used from principals' individual school accounts for special bus trips outside or inside the city.

Committeewoman Joan Needleman also questioned the reputation of the company after she read of some alleged problems it had in Boston, but Committeeman Alvin Mandell said it was just a case of the company trying to help out in a bad situation where it had no obligation to assist.

The Committee members agreed to investigate the company further.

After approval of the contract, Mandell urged that the leftover $76,870 be returned to the city coffers, but withdrew his motion after four members spoke against it.

Committeeman Herbert F. Regal said the schools should keep the money since the Board of Aldermen already cut $500,000. Chairwoman Eleanor Rosenblum said they should keep the money because there was a chance that next year's gas bill may have been underestimated by $30,000 to $50,000.

Under old business, Commiteewoman Joan Needleman urged that the Committee set aside a meeting on its agenda to discuss putting more grammar and writing schools into the curriculum.

Superintendent of Schools Aaron Fink said he was aware of a commitment made a year ago to have English Coordinator Robert Zeeb return this spring to give a report on the language arts after he introduced changes to the Committee last year.

Mrs. Needleman also moved that a subcommittee of the School Committee be set up to study the organization of the School Department and the possible overlap of jobs.

Mrs. Reichard said this should be done by a professional firm that can evaluate personnel performance better tha n the Committee in specialized areas.

Superintendent Fink agreed that the number of teacher aides and clerks and secretaries had increased greatly in recent years .

He said his personnel department has just begun a study of jobs in these areas, and hopes to report to the Committee by October of the needs in these areas over a three-year plan.

There was also discussion on the budget process the Committee faces every year to meet its deadline of Feb. 15 of delivering its next year's budget to City Hall.

All members agreed the budget process should start earlier.

Mayor Theodore Mann suggested that a finance subcommittee be set up.

Gerard Byrne said he'd like to have department heads come before the Committee and discuss their departments' needs.

Fink loved that idea.

He said, "Our people have been asking for that all along."

If the School Committee is willing to have two or three meetings a week, his personnel would show up, he assured.

Regal felt that would be overstepping the Committee's responsibilities. He said the Committee should not become involved in working with department heads.

"That's what we hired this guy over here for," he said, referring to Superintendent Fink.

Beckwith said he didn't think the Committee would be "sticking our nose into the administration," if it met with department heads.

The discussion moved into a further evaluation of all School Department personnel and no action was taken on the budget process.

Before the Committee heard Gilleland's report on the bus contract, Mandell made a last ditch effort to try to get the Committee to cut its budget for next year.

Two-and-a-half weeks ago, he passed out a list of possible cuts which added up to a savings of $344,000.

Byrne was upset then because Mandell wanted the Committee to take his facts and figures at face value, without time to check them and consider them, and make a decision.

After the time span, no one spoke in favor of Mandell's cuts.

In fact, immediately after he mentioned the subject, Chairwoman Rosenblum ruled him out of order, because she claimed that reconsideration can only be moved one day after the budget vote, according to Roberts Rules of Order.

After bickering about parliamentary procedure, and the School Committee's rules which allow the rules of order to be suspended by a majority vote, Mandell gave up because he knew he did not have the support.

from Robert Sullivan, director of the computer division of the bank that is adjacent to the lots, that the bank will consider other proposals to meet the aldermen's approval.

Nelson's committee will meet Monday, May 5, at Eliot Church, 474 Centre St., Newton Corner, at 8 p.m.

The association also adopted many of the suggestions of Eleanor Samuels, chairwoman of the committee organization.

They elected Rev. Herbert Davis as moderator, who will have the power to receive official notices, signing checks with the treasurer, call meetings of the steering committee, and chair meetings of the association.

Jean Leventhal was chosen treasurer, in addition to being recorder of the meeting.

The association decided to charge a minimum of $1 dues per member to pay the Eliot Church for postage and paper costs in mailings. The group stressed no one would be excluded from the meetings if not a paid-up member.

Unanimous voice vote of the 50 or so members passed a resolution by Mrs. Samuels that the group would not at this time make efforts to become a neighborhood council under the guidelines in Article 9 of the City Charter.

At a special meeting before the Legislation and Rules Committee of the Board of Aldermen, Mrs. Samuels reported that the Newton Highland Neighborhood Council felt the official sanciton under the charter gave it more formal standing before the Board.

However, the Newton Corner group felt it was formally recognized by the Land Use Committee, and did not like the restrictions in the charter about raising funds or petitioning for signatures from 20 percent of the neighborhood each time it speaks before the Board.

The association also passed a resolution asking the MBTA and other authorities to consult it before any changes are made in the mass transit to and from the corner.

Joseph O'Connor, chairman of the traffic committee, told the group that Brighton residents were actively seeking to have the trolley service the route to Watertown Square, but may only care if the service goes out to Oak Square in Brighton.

O'Connor said it would not be until 1978 at the earliest until street car service would be restored, due to the ordering delay in getting the new cars like the ones that will be used on the Riverside line, and construction needed in Brighton.

He also said a spokesman in City Hall said the city wants a study of all Newton passengers in Newton's mass transit before any changes are made service.

The traffic committee will meet in O'Connor's home, 41 Washington St., Tuesday, May 6, to discuss this and plans for cul de sacs at the south ends of Bacon, Peabody, and Channing streets.

Defense contract to local firm

General Connector Corp. of Newton has been awarded a $38,864.39 government contract. The contract, awarded by the Defense Electronics Supply Center, calls for manufacture of 13,733 electrical plug connectors at the firm's plant in Newton.

Five residents chosen for society

Four residents were elected to the Board of Directors at the Greater Boston Diabetes Society's annual meeting two week's ago.

Newton residents Dudley Weiss and Drs. Allen Joslin, and Boris Senior, and Frank Wheelock, were elected to serve three year terms on the board.

Edith Berkowitz of Newton was elected to serve as treasurer of the society.

Buying a used car? don't get cheated

Rising automobile and gasoline prices are leading many consumers to buy used cars. Buyers see better fuel economy and lower initial prices in the older cars.

The Insurance Information Institute reports that automobile theft investigators are warning of an auto theft boom in many areas, so when shopping for a used car be sure of what you buy. At a time when people are looking for "good deals" in used cars, professional auto thieves are never far away.

Michael J. Murphy, president of the National Automobile Theft Bureau (NATB), tells how a few simple investigation techniques can help the average consumer reduce his possibility of being duped by auto thieves.

Preventive medicine

—Know the seller. Whenever you can, buy your used car from a reputable dealer. If you are buying from a private individual, it is even more important that you know something about him. Avoid the seller who has no fixed address or employment.

Inspecting the vehicle

—Check the vehicle identification number (VIN). This is a unique number assigned to each vehicle by the manufacturer and registered with the authorities. On most cars built since 1969, the VIN is embossed on a metal plate atop the driver's dash section and is visible from the outside at the bottom of the windshield.

If it is loose, it's probably been tampered with. Auto thieves usually remove or replace the VIN plate with one from a wrecked car of the same make, model and year.

—Check the paint. Fresh paint, particularly on a late model, may indicate cover-up work by thieves. Does the interior either match or coordinate with the exterior color? One good way to check the original paint color is to look at the inside door openings and the trunk molding lip.

—Check the locks and keys. Try to get all sets of the original manufacturer's keys, not replacements. Most cars have at least two sets.

—Check stickers, personal documents and personal effects. Often a thief will say where a car has been and where it was purchased 'and used. Letters, maps and other personal items left in it may refute his tory. Look in the glove box, the trunk, especially the side walls, under floor mats, seats and over sun visors. Check lubrication and parking stickers, too.

Closing the deal

—Don't be afraid to ask questions. A legitimate seller will always cooperate with you in verifying facts.

—Complete the paperwork at the time of sale.

176th annual meeting of Mass. Conference, United Church of Christ

The 176th annual meeting of the Massachusetts Conference of the United Church of Christ will be held at historic Old South Church in Copley Square, Boston, may 2-4.

Delegates, clergy and lay, numbering nearly a thousand, will represent the Commonwealth's 495 local churches. The United Church of Christ is the oldest and largest Protestant demonination in the state.

The original organization, the Massachusetts Missionary Society, came into being in 1799, the year George Washington died. The society, with 38 charter members was "impelled by a deep commiseration for the unhappy state of those who were perishing for lack of those precious means of salvation which we enjoy."

The Massachusetts Conference of the United Church of Christ, with a staff of eleven, presently supports a broad program designed to enhance the mission of the local churches, to develop relationships among churches, and to cultivate practical support for denominational and ecumenical projects and programs.

The theme of the 176th annual meeting is "From Heritage to Hope," and a major feature will be an address on Friday evening by the Rev. Robert V. Moss, national president of the United Church of Christ, entitled "Faith for a Nation Burdened with Power."

On Saturday evening, Dr. Moss and the Rev. Avery D. Post, minister and president of the Massachusetts Conference of the United Church of Christ, will engage in a dialogue on the present and future of the church.

A major item of business will be a consideration of the future of Framingham Conference Center, a 116-acre facility located in Framingham and Ashland, which has been used for conference purposes since the early 50's. A research committee will recommend the retention of the facility and the relocation of general offices of the Conference from their present location at 14 Beacon street in Boston to the Framingham location.

The board of directors of the Conference however, will urge keeping the general conference offices in Boston, terminating the programs of the Framingham Conference Center by August 31 and the position of the director by Nov. 1.

Under the board of directors' recommendation, most of the land would be sold for conservation uses, the buildings retained for use as a resource and meeting cneter, and authority granted to the board of directors to make subsequent recommendations on the future of the site.

At least two other proposals for relocating the general offices of the Conference will be presented to the meeting. Formal proposals have been received from Andover-Newton Theological School and Second Church in Newton.

Celebrations will also highlight the annual meeting. On Friday night, an original folk oratorio entitled "Jesus Christ, God's Outlaw" will be presented. The work was written by Stephen C. Rose of Stockbridge.

A series of vignette and the appearance of historical balladeer Bill Schustik will provide a Bicentennial accent to the sessions.

Resolutions to be presented to the annual meeting include Hunger, Public Education, and South Africa.

The Rev. James W. Crawford, minister of Old South Church, will preach the sermon at the worship service on Sunday morning.

Concert by Wind Ensemble May 2, 3, 4

Music on a grand scale is planned with the New England Conservatory of Music on May 3, 4 and 9 at Jordan Hall and the Old West Church.

The Massachusetts Youth Wind Ensemble, recently returned from a successful tour of the Soviet Union, will make its first American concert appearance since that tour on Saturday, May 3 at 2:30 p.m. in Jordan Hall. Conducted by Frank L. Battisti, the program will include works of George Gershwin and Paul Hindemith, among others.

Carl Atkins will direct the New England Conservatory Chamber Wind Ensemble on Sunday, May 4 at 3:30 p.m. in Jordan Hall.

BIG MARKET

NEW YORK (UPI) — In the three months before and three months after a wedding, engaged couples and newlyweds account for 58 per cent of the total sales of sterling flatware, 27 per cent of sewing machines, 25 per cent of bedroom furniture sales and 16 per cent each of stereo and hi-fi equipment and vacuum cleaners. These figures are from a 1972 Trendex study made for a bridal magazine.

POPULAR PEWTER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pewter flatware is making a strong bid for the bridal market.

Five or six companies are making it now, says Gift and Tableware Reporter.

Editor Jack McDermott attributes pewter's growing popularity to three factors: it is less expensive than sterling and some stainless steel but more expensive than silverplate; it has ecological connotations, as a basic metal, an earth-born element; and it fits in with the bicentennial trend, as a metal that was widely used in colonial and early American times. It is safer than early pewter, however, because it is lead-free. The lead in antique pewter is dangerous when used for some foods.

Privacy hearing slated Tuesday

Representative David J. Mofenson (D-Newton), chairman of the Special Legislative Committee on Privacy, announced that the Judiciary Committee will hold a hearing on the commission's bill to protect individual rights of privacy by providing for fair information practices in the Commonwealth.

The hearing will be on Tuesday, May 6, at 1 p.m. in Room 222 at the State House.

Mofenson said that "the bill will require all state agencies maintaining personal data systems to take specific steps to safeguard the privacy of records kept and disseminated.

It will provide the opportunity for persons whose names are included in files to ascertain what personal information is being stored on them and to challenge and correct all erroneous or irrelevant information."

"The bill will give the individual real power," Mofenson continued. "Not only will a data subject have the right to access and challenge the contents of his or her files but it will provide a means of legal redress for individuals whose rights are violated, permitting them to recover damages from any state agency which fails to protect their rights of privacy under the terms of the law."

The bill also directs the Secretary of State to compile information on data banks in order to give the public the opportunity to know what kinds of information systems are being operated by state agencies.

"This bill answers a real need in the area of protecting individual's rights from the intrusion of state information systems which maintain and all too often indiscriminately release personal data," Mofenson said.

MBTA cost 'serious', Mayor Mann tells advisory board

At a recent meeting of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority advisory board, Mayor Theodore D. Mann of Newton, a member of the board, John Simmons, principal planner and advisory board designer for Newton, and representatives of the 14 cities and towns of the MBTA district met with Robert Kiley, Governor Dukakis' nominee for the position of chairman of the board and general manager of the MBTA.

A sense of the meeting was recorded in support of Mr. Kiley's nomination. The advisory board will vote on the nomination at its next meeting on April 23.

Mayor Mann voiced his concern over the new MBTA assessment formula, which "could have a very serious impact upon taxpayers of the city of Newton." "Our Community must bear a disproportionate share of MBTA costs, considering the scope and quality of service."

The mayor said he had directed the Planning Department to review the financial impact of the new formula upon the city.

Several skits and a brief description by Scoutmaster Jack Lane, of the troops recent trip to West Point, N.Y. capping off the evening.

TRAIL TIPS—An easy way to clean camp pots - Add a little water, a scoop of wood ashes, and let simmer. The grease in the pans combines with the lye in the ashes to form a fnatural soap. Have you got a TRAIL TIP that may be helpful to a fellow Scouter? Maybe something you learned the hard way or just stumbled on to. Just jot it down on a piece of paper, drop it off at Council and we'll pass it along by way of this column.

Photography Post 520 is to congratulated on the splendid display they presented on the weekend of April 26-27. This was the second such exhibition by the Post, now in it's fourth year of existence. Many of the photos were outstanding and none of them less than great. The manner in which the display was set up was very creative and imaginative. Refreshments were served and all present seemed to be impressed by the work of these young "shutter bug" Explorers. Again, congratulations to the entire Post and to Scott Wayne, post president and Joanne Cappello, chairman of the open house exhibit.

DENVER TOURS

NEW YORK (UPI) — John Denver's spring tour will encompass 41 performances in 32 cities, including six special midnight performances.

The popular performer had to add the midnight shows to his tour because the demand for tickets exceeded all expectations, according to his manager, Jerry Weintraub.

Compare & Save

Compare CONVENIENCE vs. HOME-PREPARED products. In buying convenience products - 'instant' dinners and the like, remember you are paying for someone else's labor to prepare and package the product. Decide whether it would be better to prepare the same food at home from scratch.

Compare COST PER SERVING rather than cost per pound. The amount of fat and bone in meat cuts, for example, varies greatly. A meat which appears to be high in cost on a per lb. basis, may be the most economical because it has little bone or other waste.

Compare FOOD VALUE: Cheaper cuts of meat are just as nutritious as the more expensive cuts. Lower grades of canned goods are equally nutritious.

May is Mental Health Month

May is Mental Health Month and the Newton Mental Health Association is celebrating the successful completion of a full year of active service and growth since its reorganization last year.

A multi-disciplinary quality review team from the Department of Mental Health and recently evaluated all the services in the Newton-Wellesley-Weston Area and reported the following:

"The strong leadership of Dr. Elizabeth Herman of Newton Guidance Clinic was impressive. The clinic, with its relatively small staff, uses a wide variety of treatment modalities in the care of large numbers of consumers."

On May 7 at 9 a.m. over WNTN Dr. Herman and Barbara Rubin, president of the Newton Mental Health Association, will be interviewed.

May 10, official representatives from Newton, Wellesley and Weston have been invited to take a bus tour to visit all the agencies they fund co-jointly under the Newton-Wellesley-Weston Area Plan.

May 17 at 10 a.m. a garage sale and raffle on the grounds of the Newton Guidance Clinic, 64 Eldredge St., Newton (will be held. Escape weekend at the Marriott Hotel and dozens of gift certificates from local merchants and restaurants are offered.

May 20th, the Newton Mental Health Association annual meeting will be held.

The program at 7:45 p.m. is "'Normal' Sexual Behavior — Pre-School thru High School; Changing Attitudes." Dr. Elizabeth Herman will be the lead-off speaker and then small discussion groups will form focusing on different age levels.

The meeting is open to the public and more information may be obtained by calling 969-4925.

"Women on Wheels" at Silver Lake Dodge

The "Women on Wheels" program, a series of four weekly sessions, created by Chrysler Motors Corporation to acquaint women drivers with the mechanics of their car — how it stops and goes — ways to keep it safe and dependable — how to handle emergency road situations, at Silver Lake Dodge, 444 Watertown street, Newton.

During the sessions, women students will be instructed in the use of basic tools to perform simple checks and inspections. They will also learn the operating principles of the engine and driveline, electrical systems, fuel and brakes, and a wrap-up session will cover driving safety and preventive maintenance.

The entire course is presented in easy-to-understand terms with minimum tenchnical language. Rather, emphasis is placed on "Show, Tell, and Touch" demonstrations with students participating whenever practical, to better learn through doing. Students are also encouraged to ask questions and present any problems that come to mind.

The first meetings of W.O.W. will be held on Thursday, May 8 at 7 p.m. and should be over by 9 p.m. The course will be continued on the following three Thursdays, May 15, 22 and 29. At graduation women will receive a diploma from the president of Silver Lake Dodge, Herb Abrahamson. There will be a cocktail party at this time. These meetings will be held in the showroom of Silver Lake Dodge.

Come let us reason together

By DR. WILLIAM KNOX
"DO ...BE...LOVE"

Many people have come up with various definitions of success and happiness. This one strikes me as very valid. Since I've tried it and find it works, I pass it along to you. "Do something . . . be someone . . . love someone."

First . . . "Do something". This means doing something that makes us feel good about ourselves . . . which gives us a sense of achievement . . . of fulfillment. The only real values are human values. What you do must do something for you . . . or for someone else, or it will have no vale to you. Own and care for a beautiful dog . . . you receive pleasure. Make ceramics . . . birdhouses . . . invent a new carburetor . . . anything that does something for you . . . or someone else. This includes the making of money. In our capitalistic society there is no substitute for maing money. You need that to feel good about yourself. So, "Do something".

More and more women are getting into the labor pool . . . because they need to "do something" in addition to keeping house. The venefits are great. Making beds . . . washing dishes . . . making sandwiches are all very necessary chores for family life. But they don't do much for a woman's personal development . . . nor do they make her feel very fulfilled as a person. Many women use the "children need me at home" as an excuse for not getting out into the active world to "do something" which counts for herself . . . and other people.

Secondly . . . "Be someone". Perhaps "doing something" is a means to the end of being someone. Be proud of yourself . . . not only your accomplishments. By "being someone" I don't mean an over-emphasis upon importance. . . or wealth . . . or position. I heard a doctor spoken of recently this way . . . "it's as though Jesus Christ has come into the hospital when he arrives". The reference was to his humility . . . his concern . . . his concern . . . his way of giving hope to ohter people. He was "being someone".

A tlephone operator went out of her way to help me recently to reach a patient who had called me. I don't know her name . . . but she is someone." These ordinary people are "being someone".

Thirdly . . . "Love someone" . . . We must always start with ourselves when we talk about loving, because if you don't love yourself you can't love anyone else. . . and I further believe that your capacity to love someone else is measured by the degree of love of yourself. "Love someone" starting with yourself.

If you love yourself you will find yourself compelled to love others . . . because that's the way love is. It's a way of life . . . a way of showing honest concern . . . giving support without making the other person weak . . . working together . . . playing together . . . sharing together, not because the other "needs" you as much as that you need to express love wisely and not become a victim of persons whose need is so desperate that you are pulled into their dilemma. That's not love . . . that masachism.

Do something . . . be someone . . . love someone . . . that's really what life is all about.

Buffet Saturday at Int'l Institute

On Saturday, May 4 at the International Institute, 287 Commonwealth avenue, Boston, an international buffet will be served at 6:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

There will be a complete dinner including dessert and beverage.

The Senior Advisory Council of the Institute whose members represent many nationalities sponsor this event annually. Miss Mary Stavrinos of Jamaica Plain is the Council chairman. The buffet chairman for this year's event is Mrs. John McKinnon of Peabody and her co-chairperson is Mrs. Roger J. Abizaid of Roslindale.

It is suggested that reservations be made by calling the Institute 536-1081. Preference for 6:30 or 7:30 p.m. should be specified.

The menu will include such dishes as Italian lasagne, Hungarian goulash, Albanian spinach, pie, Greek stuffed grape leaves and meat balls, Lithuanian cheese blintzes and potato loaf and Greek keftides.

All this plus entertainment.

The International Institute is a non-profit social service agency affiliated with the United Way of Massachusetts Bay.

Deadline for vehicle inspection is May 15

Supervisor of Vehicle Inspection Charles Mulhern reminds drivers that the compulsory motor vehicle inspection period has a little more than two weeks left in which to have vehicles inspected according to Massachusetts law.

The compulsory inspection period ends May 15. After that date, motor vehicles operating without the official sticker or with a rejection sticker on the windshield will not be allowed on the highways.

"Those who wait too long to present their vehicles for inspection may find stations unable to complete repair work before the end of the inspection period especially if required parts are difficult to obtain," Mulhern said as he advised drivers not to delay the inspection procedure.

The fee for a motor vehicle inspection is $2. Trailer inspection fee is still 50 cents. Rejected vehicles may be repaired anywhere the operator chooses. They will be re-inspected at no additional charge at the same station which issued the rejection sticker. Studded tires must be removed by May 1.

The registration certificate must be presented before inspection will be made and the plate number and vehicle identification number on it must match those on the vehicle.

It's time for ticking!

Ruth Lenson

A mother, shopping with her daughter, fretted about a pair of faded, rumpled jeans lying on the floor in the sports department.

"Look at that," she confided to the salesgirl, "someone took brand new jeans and left these old one on the floor!"

Smiling, the clerk explained that the "old" jeans were brand new and were so much in demand the department was selling thousands of them weekly.

Sometimes called "the uniform of the teens" denim continues to be the hottest fabric on the market. Until recently it was starchy and unbending requiring quite a bit of presoaking and bleaching. A messy, often times impossible task. Jean enthusiasts found that heavy denim posed other problems — when tumble-dried they were left shrunken and badly wrinkled.

Consumers let it be known that they would like to buy their jeans pre-washed and pre-faded without going through the bleaching, washing routine.

And now, 500 years since the first denim fabric appeared in Nimes, France, denim mills are turning out thousands and thousands of yards of soft, indigo blue pre-laundered denims.

According to manufacturers, the fabric is sent to industrial laundries to be washed and faded, and through this procedure adds up to two dollars to the ultimate retail price, it is well worth it when you consider that any item that survives the torture of going through an industrial laundry can take more punishment than the average wearer will give the garment under ordinary circumstances.

Embroidered, painted, studded — you name it, basic denims have proven to be the background for all do-it-yourself creators.

There are those who spend hours patching a jacket out of vintage denim pieces and can name the source of each square. One enterprising high school student bought Jann Johnson's The Jeans Book and, after following directions for making a duffel bag out of the discarded legs of her jeans, found the results professional enough to sew similar bags, selling them for $3 each. At this point there is a list of friends awaiting her efforts. If you're looking for a similar hobby, here are the directions:

Jann calls it
"MY ROSE DUFFEL BAG

You can make your duffle bag from the discarded leg of your cutoffs by stitching one end closed.

Cut two pieces, each 28" long and 14" wide. Transfer the design (the book offers one, but you can trace one of your own from a photo or drawing of a rose) to one piece of the denim, leaving ample room around it to show the design off. The rose is embroidered entirely in cross-stitch, in three shades of red and pink. The leaves and stem are done in two shades of green.

After you have finished embroidering the design, with right sides of material facing each other, machine stitch both pieces together on two long and bottom side, leaving a ¼" seam allowance, and rounding the corners. Then turn the bag right side out and press it. Fold under 4" at the top to make a hem.

The handle is a piece of nylon rope (obtainable at the dime store). It is 56" long. Don't get scratchy hemp rope; it will cut into your shoulder when you wear the bag. To make the handle, about 5" from the top of the bag lay the rope in a circle with the two rope ends meeting in the very center of the bag front, forming a 3½" loop on one side and a 52½" loop on the other. Using a heavy embroidery needle and four strands of nylon thread, tack the 3½" loop FIRMLY into place at the ends. I ran the needle through the cord and into the fabric again and again, writes Jann, until I was certain the ends were secured. Then, as a handsome finish, using all 6 strands of red cotton embroider thread, do a large satin stitch over both strands of the handle to cover up the ends and the tacking stitches. Finish off the dge of the top of the bag in red cross stitch. (If you don't want to embroider, an applique or even acrylic paint will give you an outstanding pattern.)

The newest denim look is ticking — yes, the same fabric that was once used primarily for mattresses. If you saw a dress made of ticking hanging in a second hand shop, you would imagine that some enterprising person had used this unlovely material out of sheer desperation.

But no, you'll see ticking everywhere in high fashion dresses, skirts, pantsuits. They call it a "now-look" and can be found combined with art decco or gay floral prints.

Designer Albert Capraro, the designer chosen by Mrs. Betty Ford, uses brown and white twin ticking for a three piece suit. The slim front slit skirt is edged in bias, and is worn with a chocolate brown short sleeve jersey blouse with a scooped neckline under a loose deep-cuffed jacket.

The message comes on loud and clear. Wearing denim and denim ticking gives you the comfortable non-dressy feeling — so, even if you have to buy it new, it's "in" to have it look and feel old.

Albert Capraro's brown and white three-piece suit

RUTH LENSON

Yes, yes, we know. It isn't good for your figure. . . it's sinfully rich. . . and if you're trying to lose weight it will surely bring on an attack of guilty conscience, but who can resist a slice of elegant cheesecake?

You must admit it's mighty good for your taste buds and if you only indulge yourself once in a while in such a scrumptious calorie-laden dessert, you can blame it all on your celebration of the coming of Spring!

Well, if you're going to eat cheesecake, it may as well be the richest, creamiest, most delectable one to be had. (We'll also include one for dieters). Those who have the time can concoct the recipe that calls for baking; we will also include a recipe for cooks who would like to whip one up in minutes, the modern no-bake way.

And now, Cheesecake Lovers, this column is dedicated to you!

FRUIT-TOPPED CHEESECAKE

1 cup skim milk
4 eggs
2 envelopes unflavored gelatine
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 pounds cream-style cottage cheese, sieved or well blended
1 container frozen blueberries (or other topping listed below)
¼ cup melted apple or current jelly (optional)

Pour milk into top of double boiler. Beat in eggs until well-combined. Mix gelatine and sugar, stir into milk-egg mixture. Cook over boiling water, stirring constantly, until gelatine is dissolved and mixture has thickened, 10 to 15 minutes. Remove from heat and cool slightly. Stir vanilla into sieved cottage cheese; mix well. Stir in custard mixture; mix well. Pour into 8 inch spring form pans. Chill until almost firm. Cover top of cheesecake with blueberries (or, if desired, cover with applesauce or dark sweet cherry topping–see below). Chill at least 1 hour longer and at serving time, remove side of pan and place cheesecake on serving platter. If cake is to stand a while, spoon melted helly over blueberries to glaze. Makes about 10 servings.

APPLESAUCE TOPPING

1 jar (15 oz.) applesauce
1 teaspoon cornstarch
½ teaspoon cinnamon

Pour about ¼ cup applesauce into a saucepan. Stir in cornstarch until smooth. Stir in rest of applesauce and cinnamon; cook over medium heat, stirring until mixture comes to boil; cook 1 minute longer. Remove from heat and cool 15 minutes spoon over cheesecake and chill.

DARK SWEET CHERRY TOPPING

Drain syrup from jar (14½ oz.) pitted dark sweet cherries into saucepan. Stir in 1 teaspoon cornstarch; bring to boil, stirring constantly. Cook 1 minute longer. Arrange drained cherries on top of cheesecake and spoon ¼ cup thickened syrup over cherries. Chill. Serve remainder of syrup at serving time.

QUICK 'N EASY LEMON CHEESECAKE

2 cups milk
1 pkg. (8 oz.) cream cheese, softened
1 pkg. (3¾ oz.) instant lemon pudding
1 9-inch graham cracker pie shell ready made or from packaged crumbs
Mandarin orange segments

Gradually add milk to softened cream cheese, mixing until well blended. Add pudding mix and beat for 1 minute. Pour into crust and chill. Garnish top with mandarin segments. Serves 8.

MARBLED PINEAPPLE CHEESECAKE

1 baked crumb crust (below)
1 can (1 lb. 4 oz.) crushed pineapple
2 squares (1 oz. ea.) unsweetened chocolate, melted
3 pkgs. (8 oz. each) cream cheese
2 teaspoons vanilla
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup sugar
4 large eggs

Bake crumb crust (see below). Preheat oven to 300 degrees. Drain pineapple THOROUGHLY, pressing out syrup. Melt chocolate; blend cream cheese with vanilla and salt. Gradually beat in sugar. Beat in eggs, one at a time. Continue beating until smooth. Stir in drained pineapple. Divide mixture in two parts. Stir melted chocolate into one portion; alternating light and chocolate mixture, spoon into baked crumb crust. Draw a knife through mixture once or twice to marble. Bake for 1¼ hours or until set in center. Allow to cool with oven door open. Chill. Decorate with puffs of whipped sweet cream or sour cream. Makes a 9" cake.

BAKED CRUMB CRUST

1 cup fine graham cracker crumbs
2 tablespoons sugar
3 tablespoons melted butter or margarine

Preheat oven to 375 degrees; mix together cracker crumbs, sugar and butter. Press firmly into bottom of 9-inch spring-form pan; bake 7 minutes. Cool.

Recently, at a dinner party, we enjoyed a most unusual, delicate appetizer that drew raves from everyone. Our hostess, Dr. Harriet Annis, graciously sent us her recipe for Sweet and Sour Fish—we share it with you.

SWEET AND SOUR FISH (SALMON OR OTHER)

2½ to 3 pounds fish
1½ cups sugar
1 cup vinegar
3 cloves
½ cup seedless raisins
1 small onion, sliced thin
1 lemon, sliced thin
1 bay leaf

Cover fish with salt for 1 hour, then drain. Cook other ingredients together for 15 minutes. Add slices of fish and cook at medium-low heat for one-half hour or until done (not broken). Remove fish to platter on which it is to be served. Melt ½ cup sugar in skillet until brown. Dissolve 2 tablespoons flour in cold water and stir into boiling liquid in which fish was cooked. Add browned sugar. (Gingersnaps or slice of rye bread may be used for thickening instead of flour). Pour liquid over fish and serve hot or cold. (We were served this dish cold—delicious.)

Question: I am planning a luncheon and would like to serve a salmon souffle, using canned salmon (pink salmon would be fine). Thank you.

Mrs. W.P., Walpole

Answer: You'll find this souffle a "light and lovely" main dish, served with a crisp green salad, tiny green peas and hot buttered rolls.

SALMON SOUFFLE

1 can (15½ oz.) pink salmon (drain and reserve liquid)
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
3 tablespoons flour
1 cup liquid (salmon liquid plus milk)
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley
3 egg yolks
3 egg whites

Preheat oven to 425 degrees. Melt butter; add flour and blend until smooth. Add liquid slowly and stir to blend. Add salt, pepper and parsley. Return to moderate heat and stir constantly until boiling, thickened and smooth. (Using a wire whisk is advisable to avoid lumps.) In medium bowl, beat yolks until thick and pale lemon in color. Pour about ½ of the hot mixture into eggs and return to saucepan; bring to boil, stirring constantly. Beat egg whites until stiff; fold gently but thoroughly into salmon mixture. Pour into well buttered souffle dish or high sided casserole. Bake for 10 minutes longer or until set. Serve immediately. Serves 6.

Our thanks to Mrs. James Brown for sending in a favorite dessert recipe.

VIENNESE FRUIT PUDDING

3 eggs, separated
One-third cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
3 cups cooked medium noodles
½ cup golden raisins
1 large apple (preferable tart) peeled, cored and chopped
½ cup chopped walnuts
4 tablespoons melted butter or margarine

Beat egg yolks with sugar until fluffy. Blend in cinnamon and nutmeg. Add cooked noodles, raisins, apples, nuts and melted butter. Beat egg whites until stiff; gently fold into noodles mixture and turn into well buttered deep baking dish. Bake in preheated 375 degree oven for 45 to 50 minutes. Serve immediately. (If desired, serve with lemon sauce.)

Question: Would you please print a recipe for Sauerbraten. Though my parents and grandparents come from Germany, I have never prepared this dish and would appreciate the recipe. Thanks.

Mrs. J.W.M., Dedham

SAUERBRATEN

4 pounds rolled beef rump roast
2 teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon pepper
1½ cups cider vinegar
3 cups water
2 medium onions, sliced
1 medium carrot, sliced
1 medium stalk celery, chopped
4 whole cloves
4 whole peppercorns
2 bay leaves
Cooking oil
One-third cup butter or margarine
¼ cup flour
1 tablespoon sugar
8 gingersnaps, rolled into fine crumbs
Noodles

Rub meat with salt and pepper. Place in glass bowl. Combine vinegar, water, onions, carrot, celery, cloves, peppercorns and bay leaves. Pour over meat. Refrigerate, covered for 48 hours. On the third day, remove meat from marinade. Drain well. Reserve marinade. Brown meat on all sides in small amount of cooking oil in dutch oven. Pour off excess grease. Strain marinade. Discard vegetables and pour marinade over meat. Bring to boil; reduce heat and simmer, covered 2½ hours or until meat is tender. Remove meat from pan. Strain cooking liquid. Refrigerate cooking liquid until fat rises to top. Remove fat, melt butter; add flour and sugar. Cook a few minutes over moderate heat, stirring. Add strained marinade; add gingersnaps. Mix well. Slice meat. Add to gravy. Bring to boil, reduce heat and simmer, covered about 15 minutes. Serve with hot noodles. Serves 8-10.

John and Sandy Deming

Demings star in one-act comedy

In a neat bit of casting virtuosity, Newton Country Players' director Danny Kosow of Chestnut Hill has selected the husband-wife team of John and Sandy Deming of Newton Highlands to portray the wayward suitor and the woman scorned in Tom Stoppard's farce, "The Real Inspector Hound."

Under the overall banner of "An Evening of Outrageous Comedy," the Players' spring production is paired with a second one-act play, Murray Schisgal's hilarious romp "Dr. Fish," directed by F. Abbot Baker of South Natick.

Performances of the twin-bill are slated for Saturday and Sunday, May 17 and 18, and Friday and Saturday, May 23 and 24, at the Rebecca Pomroy Playhouse, 84 Eldredge St., Newton. The production will be staged cabaret-style, with tables and chairs.

After serving as stage manager of last Fall's musical offering "Pal Joey" an essaying the role of La Poncia in the mid-winter showing of "The House of Bernard Alba," Sandy Deming is cast as Felicity in the current vehicle. Last Spring, she portrayed the multiple roles of Helena, Kate and Olivia in "Eve's Complaint" at Newton Springfest '74 and at the New England Theatre Conference Drama Festival at Brandeis University.

Cast in the role of Simon Gascoyne, John Deming returns to the stage for the initial time this year, having portrayed Brindsley Miller in "Black Comedy" last season and executing all the male roles in "Eve's Complaint," both at Springfest '74 and at the NETC Drama Festival.

Producers of the twin-bill are Linda Pandolfe of West Newton and Paula Finkle of Brookline. For further information concerning theatre party sponsorship or individual membership, phone Jim Sloane at 969-2665 or write P.O. Box 9, Newton Centre, 02159.

Recreation notes . . .

Department created by 1912 ordinance

On March 18, 1912, the Board of Aldermen passed Order No. 36981, which provided that a playground Commission be established by Ordinance of said City of Newton.

Thus began the department which today is responsible for the development, maintenance and programming of 29 supervised playgrounds, 66 tennis courts, 18 baseball diamonds, 17 outdoor basketball courts, 37 softball diamonds, and innumerable activities. Mr. Ernste Hermann was the first superintendent of our present day Recreation Department.

Early in January of 1974, the Mayor and Board of Aldermen were made aware that they would be seeking a new Recreation Commission shortly. Within a short period of time, it became quite evident that a Newton native, Russell J. Halloran was the man they were seeking. Educated at Carr School, F.A. Day Junior High, and graduating from Newton High in 1956, he continued his education on a baseball-basketball scholarship at the University of Connecticut. Transferring to Boston University in his junior year, he received his B.S. and Master's Degree in Community Recreation.

While attending the University of Connecticut, he met the daughter of a former Newton resident by the name of Mary Fitzpatrick, who came to Newton and attended St. Bernard's parochial school in West Newton. They are the parents of seven children, all students: Mary, 16; Marjorie, 14; Lisa, 12; Colleen, 11; Amy, 9; James, 8; and John, 5.

He was signed by the late Neil Mahoney of the Boston Red Sox, and went to spring training three consecutive years playing minor league ball during each of these seasons. During the off season, he was assistant director of the West Newton Community Center, and in 1961 became recreation director for the Town of Concord. In 1962, he was appointed assistant superintendent of recreation for the Town of Wellesley, and assumed the superintendent's position in 1963, which he held for 5 years.

Leaving Wellesley in 1968, he was appointed business manager, teacher, coach and guidance counselor at the Rivers Country Day School of Weston, until assuming the duties of Recreation Commissioner in Newton on July 1, 1974.

Leaving Wellesley in 1968, he was appointed business manager, teacher, coach and guidance counselor at the Rivers Country Day School of Weston, until assuming the duties of Recreation Commissioner in Newton on July 1, 1974.

His affiliations consist of: member of the Concord Recreation Commission for the past 5 years; executive board member of the Massachusetts Parks and Recreation Association; vice-president of the Massachusetts Association for Health and Physical Education; past member of the Wellesley Junior Chamber of Commerce; member of the Concord Lodge of Elks and the Knights of Columbus.

He promises quality with economy, together with a complete diversified program of leisure activities for youngsters, teenagers, adults, and senior citizens. "I am most pleased to be back working among my many friends in the Garden City and will do my utmost to cooperate with all concerned in making Newton a leader in the field of recreation."

This completes a brief resume over the past eight weeks of each Commission member.

Boughan's satellite to check 'black holes'

A Newton man was project engineer for a satellite whcih will provide important evidence about the existence or nonexistence of "black holes" in space.

Edward A. Boughan, of 7 Regina Ter., Newton, a staff member of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology's Center for Space Research, was project engineer for the satellite which has arrived safely at the San Marco Platform off the coast of Kenya, from which it is scheduled to be launched May 7.

The satellite, called the Small Astronomy Satellite C, or SAS-C, is of great interest to x-ray astronomers because its instruments will be able to map the positions of x-ray sources, and variations in the intensity of their x-ray emissions, far more precisely than has been done before.

M.I.T. researchers, have primary responsibility for the operation of the satellite, and for analyzing its data.

The spacecraft half of the satellite was built at the Applied Physics Laboratory of Johns Hopkins University. SAS-C is funded by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration Goddard Space Flight Center.

The most glamorous of the x-ray sources the satellite will study are sources many scientists believe to be black holes—eternally collapsing stars of condensed matter so massive and compact that no radiation can escape their gravitational fields.

Some scientists believe that matter falling into black holes should exhibit extremely brief and intense pulses of x-rays. SAS-C is specially equipped to search for such pulses.

The satellite is being launched from Kenya, which is on the equator, so that its orbit can avoid the Van Allen Radiation Belts. These are belts of charged particles trapped in the magnetic field around the earth, which would mask the x-ray signals in the detectors.

The satellite is only two and a half feet in diameter, although its solar panels—paddles that use solar energy to generate electricity to run the satellite—are about 17 feet across.

Robert Sage elected treasurer of newly formed tourist bureau

Robert Sage of Newton has been elected treasurer of the newly formed Greater Boston Convention and Tourist Bureau, Inc.

Sage, president of the Fenway Motor Hotels, is a trustee and past president of the Massachusetts Women's Hospital, a trustee of the Jewish Memorial Hospital and a director of the American Hotel & Motel Association.

At a news conference, bureau directors announced plans to double the number of tourists and the city's annual convention business in five years.

Board Chairman Thomas McNamara, manager of the Statler Hilton Hotel said that while other cities have shown dramatic increases in the number of visitors and revenues, Boston has remained static during the past years.

The bureau, established Feb. 1, has five professional employees whose sole responsibility is to promote Greater Boston's tourist and convention attractions and facilities.

Sage said that the initial operating budget is $220,000, which is 50 per cent greater than last year's budget. Sage reported that $75,000 has already been raised. During the first nine months of operation, the Bureau will concentrate on raising the remaining $145,000, contributed by members of the business community including airlines, banks,

NOISE POLLUTION

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — If you regularly suffer from a throbbing headache, frayed nerves or even a flareup of peptic ulcer, you may be a victim of noise pollution, says the Texas Health Department.

Health authorities said noise can cause bodily harm besides deafness. Some doctors think there is a direct link between noise and heart disease, peptic ulcer, colitis, high blood pressure and migraine.

Stamp Museum

The Spellman Philatelic Museum, located on the campus of Regis College, Weston, which opened May 4, 1963, and since then has hosted some 35,000 visitors, is believed to be the first building in the world designed specifically as a stamp museum.

To launch "send-a-stamp" drive

The Spellman Philatelic Museum's new "Send-A-Stamp" campaign is to acquaint more stamp collectors with the unique facilities of the only museum in the United States devoted entirely to philately.

Located on the campus of Regis College, Weston, Massachusetts, the museum is housed in a modern, two-story building to be the first in the world designed specifically as a stamp museum.

Since its opening on May 4, 1963, the museum has hosted some 35,000 visitors from many countries. It is hoped thah the new campaign will greatly increase this number.

One of the highlights of any visit to the museum is an official United States Post Office contained in a replica of an old-fashioned country store. A large exhibition gallery, an 8,000 volume library, offices and reading rooms complete the facilities on the entrance floor.

The ground floor is divided into two large rooms for meetings, a kitchen, graphic arts area with photo lab and print shop, and a security vault to protect the main collection of more than 300,000 postage stamps and covers from all over the world.

Since its opening the museum has become a focal point for a number of local clubs, as well as a center for meetings such as the national convention of the American Air Mail Society and the American Topical Association. For the past five years adult courses in philately have been given. A young people's program has now been added.

Under the "Send-A-Stamp" program, the museum will forward an information folder on its history and activities to all who send an unused 10c U.S. stamp. Your stamp will be postmarked at the museum and returned with the packet of information, including a copy of the museum's most recent newsletter to members.

To learn mor about the only museum in the United States devoted entirely to stamp collecting, and how it came to be, "Send-A-Stamp" to Fidelma Conway, Director, Spellman Philatelic Museum, Weston, Massachusetts 02192.

Sheepshearing to be re-created At Old Sturbridge Village

STURBRIDGE, Mass.—Sheepshearing, the first step in the springtime in the production of wool cloth 150 years ago in rural New England, will be re-created from May 17 to June 8 at Old Sturbridge Village.

To Americans in the young nation, there were many steps to be accomplished in this laborious, year-round process.

Old Sturbridge Village, a living museum of the everyday world of rural New England five or six generations ago, interprets the entire cycle of this work process—from raising the sheep to weaving the cloth.

Each morning visitors to the Village can watch up close as authentically-costumed interpreters shear sheep, using methods from the early 19th-century. Visitors may talk with interpreters about the significance of this work and compare the method of early American wool cloth production with what they know about how this is done today. The comparison will show substantial change has taken place since the early days of the Republic.

There were two main types of sheep in New England. The so-called native sheep was a result of indiscriminate breeding practices in America. The Merino sheep, a superior Spanish breed, yielded wool that was longer, finer and generally of better quality than that of the native. The native produced one-and-one half to three pounds of wool annually, while the Merino fleece weighed an average of three to four pounds. Today, improved breeds produce from eight to 12 pounds of wool.

At Old Sturbridge Village, a careful breeding program is producing sheep tht are similar to the native and Merino breeds, so in the shearing demonstrations visitors will see animals that are less wooly than modern sheep.

During shearing the sheep is placed on his hind quarters. Not a particularly uncomfortable position for the animal, it nevertheless hinders his breathing just enough to cause him to remain fairly calm throughout the procedure.

The shearer clips the wool around the neck, progressing to the stomach, sides, and down the back—all the while rolling the fleece as he goes—until he has sheared the entire sheep. The fleece is rolled up and stored until needed.

Next is the sorting of the wool by quality, after which it can be washed. Some historical sources recommend washing the wool before shearing by running the sheep throughout a stream or pond. Others suggest washing the sheared wool in large cauldrons containing a solution of urine and water.

Since anti-pollution laws now prohibit the washing of animals in an open stream, Village interpreters use the latter method of washing wool.

Carding is a process to comb or brush the wool in one direction. During the years after the Revolution, it could either be done at home using hand cards or at a carding mill. Both methods are demonstrated at Old Sturbridge Village.

Carding machines, increasingly widespread in America after 1800, were capable of doing in five minutes what it oook a woman using hand cards a full day to accomplish. An important technological advance, the carding mill served to separate farmers from direct involvement in part of their work. Subsequently, the Industrial Revolution would extend and complicate this early separation of man and his work.

The carding mill at Old Sturbridge Village demonstrates the use of a mechanical picker, a batt card that processes wool into sheets of batting, and a roll card that forms rolls to be used in spinning.

Spinning the rolls of wool into thread used to be a year-round activity. It took about a week to spin enough thread for one day's weaving.

The Village, which is open year-round, is a nonprofit, educational institution that re-creates life in a rural New England village between 1790 and 1840. It is located on Route 20 near the intersection of Interstates 86 and 90 (Massachusetts Turnpike).

The Village is open daily from 9:30 to 5:30. There is an admission charge.

High school "drop outs" who are veterans can benefit from GI bill

Veterans and military service personnel who dropped out of high school will benefit from recent GI Bill increases when they enroll in "catch up" training program, the Veterans Administration reported today.

Educational allowances averaging 23 per cent higher are now payable to Vietnam-era veterans who take advantage of a unique provision permitting them to complete high school or refresher courses and not have the payments charged against their basic GI Bill entitlement.

Nearly 650,000 educationally disadvantage veterans have used the GI Bill of whom 390,000 have used "free" time, according to VA.

A single veteran enrolled in the program full time receives $270 monthly. Rates are higher with dependents.

Persons eligible for "catch up" benefits include anyone who did not complete four years of high school or who does not have an equivalency certificate. High school graduates may also use the program if they need additional courses to qualify for higher education.

VA officials cite several reasons for growing interest in the "free entitlement" provision. Among these are outreach efforts by campus-bases VA counselors who contact and encourage educationally disadvantaged veterans to use the program. The obvious need for higher education and training levels among job seekers is also considered an important factor.

Veterans interested in GI Bill information are urged to contact any VA office or representatives of veterans service organizations.

Hospitalization at 15 cents a day

You only have to pay 15 cents a day for your hospitalization and if you can't afford to pay your hospital bill when you're discharged, you may do odd jobs in exchange for the care you have received.

Instead of patient charts and reams of medical records to be filled out by the doctors, the paperwork is considerably simpler with one sentence sometimes sufficing.

The speaker was Dr. Charles Thompson, a senior physician on the staff of Newton-Wellesley Hospital. He was not talking about patient care at Newton-Wellesley in his April address to the Hospital Aid Association, but rather about a mission hospital in Africa.

Last spring, he and his wife spent two months caring for patients at Mount Salinda Hospital in northwestern Rhodesia.

Although they only had seven weeks to prepare for their trip and had to travel 10,000 miles by air and more by train, bus and land rover once they reached Africa, Thompson and his wife reached their destination on time, and began assisting at the 85-bed hospital in the highlands.

The facility was relatively sophisticated, according to Thompson. It had a maternity ward, X-ray equipment, laboratory facilities, a tuberculosis sanatorium, a pediatric ward and even an orphanage for children who had lost their parents. The hospital was staffed by a female surgeon and Thompson, graduate nurses and student nurses (the mission hospital had its own school of nursing).

Thompson was particularly impressed with the capabilities of the nursing staff. They are given far greater responsibilities than American nurses and in many cases perform some of the duties a general practitioner usually does in this country - for example, delivering babies.

Besides the lower cost of being hospitalized in Rhodesia and the dearth of recordkeeping, there were other significant differences at the mission hospital.

Food for patients was often prepared by their own relatives in a cook shack outside the hospital, for instance, and if a patient died in the facility, the hospital took the responsibility for his or her children.

The most frequently treated maladies in Rhodesia, said Dr. Thompson, are malaria and other parasitic diseases, anemia, starvation and tropical ulcers. Often malnutrition and respiratory infection are complicated by malaria and anemia so that the hospital must treat more than one major ailment simultaneously, he said.

Another difference between America and African hospitals is the diversity of personnel. Thompson said the hospital's ambulance driver was also the dentist, the X-ray technician and the laboratory technologist!

Thompson's talk was accompanied by a slide presentation and was delivered to an estimated 150 members of the Aid Association. He and his wife are long-time residents of Newton. He started his career at Newton-Wellesley in 1941 as a laboratory technician; his wife, a graduate of Lasell Junior College, worked for several years in the medical records department of the hospital.

Conservators honor Helen Heyn

Helen Heyn was honored last week at a surprise dinner meeting by the Newton Conservators Inc. for her many years of efforts on behalf of conservation and environmental appreciation in Newton.

Mrs. Heyn has been secretary of the Charles River Watershed Association and of the Newton Conservators, Inc. and is presently a board member of the Newton Conservators and serves as secretary of the Newton Conservation Commission.

A nine foot top-grafted Korean lilac, Syringa palibiniana often known as the Meyer lilac was presented to her at the dinner. This tree blossoms lilac-pink in May, has small dark-green leaves in summer, and has coppery foliage in autumn.

The Meyer lilac is named after Frank N. Meyer, a plant explorer for the U.S. Bureau of Plant Introductions through the mountains and deserts of Asia from the Caucasus to China. This lilac was one of his horticultural discoveries on a nearly barren hillside in Korea.

Frank Meyer had a keen eye for recognizing and appraising the gems of native vegetation. In his honor the Meyer Medal, the highest world-wide recognized medal for plant introduction and germplasm conservation is given to meritorious plantsmen, but the highest honor to this plant explorer is his many discoveries and preservations that grace our fields and gardens.

This unique dwarf lilac was presented to Helen Heyn as a symbol of thanks for her discoveries and preservations for us here in Newton.

Newton North nine keeps rolling on

Three victories push record to 8-0 mark

By RON MacLEAN
Sports Correspondent

NEWTON — The Newton North High baseball team rolls on.

The Tigers won three more games, scoring 23 runs on 28 hits in the process. Newton tore apart Quincy 12-0 on April 21, beat North Quincy 7-3 on April 23, and overpowered Brockton 4-1 April 25.

The Tigers upped their record to 8-0 by beating the Brockton Boxers with nearly flawless baseball.

Jack Ryan had three hits and Bobby Kinsella had two hits and two RBI's to lead the 9 hit attack.

After two scoreless innings, Newton broke the ice with three runs in the third. Pitcher John Carey led off with a walk, and first baseman Steve DiBenidetto singled him to second.

Centerfielder Ryan then hit a one out single to load the bases for cleanup hitter Bob Vona. The Tiger third baseman hit a single to right to score Carey and give the Tigers a 1-0 lead.

Kinsella came up and laced a single to center to score two runs.

Carey had trouble in the bottom of the third inning, as the Boxers loaded the bases with one out. Carey was removed at this point after giving up five walks and only one hit in 2 1-3 innings.

Junior Steve Cononico came on and got the side out on a popout and a flyout. Cononico yielded the Boxers lone run on two hits in the fifth, but the Tigers got it back in the top of the seventh.

Dibenidetto accounted for the run with a little help from Brockton pitcher Peter Columbo. Dibenidetto smacked a triple to left and scored when Columbo's pick off attempt went wild.

Cononico picked up the win, his second of the year, pitching 3 2-3 innings and yielding one run on four hits. Ed Aucoin pitched the final inning for the save.

Kinsella and Dibenidetto each had two hits and Ryan was three for four to boost his average to .577, .632 in league play.

Newton North 7
North Quincy 3

The Tigers needed a three run sixth inning rally to insure victory against the Red Raiders.

The game started out looking like a romp as Newton jumped out to a 3-0 first inning lead off Raider pitcher Tim Clifford.

Walks to Steve Dibenidetto and Jack Ryan put runners on first and second with one out and Bob Vona up. Vona singled to left center to load the bases and Bob Kinsella walked to force in a run.

Shortstop Bob Cummingham went out and the bases were still loaded for second baseman Mike Tocci. Tocci grounded a single up the middle for two runs and a 3-0 lead.

Tiger pitcher Ed Aucoin kept North Quincy in check until the top of the third inning. With one out, Dennis Maguire and John Lawlor sandwiched walks around a Steve McKinnon single to load the bases.

Cooper Jordon then hit a two run single and Frank Miceli singled to tie the game at 3-3. Rich Magnereli hit into a double play to end the inning.

The Tigers scored the winning run in the fifth. Walks to Jim Visakis, Ryan, and a Kinsella single loaded the bases and Cunningham walked to force in the run.

The Red Raiders got only one hit in the first four innings and Newton put the game away in the sixth. Rich Hunt singled and Aucoin sacrificed him to second.

DiBenidetto walked, Visakis was hit by a pitch and Ryan hit a two-run, bases loaded single. Vona walked and Kinsella hit a sacrifice fly for the 7-2 final.

Newton's best weapon in this game seemed to be the two-run single. Jack Ryan, Mike Tocci, and Bob Kinsella each had one to account for six of the seven runs.

Quincy 0

The Tigers came up with a 12 run, 12 hit attack and Steve Cononico pitched a one-hitter for six innings to defeat the Presidents 12-0.

Two four run rallys, in the third and seventh innings, led the way for Newton.

In the third, Bob Bona had an rbi single, Bob Cunningham had a sacrifice fly, Mike Tocci had an rbi single, and Bob Kinsella scored on an error.

Pinch hitter Mike Nolan singled a run home in the seventh, Jack Ryan hit a two-run single and then scored on a error.

Jim Visakis had a double and Ryan hit a triple in the extra base hit department.

Vona went one for two with two rbi's and Ryan wnet three for four also with two rbi's. Eight of the nine starters had at least one hit and everyone had either a run or an rbi.

Cononico pitched six innings giving up only one hit, a sixth inning single to Mark Deluca. Matt Berry finished up getting a save.

Newton's record is now 6-0, 8-0 overall. Aside from Ryan's .577 average, other stars include: Bob Kinsella, batting .389 with five rbi's, Bob Vona, .333 with six rbi's.

Also, Jim Viaskis with seven runs scored, and Ryan with five runs and six rbi's.

Pitchers Ed Aucoin and Steve Cononico have stood out, Aucoin with two wins, one save and 19 strikeouts in 18 innings. Cononico is 2-0 and has only given up one run in 9 2-3 innings.

L.L. opens

The sum of the numbers on the back of these boys' uniforms doesn't even come close to the 300 boys and girls who are members of the Newton West Little League that opened its season Saturday at its refinished Lyon's Field on Commonwealth Avenue in Auburndale. (Williams Photo)

North tennis team tops Waltham, bows to Weston

By ERIC YAFFE
Sports Correspondent

NEWTON — The Newton North High boys' tennis team, after losing their first match of the season to Weston High, bounced back to roll past a strong Waltham club, 4 to 1 on Tuesday, April 22nd.

Newton's Suburgan League record now stands aat a solid 3-0, 3-1 overall.

Newton's Suburgan League record now stands at a solid 3-0, 3-1 overall.

The Tigers number one singles player, Neal Kravitz, just barely beat Greg Demeo of Waltham in the first set, 7-6. Kravitz won the match by winning the second set, 6-3.

Newton's second seed, John Kosa, easily beat his Waltham opponent, 6-3, 6-2.

The Hawks posted their only point in the third singles competition. Waltham's John Calahan, after losing the first set 6-3, came back in stylish fashion to defeat North's Joel Chrnov in the next two sets, 6-4, 6-4.

The Tigers swept both doubles matches. As sophomores Bill ZAni and Kevin Hinchey remained undefeated with a 6-3, 6-4 victory over Waltham's Rich Segein and Dave Hachey.

In the other doubles action, Newton North's Lincoln Frank and Mike Mitchell beat the Hawks first doubles combination in straight sets, 6-4, 6-4.

Bow To Weston

A day earlier the Tigers traveled to Weston on a cold, windy day. Weston proved too tough for Newton. Led by freshmen Mike Leach and Robbie Pease, the number one and three ranked fourteen year old tennis players in New England, the Wildcats tamed the Tigers, 4-1. Leach burned Kravitz in two sets 6-3, 6-1, while Pease handed Kosa a 6-3, 6-2 defeat.

Westwon took all three singles matches as Chuck Keder swept past Newton's Joel Chernov, 6-0, 6-3.

North's only win came when the second doubles team of Zani and Hinchey fought back after losing the first set, to beat the Wildcats comgination of Doug Marden and Chuck Levin 1-6, 6-4, 6-2.

Both the Tiger players and coaches felt tht the match's outcome may have been different if not for the cold and windy weather conditions which the netmen faced.

In earlier matches, Newton North had not trouble in defeating Suburgan League foes, North Quincy and Rindge Tech 5-0, 5-0.

The Tiger wins have come without the help of two top netmen in sophomore James Snider and junior Dave Medalie. Both players enjoyed a two week school field trip to Russia.

Newton North now has won a total of fifteen singles and doubles matches, while losing only five. The Tigers seem well on their way to a thirteenth consecutive Suburban League title.

Longshot has chance in Kentucky Derby

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Allen Jerkens scares other trainers and, for the first time in his brilliant 25-year career, they are going to be haunted by his presence in the Kentucky Derby.

Jerkens' reputation is the result of his propensity for winning races he has no right winning. Well, then, he fits very nicely into Saturday's 101st Kentucky Derby.

Hobeau Farms' Round Stake, who earned his Derby shot with a victory in Tuesday's $21,000 Derby Trial, certainly will be cast in an underdog role for the $125,000 1¼-mile classic. His erratic performance, which was nothing new, in the Trial assured that.

As jockey Mike Hole said after his mount's victory at the wire over Rushing Man, "this horse is developing a bad habit.

"You can see that from his last three or four races—he's winning by noses and heads because he pulls himself up when he takes the lead."

Immediately after the race, Jerkens said he would take his first shot at the Derby despite Round Stake's somewhat disappointing stretch run.

Rushing Man, loser by a head at the wire, also appears a probable starter for the Derby, setting up a likely field of 15. Sent off as a 3-10 favorite, Round Stake paid $2.60 after covering the mile in 1:36 2-5.

The esteem of other trainers for Jerkins was exhibited by Media's John Campo at the Derby trainers' dinner Tuesday night. The outspoken Campo took a shot at handicapping the Derby trainers. Hardly the shy type, he listed himself at 8-5. But Jerkens was 1-10.

A Derby Trial winner has not come back to win the Derby four days later since Tim Tam in 1958.

Asked about the proximity of the two races, Jerkens said, "it's probably too close for most horses but some can come back with an exceptional race. Look at Onion, he had run only four days before coming back to beat Secretariat."

That race is an excellent example why trainers of favorites don't sleep too well when going against Jerkens.

South nine defeat Weston 9 to 6

By MARK COOPER
Sports Correspondent

NEWTON- The Newton South baseball team suffered through a losing week, dropping games to Bedford 3-2 and Concord 3-2 while pulling out a victory over Weston, 9-6.

Chandler Bosworth, the ace Lion hurler, pitched a ballgame that was deserving of a win. Only weak hitting, particularl in the clutch, prevented South from defeating Bedford.

Mike Stockman, John Bamel and Greg Moan were the only Lion hitters who came through all day. Stockman drove home Bamel with the Lions' second run and third baseman Moan collected two hits. Bruce Jennings was a defensive standout at second base.

The Lions' bats came alive as the team clobbered Weston later on in the week, 9-6. The Lions scored five runs in the top of the first inning and added three more in the top of the second to salt the game away early. The game seemed all but over as far as Weston was concerned, but the Wildcats battled back and made a game of it, tallying four times in the third and fourth innings.

The powerful hitting attack was led by Bruce Jennings, John Bamel, Glenn Mackenzie, Mike Malkasian, Phil Small and Greg Moan, each of whom had at least one hit apiece. Of particular note was the excellent hitting and all-round play of junior Bruce Jennings and the combined pitching of Mike Stockman, who icked up his second win, and Tom Irvine, who did an excellent relief job.

The victory boosted the Lions' record to 3-3 and set the tage for the big game against Concord.

With Bosworth hurling brilliantly and the Concord pitcher doing likewise, it seemed as though no one would be able to "break the ice" and score.

Yet, in the top of the fourth inning, a hit batsman and two clean singles led to the undoing of the Lions as two Concord runners crossed the plate and the Patriots seemed to own an insurmountable 2-0 lead.

In the last half of the sixth inning the Lions, who had not hit effectively all day, finally got on the scoreboard when with two outs, Glenn Mackenzie, Phil Small, Greg Moan and Mike Malkasian combined to ignite a rally that sliced the Concord lead in half at 2-1.

Concord was able to strike once more, this time off reliever Tom Irvine, to up the score to 3-1.

The Lions bounced back as, following a strikeout, two walks to John Bamel and Dave Meinhart set the stage for Peter Castellano's line drive single that brought Bamel home from second base.

It was 3-2 at that point but did not change as the Lions' rally fell short and the team saw their season's record dip to 3 wins and 4 losses.

Almost halfway into the season the Lions already face a tough road in the quest to cop the DCL title. Concord and Bedford appear to be the top two teams in the League and unless the Lions can put it all together consistently and come out of their season long slump, the second half of the season could be longer thatn the first. The Lions' next game is Friday against Wayland at Newton South. All fans are urged to attend.

Wanted: coaches for spring soccer program

By RICH GROSSMAN
Sports zcorrespondent

Many people are unaware that there is a spring soccer league, still more don't know that the soccer league needs them. The amount of participants in spring soccer has grown, just four years ago Newton only had one team in the league while this year ten teams from Newton compete. Although the amount of participants has increased there is still a shortage of coaches and players.

Towns like Wellesley and Needham not only have spring teams but also have a fall soccer league apart from the school teams. They have so many people that they hold tryouts for their teams. Such us not the case in Newton.

Newton soccer enthusiast Clifford W. Crowther is looking for coaches. "We have excellent coaches, but they need help. If teams had several assistant coaches more kids could get individual training."

Coaches include Mike Staller and Mark Wasserman, both products of the Newton school system. Other coaches are Mike Higgenbottom, a British rugby player and Frank Bodengraven.

"We would like it to be possible for any soccer fan, whether player or coach, to be able to participate in soceer."

Coach Crowther also urges anyone who is interested to contact him in care of Weeks Junior High School where he is an English teacher.

Mass Bay Tritons keep on winning on diamond

The Mass Bay Community College baseball squad has played five games since Saturday and have upped their season's record to ten wins and only one loss.

The Tritons encountered a hustling Massasoit Community College team this past Saturday and suffered their first loss of the year in the top half of the doubleheader. Despite the Tritons breaking out to a 4-0 lead which saw Braintree's Steve Morgan slap a two run single up the middle.

Starting pitcher George Brazil of Cambridge left with men on 2nd and 3rd and was replaced by No. Reading's Steve Hartery who was greeted harshly by the Massasoit batters and left shortly with the game tied. Mark Dwyer of Quincy came on, but unfortunately allowed a couple more runs and took the loss. In the second game the Massasoit defense fell apart and Joe Bakunas of Dedham pitched superbly and earned Mass Bay the victory.

On Sunday, Tommy Poto of Randolph stymied Middlesex Community College and threw a two-hit shutout. The whole lineup for Mass Bay collected a hit apiece as seven runs came across the plate for the Tritons. In game two that day Mike Donais of Swansea and Diman Voke pitched a win as the Tritons scored nine times to Middlesex's three. Steve Rittenberg of Newton had two doubles, Bobby Angel of Millis had two hits and substitute catcher Joe Berkeley of Brighton rapped a single to center.

This past Tuesday, Mass Bay traveled to Franklin to take on undefeated Dean Jr. College and the result was — Dean became previously undefeated. Steve Hartery went the distance for Mass Bay and earned a rather easy 12-1 victory. Johnny Valeri of Arlington and Matignon continued his outstanding hitting by going three for three and walking once. However, the big story was Medford's Guy Martorana whose bat came alive for the first time this season. The slick fielding third baseman displayed some power as he hit a ground rule double and a home run.

The Tritons are currently second in the MCCAC East Division because of the loss to Massasoit. Cape Cod Community College is the current leader and the Tritons, after a Patriots Day doubleheader with North Shore Community College and another visit to Tufts next Thursday, head for the Cape on Saturday, April 26 and an important and decisive doubleheader with Cape Cod Community College.

MIT promotes 4 men to full professors

Four Newton residents, Jonathan Allen, Keith H. Johnson, and Donald R. Uhlmann, and Neil E. Todreas, were appointed to the position of full professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Jonathan Allen, a faculty member in the Department of Electrical Engineering and Computer Science, graduated from Dartmouth in 1956 and received the M.S. degree in 1957 from Dartmouth's Thayer School of Engineering.

He joined MIT in 1958 to begin work on his Ph.D.

He left in 1962 to become a member of the human factors research department at Bell Telephone Laboratories, where he remained until the fall of 1967. He subsequently returned to MIT and received his Ph.D. degree in June, 1968.

Widely known for his work in natural language processing, including speech synthesis and recognition, he was appointed assistant professor in 1968 and associate professor in 1972.

The text-to-speech system developed under his leadership in cooperation with MIT's Research Laboratory of Electronics formed the basis for his talking computer model of the human vocal tract which "speaks" human-sounding sentances.

Keith H. Johnson, a faculty member in the Department of Materials Science and Engineering, came to MIT as assistant professor in 1967, after two years of post-doctoral research at the University of Florida and an assistant professorship of physics at Drexel Institute of Technology.

He received the A. B. degree from Princeton University and the M.A. and Ph. D. degrees from Temple University.

Theoretical chemical physics and theoretical solid–state physics are the fields of research to which he has devoted the major part of his writing.

Donald R. Uhlmann, a member of the Department of

He received the B.S. in physics from Yale and the Ph.D. in applied physics from Harvard. He joined MIT's faculty as assistant professor of ceramics in 1965 after two and a half years as a post doctoral fellow at Harvard. In July, 1969, he was appointed associate professor of ceramics.

Uhlmann is a member of the National Academy of Sciences, an associate editor of "Materials Science and Engineering," and co-author with Dr. K. A. Jackson of the forthcoming book, "Fundamental Principles of Crystal Growth."

Neil E. Todreas, a faculty member of the Department of Nuclear Engineering, was first affiliated with MIT when he received his Sc.D. degree from the Institute in 1966 after graduation from Cornell in 1958 with a bachelor's and master's degree of mechanical engineering.

From 1958 to 1962 he was an officer in the Navy working on the design of nuclear propulsion plants in a joint arrangement with the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission. From 1965-70 he was senior reactor engineer in A.E.C.'s Division of Reactor Development and Technology.

He was appointed assistant professor of nuclear engineering in 1970 and associate professor in 1971.

People like Sam Peters need a real home

Lovett C. and Ruth Peters of 81 Old Orchard Rd., Newton, announce that almost half of the goal of $225,000 has been raised for The Charles River Association for Retarded Citizens to construct a home for multiply handicapped people.

Samuel Peters

Located on East Militia Heights in Needham, The Charles River Association for Retarded Citizens now offers a sheltered workshop for ambulatory retarded adults. The combination of residence-workshop for nonambulatory, retarded people is almost unique.

This pilot project can serve as an example to the country of what can be done for the partly retarded who can't walk. Currently more than 40 people are waiting to enter the building.

Since August of 1962, some 200 people have participated in the educational and rehabilitative program.

Sixty of these individuals have "graduated" into the self-respecting world of gainful employment.

These men and women hold a variety of jobs, such as dishwashers, delivery men, waitresses, chambermaids, and nursing home assistants.

Others, like Sam Peters of Newton, are so handicapped that they probably will never be able to hold down a regular job is at the workshop where he, along with 95 other handicapped people, reports every day from 9 am to 3 pm. The work varies from packaging books or sorting cords, to salvaging metals.

Helping these adults are 30 paid staff and more than 60 volunteers at the CharlesgRiver Association for Retarded Citizens, a United Way agency.

Three years ago The Charles River Association built Mountain House, a community residence for ambulatory retarded adults, which has eight residents, four men and four women. The association's philosophy, carried out under Executive Director Paul Merritt, is to have Mountain House a home, not a boarding house or mini-institution.

The Charles River Association plans six more homes on East Militi Heights, in Needham, and is well along on fundraising for a second home, this one for multiple-handicapped (wheelchair bound) people.

This second residential building and its furnishings will cost around $225,000 and fund-rasing chairmen, Ruth and Lovett Peters report $110,000 has been raised to date.

To make donations or assist in fund raising, call the Peters at 566-3774.

Freeport elects officers

At its recent annual meeting Freeport, Inc. elected Ann Wallace as its president, Linda Piken-Sokolove as vice-president, and Jean Husher as secretary; Mildred Ann Myerson will continue as Treasurer.

A student-initiated undertaking, Freeport operates a resident for high-school students in need of temporary separation from home because of severe family problems, thereby allowing youngsters to remain both in school and in the community.

Ann Wallace has been active in Freeport since its beginning, and thus provides a continuity of leadership for the community-based organization. She has served on various committees, organized several fundraising efforts, and most recently held office as Freeport's vice president.

Members continuing to serve on the Freeport board of directors are: Deborah Breznay, Harriet Budd, Aaron Fink, Anne Haney, Robert Heineman, Peter Karoff, Marion Kaufmann, Paul McNamara, Mary Morrison, Judith Obermayer, William Raeder, Mimi Reilly, Eleanor Rosenblum, Alan Sack, and Lawrence Schiff. Joining the Board for the first time are Laurence Bishoff, Sally Locke, Sylvia Medalie, and Meredith Pearlstein.

In setting its goals for the coming year, the Freeport board gave top priority to fundraising and community education. Because of the expiration of a sizeable three-year grant from the National Institute of Mental Health, which had supported research (now concluded) in connection with operation of the house, Freeport faces a need for increased funding from the community as well as from other sources. Community education is an ongoing process to enlighten Newton residents about Freeport's services to the community.

The board will also be preparing for the required annual hearing before the Land Use Committee of the Newton Board of Aldermen for an extension of permissive use of the Freeport property.

Freeport, which has pioneered and played an important role in Newton during the past five years, is looking forward to continuing its service to the community.

Recreation Dept. honors Sidney Hill

The Newton Recreation Department recently honored Macy Goldman, executive director of the Sidney Hill Country Club, and six volunteers during an award presentation at the club.

Sidney Hill has, for many years, donated the use of its indoor swimming pool for the use by the special class swim group.

Children at the Peabody School, who were members of the group, had their season's final swim, and were presented with ribbons for their swimming achievements during the program.

Classes were held at the club Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays, for special class children from Newton High School, Meadowbrook Junior High, Countryside, Oak Hill, Hamilton and the Peabody School.

Recreation Commissioner Russell J. Halloran presented a plaque to Goldman, who accepted the award on behalf of the Sidney Hill Country Club. The award was given to Sidney Hill for its "outstanding contribution in makin its facilities available without charge, to the Newton Recreation Department for its Special Class Swim Program for the 13th consecutive year."

Volunteers who received certificates were, Bill Kane and Steven Russell of Boston College; Maureen Murphy of Mt. Ida Junior College; Mary Ann Connors of Pine Manor Junior College; Thomas Dargan of Newton High; and Charlottte Frank of the Sidney Hill Country Club. Gilbert J. Champagne, head instructor of the program since its start, stressed the importance of the volunteers and how instrumental they were to the success of the program.

Also attending the award ceremony were: Gerald F. Peterson, supervisor of Special Education for the Newton School Department; Gwen Fineberg, special class PTA: Richard E. Bolton, chairman of the Newton Red Cross; Robert Kehoe, executive director of the Newton Red Cross; Josephine Pepper and Howard Ferguson of the Newton Recreation Commission; Mrs. Gilbert J. Champagne; Mr. and Mrs. Norbett Champagne and Carol Stapleton of the Newton Recreation Dept.

Champagne was assisted in the swim program by Recreation Leaders Gwen Graf and Gordon Lewis. The program was directed by Recreation Supervisor Robert E. Doherty.

Levens awarded high honor for research

Levens, a senior atNewton North High School, is president of Explorer Post 182 and received the rank of Eagle Scout from Troop 182, Norumbega Council. He will attend the University of Massachusetts at Ameherst in the fall and plans to major in zoology and botany.

The National Exploration Award is presented to recognize young adults who have demonstrated interest and competence in the natural sciences and to provide on-site educational training in science projects.

Levens, who will participate in a scientific expedition this summer as part of his award, is currently involved in numerous scientific studies. He has written a series of articles that have been published by the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

home buyers tax credit

BOSTON — After President Ford signed the Tax Reduction Act of 1975, there was much confusion among consumers and builders over one section of the bill which provides a five percent tax credit for persons buying new homes this year. In order to help potential homebuyers in determining how the program works and who qualifies for the tax credit, Sidney J. Rosenthal, president of the Builders Association of Greater Boston, has extracted from the first official Internal Revenue guidelines the following facts for home buyers:

—The maximum tax credit is $2,000. In case of a married couple filing separate returns, the maximum credit is $1,000 for each taxpayer.

—The home must be purchased as the buyer's principal residence. Vacation homes do not qualify.

—A tax credit is not a tax deduction or tax rebate. A tax credit means that a taxpayer subtracts the amount of his tax credit from the amount of his federal income liability. For example, if you qualify for a $1,750 tax credit, and if your tax liability for 1975 is $1,750, you in effect would owe no taxes for 1975. If $1,750 was deducted from your paychecks this year in federal taxes, you would get a $1,750 tax refund when you filed your 1975 federal income tax return.

—The tax credit may not exceed a taxpayer's tax liability. For example, if you qualify for a $2,000 tax credit and your tax liability is $1,500, you would not receive a $500 refund. The tax credit cannot be carried forward or carried back; it is only applicable to tax liability in the year the credit was earned.

—There is no price limit on homes. A buyer of a new $60,000 home qualifies for a tax credit as well as the buyer of a new $35,000 home.

—Practically any type of new home can qualify for the tax credit. It can be a new single-family house, a rowhouse or townhouse, a condominium apartment or townhouse, or a mobile home. In the case of duplexes or triplexes or a four-family house, only the portion of the purchase price attributable to the cost of the unit in which the taxpayer lives can be used in calculating the credit. However, condominium conversions and rehabilitated and renovated units do not qualify for the tax credit.

—The credit is based on the adjusted basis of the new principal residence.

Household hints

United Press International

Whether you hire professionals or rent a self-drive truck for moving, make a list well ahead of time of the order in which items should be loaded. Load last what you will need first at your new home or apartment.

In the market for a new home? Pay attention to the landscaping. Trees closer to the house than 10 to 15 feet can cause trouble with the roof, gutters and foundation.

A crack between bathtub or shower and wall is unsightly and can lead to leaks that damage the walls and the house frame. Repairs can be made easily with waterproof grout or plastic sealer. Grout is a powder that can be mixed in small amounts. Sealer is easier to use but more expensive.

If loss of liquid occurs in processing canned meat or poultry at home, never open a jar to refill; this would let in bacteria, and require processing the contents all over again.

In planning your garden, use all new seeds for the current year. Seed saved from last year's garden may not breed true to type if they were hybrid varieties. The Federal Seed Act requires labeling with the word "hybrid" any seeds of that type.

Federal standards require a product labeled "bacon dressing" to contain at least eight per cent cured, smoked bacon.

Raisins are easier to chop or grind if they are frozen. For blender chopping, first brush the container and blades lightly with cooking oil and chop no more than half a cup of frozen raisins at a time. The blades and screw of a meat grinder also need oiling for this job.

Avoid excessively fat meat or poultry for canning. Wipe canning jars clean before closing. Fat on rims can prevent a tight, safe seal.

An all-purpose cleaning product may work well on stainless steel but probably will scratch silver, which is softer and needs a less-abrasive polish. Aluminum and polished, or shiny, stainless also should be cleaned with less-abrasive polishes.

To shred lettuce, halve head lengthwise. Place cut sides down on board and slice crosswise with a thin-bladed knife. This method yields about four cups from a medium-sized head.

For the best flavor and aroma, bacon should be used within five to seven days of purchasing.

Gambling threatened in Trust Territory

By RICHARD WILLIAMS

SAIPAN, Mariana Islands (UPI) — The tinkle and clank of coins pouring out of slot machines has lured tourists to a new playground—the American Trust Territory of the Pacific.

But if a special committee has its way, the gambling fever may be ended by law. The committee has recommended to High Commissioner Edward E. Johnston that gambling be outlawed.

The northern Mariana islands of Rota, Tinian and Saipan have permitted slot machines in various commerical enterprises, including hotels.

The attraction was so great that the Royal Taga Hotel removed its coffee shop and moved in 50 slots, most of which are busy from morning until the midnight closing time.

The machines have attracted not only local residents, but Japanese tourists and residents from Guam, where Continental Air Micronesia has Jackpot Junket special flights that include two rolls of nickels along with weekend and holiday hotel accommodations.

Slot machines on Saipan are commonplace in resturants, bowling alleys, grocery stores, hotels and nightclubs. There are none at the airport only because the air terminal is operated by the Trust Territory government.

The local law that permits slot machines has come under heavy fire from both Protestant and Roman Catholic churches. Those opposing the gambling devices became so vocal that Johnston appointed a 14-member committee to study the effects of gambling in the Trust Territory.

After three months of research, the committee recommended that gambling be outlawed when the slot machine licenses expire on Jan. 1, 1976.

If such a ban is enacted, it in turn may be nullified by other political developments.

A plebiscite is scheduled in June to determine where the people of the northern Marianas, of which Saipan is the capital, want to accept an American commonwealth covenant recently signed by the district's political leaders and the United States.

Guam's Gov. Ricardo J. Bordallo has publicly announced that he would veto any bill permitting gambling. That has not stopped talk that the legislature, which has the powet to override a gubernatorial veto, might adopt a gambling bill.

New Orleans Voodoo Museum on Bourbon Street offers a display of voodoo artifacts and is the starting point of an interesting "Voodoo Underground Tour" of the city and its surrounding swamplands.

The ring-necked pheasant has the longest tail of any American game bird.

The mole is a morose underground creature and, except at mating time, rarely chooses to live with another member of the species.

The horns of antelope fawns start to grow when the young buck is about 10 months old.

The census of 1860 counted 487,690 free Negroes and 3,953,780 Negro slaves in the United States.

The tail of the beaver is scaly and flat, but contrary to popular belief it is not used to excavate earth but to help the animal stand erect.

The Rocky Mountain Bighorn sheep do not have coats of wool. They have very short hair. In winter a scanty fuzz grows between the skin and outer guard hairs to keep the animal warm.

Cedar-Morton St. plans unveiled

By ELEANOR SIEGEL
of the Graphic staff

A formidable group of well-spoken citizens met last Tuesday with the aldermanic Street Traffic Committee hear to a report on the Cedar-Morton Streets area ppared by Aldermen Terry Morris, chairman; Alan Barkin, re David Jackson and Robert Tennant.

Although the report was detailed and comprehensive, the citizens were not in favor of any options presented. The study was triggered by the closing of median openings on Commonwealth Avenue at Cedar and Morton Street last August due to a "high incidence of accidents."

However, residents generated "considerable opposition" to the closings. According to the report they were "upset" about what they perceived to be the 'undemocratic' and 'secretive' manner in which the decision was made."

Some residents were happy with the median closings feeling that, on their streets, diminished traffic "restored the residential character to the streets" and made the area safer for school children.

Morris, stated in the report, that not only were these points presented during the committee's deliberations, but they also reviewed the position held by Alderman Barkin that "no problem" exists.

The committee classified the streets into three groups identified by "function and traffic volume." They were 1) major or arterial streets (Commonwealth Avenue, Walnut and Centre Street); 2) collector streets (Mill and Homer Streets); and 3) local or residential streets (Cedar, Morton).

The report cited Traffic Planner David Tannozini's memo which said "the level of service provided motorists on major streets is poor. Since it becomes desirable to avoid the major streets, residential streets are utilized as congestion point buypasses."

The committee made four recommendations. The first one involved the intersection of Centre Street and Commonwealth Avenue. They suggested closing the carriage road between Centre and Grafton Streets; channelizing westbound traffic from Commonwealth Avenue to the carriage road east of the intersection; bag the traffic signal north on the west curb of the intersection; erect a stop sign, watch for pedestrians crossing sign and right turn only sign on the carriage road east of the intersection. Also, they recommend relocating the stop sign from the northwest corner to the median and install a "no right turn" sign on the SE corner of the new median.

The second recommendation included the intersections of Morseland Avenue, Ward Street and Cedar Street and Commonwealth Avenue. Here they suggest redesigning the island at Morseland and Ward intersection; redesign Morseland Avenue median opening to allow access to the carriage road westbound only and closing Cedar Street median opening.

In Plan C, the committee recommended that at the intersection of Morton Street and Commonwealth Avenue the median opening at Morton Street be closed; a new median opening be placed opposite the home at 819 Commonwealth Ave. and open a new limited, southbound only, median opening opposite the home on 855 Commonwealth Ave.

The last plan for the intersection of Walnut Street and Commonwealth Avenue called for closing the carriage road between Bullough Park and Walnut Street, opening a new limited, northbound only, median opening between Bullough Park and Walnut Street; bag traffic signals on NW and NE curbs of the intersection; erect stop sign, watch for pedestrian crossing sign and right turn only sign; relocate stop sign from NW corner of the intersection to the median and redesign the carriage road at the intersection.

According to the report, parts A and D are "severable" from B and C and A and D may be implemented alone. Very few at the hearing found either set of solutions desirable.

While the report stated that no appropriations would be needed, it said projects "of this type are budgeted in the Street Maintenance Account." One resident stated this project "is the lowest priority the city needs" and asked "is it a sin to return money to the treasury?"

One Morton Street resident raised the point that the plan affecting her street might result in a delay of fire engines trying to reach the area.

The committee held no votes that evening and will consider the residents objections before preparing their presentation to the full Board of Aldermen for a vote.

Conservators oppose rezoning, propose uses for Norumbega

In a joint statement, the aauburndale Community Association, the Newton-Norumbega Association, and the Newton Conservators have strongly opposed the rezoning of either of the two remaining parcles of land that were part of Norumbega Park.

The Conservators propose a new Norumbega Park that would be available to all nand would use to best advantage one of the few remaining open sapces on the Charles River.

The natural characteristics of the site lend themselves to a variety of recreational activities which could include sledding, cross-country skiing, hiking, outdoor theater, fairs, picnicking and the field sports, the Conservators believe. The riverfront area could in the future provide space for a boat dock for canoes, rowboars and sailboats as well as swimming facilities.

Parking for 75 cars is provided in the Conservators' plan by using the site of the old Little League Field near Commonwealth Ave. This area could also accommodate additional cars from the existing Lyons Field and Little League area.

The physical proximity of the parcels on the north and south sides of Commonwealth Avenue led to the concept of using both reas for park land and recreation, thereby creating a true gateway to the city.

Three alternative plans include a formal European-stule park; a park with a grassy area, walkways and children's play equipment; and a park with a small building for use as a craft workshop or cultural center. The Conservators conclude that an urban park is the highest and best use of the south parcel.

The ACA-NNA position on the south-side parcel, on which the Perini Corp. has petitioned for a zone change and permissive use to build a 120,000-sq. ft. office building, is that the six-story building would cause "irreparable damage to the adjacent residential community."

ACA-NNA also feel that there will be a net gain in revenue to the city from the houses that could be built on the land as it's presently zoned. Zoning is now Residence D district, which allows the construction of two-family houses.

The Perini plan for the north side of Commonwealth Avenue, 224 condominium apartments and townhouses, is unacceptable to the ACA and the NNA because of the loss of parkland and what they feel would be a "long-term detrimental impact on the community."

Up to our fannies in alligators

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Texas alligators, thought to be endangered just six years ago, now are so numerous authorities fear humans may be in more danger than the reptiles. Lawmakers are being asked to repeal a 1969 law prohibiting killing the reptiles.

"We're literally up to our fannies in alligators in places," says Ted Clark, wildlife director for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

Latest estimates of the alligator population in Jefferson County indicate there are 13,600 of the animals in a 312-squaremile area, an average of 44 per square mile.

Parks officials estimate there are 36,600 alligators living in 97 counties in the state. The 'gator population is increasing so rapidly in 34 counties experts are concerned the reptiles are reaching the saturation point.

State Sen. D. Roy Harrington of Port Arthur, author of the 1969 law protecting alligators, is sponsoring a bill this year to repeal the earlier measure and give the Parks Department authority to manage the reptile population.

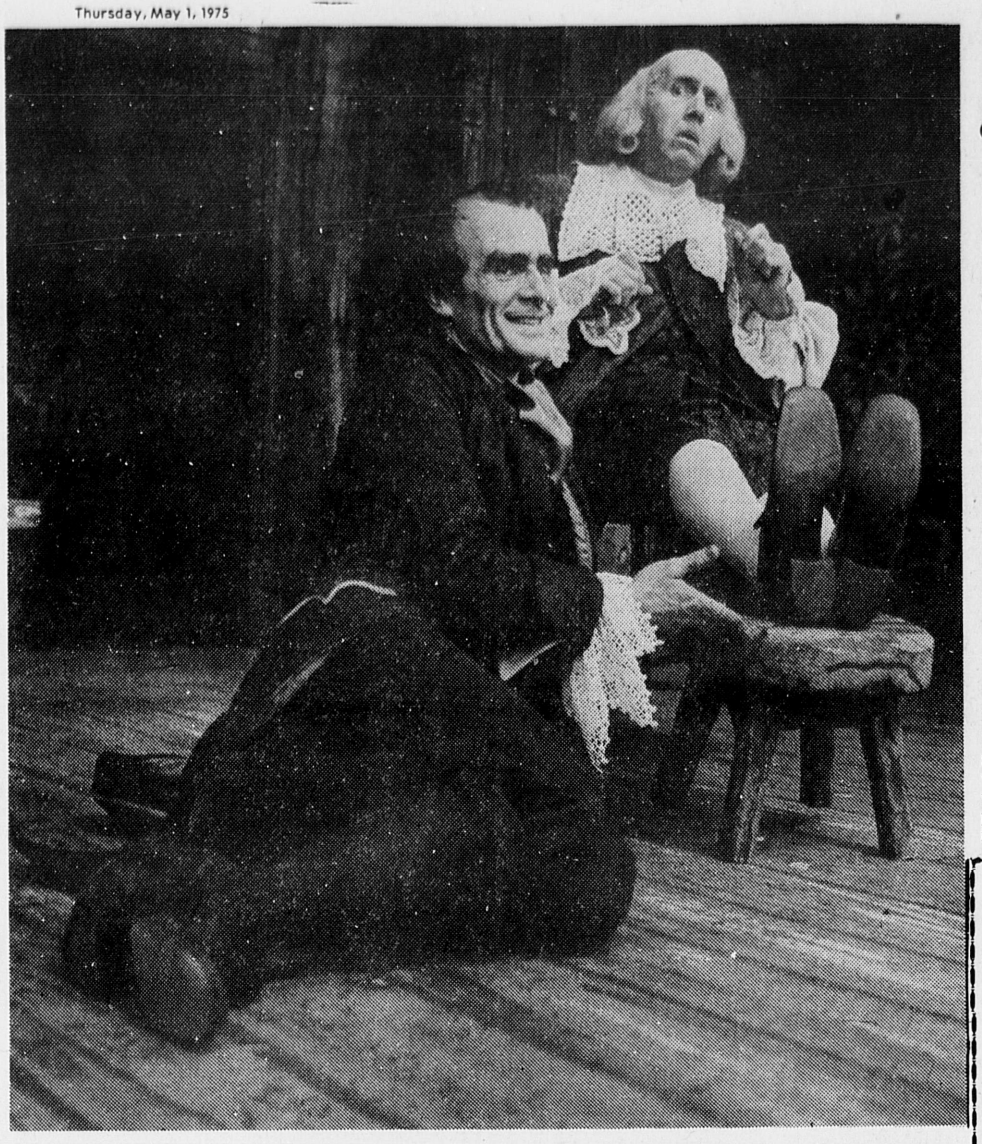
"Right now the law is nobody can kill an alligator or even have an alligator hide in his possession," Harrington said. "We passed it because they were about to become extinct. But they've made a real rapid comeback. They're just everywhere."

Wildlife biologists at the J. D. Murphrie Wildlife Station in Jefferson County receive 25 to 35 calls a month from citizens who find 3-to 10-foot-long alligators in ditches, swimming pools, backyards, parking lots and even downtown streets.

"Every year about springtime our offire is hit with a rash of complaints. Particularly in wet weather these alligators get to wandering around. Either they have love on their mind or the competition is getting too great," says Jimmy Dunks, a wildlife biologist recently transferred to Austin from the East Texas station.

Biologists try to tie up the animals and move them back to swamps.

"Alligators are basically real, real strong and extremely quick," Dunks said. "If it's on the ground, it's impossible for you to touch his tail without that mouth catching you. An alligator can snap a flying bird out of the air."



Musical Final performances of "Lord Scarecrow," a new Bicentennial musical comedy, will be given in Brandeis' Spingold Theatre May 1, 2 and 3 at 8:30 p.m. David Howard (foreground) and David Palmer are both guest artists-in-residence at Brandeis and are appearing in the production. Tickets can be obtained by calling the box office, 894-4343.

8,000 gallons of fuel in flames in Newton Corner

Gas explosion and fire raise havoc

By RICHARD WILLIAMS
of the Graphic Staff

Anyone who has driven through Newton Corner can probably only too well understand the incident that happened to James A. Foley Saturday

Just as he had entered the right lane of the northbound Washington Street bridge over the Massachusetts Turnpike, some driver in one of the other four or five barely painted lanes cut in front of him.

If another vehicle had been where Foley's was, it probably would have been just another unreported incident of discourteous, hazardous driving in a poorly planned road, quickly forgotten after a few cuss words

But Foley 27, of Brockton, was driving a gasoline truck with 8,000 gallons of fuel in it.

Apparently, he swerved to avoid the car that had cut him off, hit the east curb on the bridge, and tipped over the tanker which exploded.

It had Citgo gas in it and belonged to American Truck Leasing, 62 Everett St. Westwood.

Newton Police Officer William G. Sheehan was on Elmwood Street, a block away, and rushed to the scene shortly after the explosion

Amazingly, Foley had escaped from the cab of the truck

Sheehan reported that Foley first tried to smash the windshield of the cab to escape, then tried to open the door toward the sky and finally opened the window, unbuckled his seat belt, and crawled to safety before the leaking gas exploded

Sheehan said Foley was "as white as a sheet" in a state of shock, and was only burned on his arms and his buttock

He was taken by police to Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

Unfortunately, the first firemen to arrive on the scene did not know the driver had escaped, and were injured trying to see if anyone was trapped inside.

Newton firemen James Swia of 9 Gertrude St., Watertown, and Francis Vonna of 15 Dale St., Newtonville were part of Engine and Ladder Companies 3 that were among the first fire apparatus that responded to the 6:47 p.m. alarm.

Swia suffered facial burns and Vonna sprained his ankle when they approached the truck.

Before the fire was out, all of Newton's fire equipment and firefighters were on the scene, but the flames were not extinguished until the Boston Port Authority foam truck arrived and smothered the flames.

Neighboring cities and towns covered for sections of Newton during the raging blaze.

Fire Chief Frederick A. Perkins, Jr. said the fire would have been out in "minutes" if Newton had had the foam truck that was ordered in September, 1974.

He said he is expecting it around October, 1975.

The city had an old post World War II foam truck, but it was beyond repair, Perkins said.

When the firemen first got on the scene,

Public hearing to be held on revaluation

A public hearing will be held May 20 on revaluation.

In response to a petition from 155 citizens in Newton, Board of Aldermen President Eliot K. Cohen Monday scheduled the hearing, to be held in the aldermanic chamber at 8 p.m. that day.

Cohen spoke briefly on the possibilities of sending the city solicitor to court to ask for at least a one-year delay in the implementation of revaluation.

The city solicitor and the city assessors will be asked to attend the public hearing.

Cohen urged his fellow aldermen to try and substantiate claims of inequities in the revaluation so that the city solicitor will have evidence to use in building a case for a delay.

The petition was filed last Thursday by State Rep. Peter F. Harrington. The subject of the public hearing, according to Harrington's petition, will be: "Shall the city of Newton request the Middlesex Superior Court to delay the effective date of its order to implement 100 percent assessed valuation?"

Ald. David Jackson submitted a resolution calling on Newton to support Mayor Kevin White in an effort of his to overthrow 100 percent assessments.

After some debate Jackson failed to get a suspension of the rules that would have allowed debate and a vote on his resolution. It was sent to committee.

Meanwhile, the rounds of citizen's meetings and the appeal hearings go on.

Rep. Harrington said there are a number of "valid reasons" for delaying the implementation of revlauation.

He included the argument that Newton's implementation should be held up until all other cities and towns have achieved 100 per cent values, that there has not been enough time for Newton to review the work of Cole-Layer-Trumbele, time is needed to discover whether or not there is a pattern in complaints in order to judge whether the reassessment should be rejected.

Newton one of the cherry sheet losers

Newton officials learned Tuesday they were among the 179 losers in Cherry Sheet revenues.

The city, along with all other Massachusetts cities and towns, received notification of state assessments and returns. The city will owe Massachusetts at least $330,000 this year; last year Newton got more than $800,000.

Several factors, revaluation not among them, accounted for the city's net loss of $1.1 million.

Boston successfully fought for, and received, an abatement of $2 billion on its assessed value of $4.6 billion. State returns to Boston increased $38 million. This increased state returns to Boston by an estimated $38 million.

The MBTA tops the list of Newton's increases. The city will be required to fork over an extra $555,000 to the MBTA for fiscal 1976. The city also showed increases in special education as the impact of Chapter 766 becomes more apparent.

The special education assessment for Newton, including a deficit for this year, more than doubled. The city paid $124,000 in fiscal 1975 for special education assessments. For fiscal 1976, the city is assessed $197,667 plus $63,000 for an underestimate in the current fiscal year.

An increase in water rates accounted for a $200,000 increase in the MDC assessment water assessment.

The county assessment showed a decrease.

Initially, the impact of the Cherry Sheet would be to raise the revalued tax rate of $47.50 by about a $1.

Mayor Theodore D. Mann said Wednesday that the increased costs "cost" Newton.

"Our state delegation and other legislators now more than ever have to understand the impact of the Boston decision," Mann said. "Newton taxpayers are paying for that burden."

The state based its assessment on the assessed valuation of Newton as $1.27 billion. Last year it used a figure of 1.2 billion. the state has always based its assessments on 100 per cent valuation.

Neighborhood councils in limbo

The Board of Aldermen will act Tuesday night on the recommendation from the Legislation and Rules Committee that the neighborhood area councils be rescinded from the City Charter.

After the public hearing last Thursday night, four of the eight members of the committee also decided that the charter should prohibit raises in the mayor's salary between June 1 and Dec. 31 in an election year for the mayor.

These proposals may be changed by the full Board Tuesday, but only the changes that pass by a majority will appear on the November ballot.

The committee also passed several changes in the language of the charter, which will appear in a package on the ballot if passed by the Board. Each other substantive items will appear seperately on the ballot.

Alvin Mandell, School Committeeman from Ward 8 and a member of the original Charter Commission, spoke against the neighborhood councils, since the idea originated in Los Angeles where each council had more that 100,000 members.

Mandell, who wrote the minority report of the Charter Commission, also spoke to have the power of recall added to the charter so all elected officials could be removed from office by a certain vote of the electorate.

The committee did not consider adding the power of recall to the charter.

Sylvia Applebaum from the League of Women Voters read a statement that opposed neighborhood councils because of the potential cost to the city of running them.

She raised questions about the possibility of the city being required to run elections, keeping books, and rendering legal, planning, secretarial, mailing, and printing services if the councils are city agencies.

"The league supports the principle of informed and active participation of citizens in government," she said, but areas would be of different sizes, may have different powers as the charter now stands, and some areas would not have councils.

Ald. Michael J. Antonellis said he had visited the Newton Highlands neighborhood Council and urged that it be allowed to continue for two more years.

He said the group had no intent of running up city costs, and he left with the impression that the group really needed the charter clause to motivate organization.

City Solicitor Howard Levine noted that the Highlands council is not officially formed yet under the charter since it has not submitted its bylaws or had them approved by the Board.

He felt fairly sure that the members of Towers gets one month to come up with a plan

By ELEANOR SIEGEL
of the Graphic staff

The auction of the Chestnut Hill Towers land has been adjourned for one month, until June 11, giving its owners extra time to come up with a plan for development of the 17.4 acre parcel. The original proposal for the site, by owners Mario DiCarlo and Albert Goodman, was for 428 condominium apartments.

According to Harry E. Warren, attorney for The First Pennsylvania Bank from the Boston firm of Warner and Stackpole, the recent delay is because the U.S. Court has not made a decision of whether or not to grant a bankruptcy and reorganization petition.

The First Pennsylvania Banking and Trust Company in Philadelphia holds the $1.7 million first mortgage on the foreclosed property abutting Boylston Street in Chestnut Hill.

Additional outstanding debts on the land are roughly $140-270,000 in back taxes and reportedly another $4.9 million dollar attachment against the property for unpaid site work.

Parade Sunday

Although the Bicentennial Parade was rained out Sunday, the Jackson Homestead celebrated its 25th anniversary with a cake-cutting and flagpole dedication.

The parade is set for this Sunday to step off at the homestead on Washington Street at 1:30 p.m.

In case of rain this Sunday, announcements will be made over WBZ radio that the parade will be held

Wives urged to begin planning for widowhood

By ELEANOR SIEGEL
of the Graphic staff

"Women are prepared for every stage of their lives except widowhood" say Alfred Allan Lewis and Barrie Berns, authors of "Three Out of Four Wives", a new book about widows. Berns and Lewis spoke recently before a group of women at a Bloomingdales morning coffee.

The title of their book is derived from the statistic that three out of four wives will be widows. Ms. Berns got the idea for the book after being widowed eight years ago. In seeking help from literature, she found very little was written about a widow's plight.

Out of her search came the idea for the book in which the authors emphasize a woman's right to a life for herself.

Ms. Berns advises women to inform themselves about their husband's business affairs and begin "making big decisions." She stressed the time to begin was not "when you are a widow, but now." The authors reveal that the widow is left vulnerable, shockingly uninformed about financial matters and unprepared to take her place in society as a single individual.

Lewis explained that after a husband'd death everyone tells the widow to "keep a stiff upper lip," or as he translates this phrase, "a terrible thing has happened to you, but keep quiet and don't make anyone feel guilty." After two weeks when the widow looks for help and begins to show signs of strain, none can understand it. "She was so marvelous during the prior two weeks." Lewis addressed himself to the guilt, anger and panic a widow faces.

Some help can be gotten from the "Widow to Widow" program sponsored by Harvard Laboratory of Community Psychiatry under Dr. Phyllis Silverman. It is a widow "self help" program designed to let widows speak to each other. They are matched on a social, economic and religious level.

Consciousness raising groups were also advised by Lewis who suggested women urge their churches or temples to begin one. He described consciousness raising as "raising one's own self esteem" and said the way to do it "is to talk with others in the same situation."

Two salient points were stressed by the authors. One was that women were ignorant about pension plans, insurance and other financial matters. The other point was that the women should get out and join the work force.

"In 85 of the pension plans there are no survivor benefits or survivor benefits apply only if applied for while your husband is alive," said Lewis.

"How many wives have found out if your husband has made application?" was the question asked. "How many know what insurance alternatives are available?" That's just the beginning.

"Where can a woman, unskilled labor, untrained, get a job?" Lewis also asked the women to think about how many "could live at the level you are accustomed to, if your husband dies?"

7 junior college teachers sue to be rehires

Seven Newton Junior College teachers that the School Committee has terminated filed suit aginst the School Committee to be rehired elsewhere in the school system.

The coll ege is being phased out by the School Committee, with no freshman class being accepted for next year.

Attorney Jeffrey M. Freedman, counsel for the seven tenured teachers, claims that theSchool Committee did not give them prop er noti of their firings. ce

According to Freedman, the Committee did not comply with the state law says that tenured teachers be given the 30-day notice of the meeting at which such a decision is made.

The time would have allowed them to have a hearing on why they were not rehired.

Freedman also contends that his clients were not offered other employment in the school system which they would be entitled to if they were certified for for the subject. in any ition

Freedman said if was a there pos junior or senior high school that one of the seven was qualified for that was filled by an untenured teacher, the School Committee should have let that person go and put the junior college teacher in the place.

The teachers were notified on March 25 of their ter-mination .

The city, on beh alf of the School Committee, has until May 20 to file an answer to the suit in Cambridge Superior Court.

The seven teachers, which were listed among the teachers not rehired in the April 24 Graphic, are Joel Bleiwas, John J. Scanlon, Jr., Nadia Stevens, Armine B. Thomason, Cynthia W. Lawton, Thomas P. Shaughnessy, and Margaret Tavitian.

Solid waste meeting set

Weston selectmen last week heard a presentation from representatives of the Newton-Waltham regional solid waste disposal district.

The town is currently considering alternatives to its present method of disposal.

Newton Ald. David Jackson, who appeared before the selectmen, said the meeting was for informational purposes, not an invitation to join the Newton-Waltham district.

Weston representatives, he said, were invited to attend a regional solid waste meeting that will be held Tuesday, May 13, in Lexington at 8 p.m.

The purpose of the meeting, according to official notice, is to discuss "a proposed resource recovery facility to serve the communities to the northwest, west and southwest areas of Greater Boston with access to the Rt. 128." including Newton, have

At total of 39 communities' been invited to send representatives to this meeting.

The Newton-Waltham transfer-haul station is scheduled to begin operating this summer at the site of the Rumford Avenue incinerator in Auburndale.

Revaluation discussed in forum in Auburndale

Newton Assessor Phili Waterman told the Auburndale Community Association, "I'd be lying through my teeth if I didn't say that there will be some mistakes in the revaluating 25,000 homes."

The assessor said the firm of Cole-Laye -Trumble signed a contract to assess Newton's homes at a cost of $14 per parcel.

He told the 80 members of the assoc iation at their annual meeting that CLT is the "oldest, largest, assessing firm in the country," and they have assessed 41 other communites in Massachusetts.

Needham, Wellesley, and Brockton were among them.

"They blew one, Quincy," he said, but their job has been good elsewhere, he added.

Everyone at them meeting, including the three aldermen in attendance, wanted to know on what basis the property was assessed.

Ald. Richard J. McGrath told the people from his ward that the Board of Aldermen asked CLT for the formula on which full market value of property was reached.

McGrath said the firm declined to say, claiming it was "like a trade secret," he said.

Waterman gave his opinion of what constituted normal maintenance, which should not affect the assessement.

This would include a new roof, landscaping, replacement of a heating system, and painting.

He said there is some dispute among professionals assessors whether aluminum siding would increase the value of a home, but such things as remodeling of a bathroom or kitchen or adding on a room definitely would.

Eleanor Bassett of 342 Auburndale Ave., a former real estate broker for 10 years, said she personally knew of two cases where facts were in-correct in property reports.

In one case she cited CLT had the number of square feet measured wrong, and in another case they had the wrong number of bathrooms.

Another real estate broker said he has not seen one house in the city that has been ap-praised right.

Aldermanic vice-president Richard Bullwinkle questioned the equity the in the full market value assessement.

He claims that the sliding scale of land values is unfair, where similar pieces of land are valued at 19 cents per square foot up to $1.25 per square foot.

Another question he raised was the equity of location. Why should a street of similar houses in Waban be worth less than simi homes in lar Oak Hill or Auburndale?

Thirdly, Bullwinkle questioned the equity in taxes if the Marriot, other businesses and utilities pay less while residents pay more proportionally'.

Ald. Robert Gaynor explained how the revaluation will hurt the elderly by increasing the value of holdings, almost to the maximum amount allowed by the state for them to receive a tax reduction.

Under the current law, if elderly people have more than $45,000 in assets, they are not eligible for the $2,000 abatement.

Thus, with someone over 70 who owned a home worth $13,500 under the past valuation would be allowed to have a savings account and a car and still get the tax break .

But with that house worth about $40,000 after the revaluation, someone with a car and a ineligible. small savings would be

Gaynor said he plans to file a bill in the state legislature in two or three weeks to resolve the revaluation inequities, but he refused to comment further.

Auburndale Community Associaition President Carol Ann Shea, who was reelected at the Sunday night meeting, was given a sheet by Gaynor which would enable homeowners to make their own rough assessements using the purchase price, major renovations, and deductions for depreciation.

Mrs. Shea said the list would be reproduced and available in the Auburndale branch library early next week.

Several other residents pointed out inequities in valuation they were aware of, and the aldermen and assessor urged residents to make an appointment for a hearing with CLT.

McGrath said he was in the unfortunate position of being underassessed, and urges everyone who is in the same position to appear at a hearing so the city will know what percent of the property is assessed wrong. This would aid in any attempts to delay the effect of the revaluation.

The aldermen joined Waterman in assuring citizens that no one would be forced to sell their home because of the revaluation.

The community association has received notice that the Recreation Department has contributed $2,000 to make a "Life Course" at Auburndale Park, which would be a one-mile jogging station with 10 exerci stations.

People are needed to assist in the work that ing May 17. Contact will be done on five Saturdays beginn Carol Ann Shea for more details at 527-5139.

Police enter final negotiating stage

By RICHARD WILLIAMS

The Newton Police will enter binding arbitration with the City of Newton by Monday, according to police union head John W. Quinn.

Quinn said the union filed for the final negotiating step on April 28, and each side has up to 14 days to submit a package.

The arbitrator must accept either the city's package or the union's, with no changes in either.

The two sides went to state-appointed factfinder John Teele after neither side could agree on a new annual wage increase and an effective date for past time-and-a-half payment for overtime.

The mayor's budget assistant Michael Lebner said the factfinder felt an 8.7 per-cent increase in all salaries would be fair, while the union wanted 15 percent and the city offerred 8.06 percent.

The policemen have been working without a contract since May 1, 1974.

Any pay increase would be retroactive to that date.

The force has also been working overtime at the regular rate of pay.

Lebner explained that the police understood and agreed to this situation over the past year because the shortage of officers on the force would give them a lot of overtime hours.

He added "There is no question that they should be paid time-and-a-half for overtime."

However, the question is what date the overtime rate would be retroactive to.

The union wanted the overtime rate effective at the date of the old contract, new pay rate back to the expiration the city wanted it only from April 1, 1975, and the factfinder chose Jan. 1, 1975, as a retroactive date.

Lebner said the aldermen allowed $1.2 million in budget reserve to cover the 8.04 percent regular pay increase, but he was not sure if there was enough in the budget to cover a retroactive overtime payment back to January.

He said the extra three months from January to March may mean an additional $325,000 to $350,000, depending on how many hours of overtime were logged.

Another factor in the negotiations is the education incentive and longevi payments. ty

Under the expired contract, the union president said of-ficers got a $5 bonus per year for each total college credit hour they had earned, and men on the force for 20 years or more received a bonus of $150.

John Qui nn would like to raise the amount given per college credit, and also raise the longevity benefit for 20 years to $500, and then phase out longevity.

At the rate of $5 per cred th a baccalaureate degree would make a bonus of more than $500 per year.

Under the old expired contract, the rates of which are still in effect, patrolmen make a maximum of $11,884 per year.

The factfinder's report recommending 8.75 percent

Norumbega delayed

By CYNTHIA BLACK
of the Graphic staff

A decision on development of the Norumbega area in Auburndale has been delayed for at least a week.

The package of proposals from Perini Land & Development Corp. appeared destined for defeat Monday when the item was chartered.

The proposal was before the Board of Aldermen and was chartered, the one-man stalling tactic, by Ald. David Jackson.

Jackson had been arguing that the Perini plans should be returned to the Land Use Committee in and held up while aldermen and the developers discussed a compromise.

Jackson said at the meeting he felt the city might lose its opportunity to save the Norumbega land if it settled the Perini matter.

Jackson said the opportunity to acquire the parcel "exists now" and "we should take advantage of it."

Perini's original proposal called for 225 condominiuums and an office building. The condominiums were to be built on the north side of Commonwealth Avenue and the office building on the south side.

After opposition to the plan became apparent, the developer modified his proposal, asking to be allowed to build a smaller office building on the south side of the street and offering to neogotiate with the city for a landtaking that would preserve

The aldermanic Land Use Committee voted 5-2 in favor of denying all the Perini requests at a meeting last week.

Ald. Richard J. McGrath disagreed with Jackson's position. He said he did not think the opportunity for the city to acquire the land would disappear with denial of the petition. He pointed out Perini could come back to the Board with a another petition.

"It is my understanding," McGrath said, "that the north and south side residents are interested in sitting down with the developer to discuss a development. It makes alot more sense to do it that way."

"I think these people want to clear the slate," Ald. Richard J. Bullwinkle commented, referring to the Norumbega neighbors. "But I also think they're interested in talking."

Ald. Alan Barkin, a member of the Land Use Committee, asked that the six Perini requests be voted on individually and Ald. Joseph McDonnell asked the they be amended to "denial without prejudice."

Ostensibly, denial by the Board means a petition cannot be resubmitted for one year and "denial without prejudice" eliminates this limitation. Aldermen, such as McGrath, who favor denial, point out that a petition with a flat denial can come before the Board in less than a year by a majority vote of aldermen to suspend the rules.

One vote was taken, the vote on making the first Perini request a denial without prejudice.

Aldermen voted 15-8 against McDonnell's amendment.

With this vote indicating solid opposition, Jackson chartered the matter before anymore votes could be taken.

Norumbega was placed on the agenda of next Tuesday's special meeting of the Board of Aldermen by Board President Eliot Cohen.

9 policemen sue for injury pay

Nine police officers have sued the Chief of Policeto collect medical expenses they incurred while supposedly on duty.

Police Union Presi John Quinn maintains ent that the chief of police has final say whether or not the men's claims were legitimate.

John Quinn said, "Under the law, the chief, as the appointing authority, has the power to approve or disapprove (the requests)."

Chief William F. Quinn said Tuesday that he had approved the money, but the city did not approve it.

City Solicitor Howard Levine said anyone who understood the statutes and budgetary laws would see "there is nothing irregular or improper in the procedure."

He added that the city has paid from $15,000 to $18,000 to firemen and policemen this year for injuries, and has more requests for reimbursement already filed.

The statute reads that the men will be reimbursed if "injured through no fault of their own in the line of duty," he said.

Levine said the decision not to reimburse the men was based on them not meeting one of those two requirements in the law.

He said any decision to pay for injuries comes from the recommendation of the appointing authority with the approval of the mayor and with the advice of the city solicitor.

Neither of the three men would estimate the total amount of money involved in the suit.

The nine plaintiffs are Thomas F. Flemming, Thomas W. Frost, Walter D. Drew, Vincent P. Lipoma, Charles F. Rivers, James P. Carter, Jr., Gerald Lawrence, James R. Scalzi, and Rupert G. Baker.

The men claim to have been injured between February, 1973, and December, 1974.

20 take nomination papers

Political hopefuls in Newton had their first opportunities last week to take out nomination papers for the city's fall elections.

As of Wednesday morning, 20 people had secured nomination papers.

Six incumbent aldermen got their nomination papers. They are: Robert Gaynor, Ward 1 at-large; Thomas Concannon, Ward 2; Edward Richmond, Ward 2 at-large; Ernest Dietz, Ward 6; David Cohen, Ward 7; and Jason Sacks. Ward 7 at-large.

School Committee incumbents Alvin Mandell, Ward 8: and Gerard Byrne. Ward 3.

have gotten their nomination papers.

Sumner Silton has obtained nomination papers for the School Committee in Ward 5. He also ran last year. John Keefe, also a candidate last year, got nomination papers for the School Committee in Ward 3.

Other people considering entering the race for aldermen-at-large are: Patricia Ciccone, Ward 1; Anthony Salvucci, Ward 3; Nicolo Nardone, Sheila Farnese and Priscilla Leith, Ward 4; Robert Davine, Ward 5; Domenic Taglienti and Nicholas Kyriakos, Ward 7.

Nomination papers for ward alderman were obtained by Lemont Kier in Ward 4 and Theodore Gross in Ward 6.

Nardone, Taglienti and Gross were candidates for aldermen last year.

Nomination papers will be available in ice in City Hall through July. the Election Commission off They must be returned no later than July 29 for certification and candidates then have until Aug. 5 to decide whether or not they officially want to enter the race.

Candidates for alderman-at-large and School Committee need 150 signatures. Candidates for ward alderman need 50 signatures.

Mrs. Kaplan seeks seat on School Committee in Ward 5

Honora A. Kaplan of 165 Upland Rd., Waban, has announced her candidacy for the Newton School Committee seat from Ward 5.

In making her announcement, Mrs. Kaplan noted, "A major factor in our moving to Newton 11 years ago was the quality of the Newton school system. I want to help insure that Newton schools continue to provide this high quality education for all our children.

"At the same time, we must recognize budgetary limitations, forced on us by today's inflationary economy, including spiralling property taxes. It is vital that the School Committee address programmatic and fiscal issues simultaneously so that decisions can be made which reflect them both."

"As an attorney," Mrs. Kaplan continued, "I will bring analytical ability and experience to the varied problems facing our schools. My years of experience in state government have given me insight into how state and local governments work, and I HAVE DEVELOPED A CLEAR PICTURE OF THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN NECESSARY AND UNNECESSAR BUREAUCRATIZATION.

"Finally, as a parent of three elementary school-age children, I will bring an aareness of and sensitivity to the needs of younger children to the School Committee.

"At a time when the possible consolidation of elementary schools is a paramount issue, I feel that younger parents should have a voice on the Committee."

Mrs. Kaplan has worked as a lawyer in the area of mental health for several years and is particularly concerned about the implementation of Chapter 766 in the Newton schools. "The successful integration of children with special needs into our schools can benefit all children. We must continually monitor the programs, however, to remedy problems and improve services.

"I am sinilarly concerned about the implementation of Metco. We have the resources to provide quality education for Boston children.

"Since the School Committee voted in January to accept tuition payments for Metco students, this now represents an economically viable opportunity to broaden our community's involvement and provide our own children with important experiences and values."

Mrs. Kaplan is interested in improving communication between the School Committee and the rest of the community, especially parents and children.

"I think the School Committee has been too isolated from the day-to-day issues in the schools. I would welcome, and indeed seek out, increased involvement, by visiting schools and PTA meetings in an effort to become more aware of these problems."

Mrs. Kaplan graduated from Smith College in 1961, received a masters degree in public administration from Harvard and a law degree from Boston College Law School. She works for the Massachusetts Department of Mental Health, and has an appointment to the Harvard Medical School, Laboratory of Community Psychiatry.

Her numerous state and civic activities include the committee on mental health and corrections of the Massachusetts Bar Association, the governor's statewide drug review board, and the Beethoven School PTA board. Her husband, Martin, is also an attorney in Boston. Their children Jonathan and Shira attend the Beethoven School, and Benjamin will enter kindergarden in the fall.

The list

In the April 24th edition the Newton Graphic published a list of the teachers that tentatively would not be rehired and the teachers who received tenure.

As is evidenced by the letters on the Opinion Page, the publication of this list has been misinterpreted, misused and misrepresented. We therefore feel an explanation and clarification is needed.

Provisions of the public record and open meeting laws of this state govern what the public has a right to know.

Public records are defined as "all books, papers, photographs, maps, recorded tapes, financial statements, statistical tabulations, or other documentary materials or data..." unless specifically exempted.

The open meeting law requires that information discussed in executive session by a governing body must be made public as soon as the need for secrecy ends.

In regard to teachers not rehired and teachers getting tenure, the need for secrecy ended the day all these people were officially notified.

The list of names then became a public record that any citizen in Newton could go in and ask to see.

School Department officials who have been criticized for releasing this list to the public, deserve an apology. They were doing what was required by law.

It is important for everyone to remember that everyone employed by the City of Newton is on the taxpayer's payroll. It is our position that the taxpayers are entitled to the most information we can present to them. This, as we see it, is our job.

This was the rationale for publishing the list. We felt the employer, that is the taxpayer, had every right to know which teachers were leaving the system and which were getting tenure.

It is also our position that we should take full advantage of the protections afforded by open meeting and public record laws Anyone who did not know they were entitled to see a list such as the one in question is someone neither completely aware nor fully making use of rights under the law.

Finally, we hoped that parents of school children would look at the list and evaluate the selections made based on their own personal encounters with various teachers. If they felt Newton was losing a good teacher, as is the case with most of the people on the list, the door would be open to make these feelings known.

Certainly, everyone is aware that school enrollment is, and has been, declining over the past few years. It takes only one step of logic to conclude that teachers will be cut, not necessarily because they are bad teachers, but simply because they have the least amount of time in the system and do not have tenure.

This list is really a prelude, a step toward opening the discussion of the value and applicability of tenure for teachers.

Tenure is the real issue to be examined. If indeed this system must lose good teachers and harbor mediocre ones because mediocre ones have been here long enough to get tenure, there just might be something wrong with the system.

Whose name did you see on that list that you'll be sorry to see leave this school system?

Good choice

In January, this paper took the few remnants of the Youth Commission that were left after resignations to task for what appeared to be a lack of activity on the body.

We said we hoped that when the new members of the Youth Commission were appointed and a virtually new commission took over, it would approach its job with an eye toward finding and using the widest array of resources available to aid the youth of Newton.

We were therefore pleased this week when the Board of Aldermen approved the appointment of Joe DeNucci to the Youth Commission.

Mr. DeNucci had previously been a member of its advisory board and seemed to be the most logical candidate for appointment to the commission itself.

Certainly, Mr. DeNucci's interest in the welfare and activities of young people in Newton is well-known. The Newton Jaycees recently saw fit to honor him with the Distinguished Service Award for his long devotion to helping young people.

Since his interest is so genuine, there is no doubt he will be an asset to Newton as a member of the Youth Commission.

The Harry Truman revival

WASHINGTON — The Harry Truman revival is surely one of the oddest exercises on nostalgia in many a long day. It is a warm bath in a past that we look back on with wistful hope that somehow that time — a mythic time in the nostalgic mood — can somehow be re-created.

If he could have heard President Ford invoking his spirit in his State of the World address, the man from Independence would have had a hearty laugh. At the end of his full term in 1952 President Truman was the target of a Republican attack with few parallels.

Not only the peccadilloes, the mink coats and the deep freezes, but the Truman-Dean Acheson foreign policy, the "no win" war in Korea, the firing of Gen. MacArthur, all were heaped on his head as the Republicans saw a chance of victory. This was the McCarthyist era with Richard Nixon a front-line fighter against the Acheson "college of cowardly communist containment."

President Ford was trying on the Mantle when he said, "President Truman's resolution must guide us today." That was by way of underwriting his appeal for more military aid for South Vietnam.

Ford has many, of the outward characteristics of Truman: a rugged, midwestern air of simple virtue, a friendly, folksy quality, an earnest effort to live up to the job. But he is no Truman. Truman was a fighter who in 1948 trounced the Republicans with a bold, bare-knuckle attack defying the pundits and prognosticators

What is more, the times today bear little or no resemblance to the '50s. Truman had the benefit of a great reservoir of good will around the world toward America. Out of America's reserves of money and goods he presided over the Marshall Plan which was an act of beneficence with few parallels in history.

Given the scandalous lottery of the vice presidency, we were luckier than we deserved to have Truman ready to take over when FDR died of a massive stroke just as the war in Europe was ending. Having been kept in almost complete ignorance of the behind-the-scenes events, including the development of the atomic bomb, he had to assume command at a moment of great peril.

Truman was the spunky little bantam from Missouri who stood his ground against all comers.

Shortly after he assumed the office, he went to Potsdam to meet with Stalin and Winston Churchill to determine the course of the war with Japan and the future peace. Revisionist historians have construed his role at Potsdam as that of a conspirator readying the cold war. He is accused of having withheld his knowledge of the successful test of the atomic bomb so that he could use it as a weapon to intimidate the Soviets. This seems to me a distortion of the record and of Truman's character.

He can be faulted in history for having used the bomb against Hiroshima and Nagasaki instead of demonstrating its terrible force on an empty island as many, both in and out of government, had urged. On the advice of the military, who estimated American casualties at more than a half million in the final attack on the Japanese home islands, the President took the decision.

The flow of the old nostalgia has little to do with these frim matters. It is the evocation of a nomespun figure who could come up with such advice as, "If you can't stand the heat, stay out of the kitchen." Merle Miller's best selling "Plain Speaking," tape recordings of Truman at his salty best, contributed to it, as did Margaret Truman Daniel's loving portrait of her father.

All this is caught up in "Give 'Em Hell Harry," a sellout play at Ford's Theater with James Whitmore in the role of Truman. President Ford at an invitation performance enjoyed it immensely. Here is the tough-minded integrity, the earthy humor, that emerges out of the nostalgic mist.

The historians will quarrel over the Truman years and the fateful consequence of the Korean war. Was it Dean Acheson or was it the President himself who set the sights of the cold war with the Greek and Turkish doctrine? The definitive answers are a long way off.

But in this interval we can take comfort from the spunky little bantam frorn Missouri who stood his ground against all comers.

Bay State Wants Piece of the Pie

As long as this writer can remember, New Hampshire has been holding the first-in-the-nation Presidential Primary every four years and reaping a tidy financial harvest from it.

Presidential candidates, anxious to get their campaigns off to a good start, mush into the snow and slush of the Granite State in February and March of Presidential election years in quest of votes.

They are accompanied by staffs of aids, advisers and campaign workers. Political reporters, columnists and commentators journey into New Hampshire to cover the candidates, their activities and speeches.

Students from universities across the nation have converged on New Hamsphire in past Presidential Primaries.

The best estimates which can be obtained indicate that the persons who visited the Grantie State because of the 1972 Presidential Primary spent at least $4 Million while there.

That, of course, is a bonanza for New Hamsphire, and public officials don't intend to share their good thing with anyone else if they can help it. But they may have to share it with Massachusetts.

The expenditure of money, time, effort and energy in the New Hampshire Presidential Primary is out of proportion with the true political importance of the Granite State.

But because it is the nation's first Presidential Primary it assumes an added psychological importance. The winners in New Hampshire get publicity and exposure which help them in the subsequent Presidential Primaries in Florida, Wisconsin and other states.

A move is now underway on Beacon Hill to have Massachusetts get in on New Hampshire's act. It is being spearheaded by State Senate President Kevin Harrington of Salem and State Representative Barney Frank of the Back Bay, two very articulate gents with facile minds who figure the Massachusetts economy might be helped by some of the money spent during Presidential Primaries in our neighborhoring state to the north.

Harrington and Frank are now seeking the passage of a bill which would advance the date of next year's Massachusetts Presidential Primary and have it held on the same date as New Hampshire's. But if New Hampshire does too much maneuvering to keep its good thing to itself, Massachusetts might just wind up with its own first-in-the-nation Presidential Primary.

Senate President Harrington and Representative Frank first tried to set up a New England regional Presidential Primary in which the primaries would be held on the same day in all six New England states. But the other New England states were not interested.

The New Hampshire Presidential Primary is now set for March 2 of next year Speaker George Roberts of the New Hamsphire House says that he will convene his lawmakers in December and move the Granite State Presidential Primary into February if Massachusetts schedules its primary for March 2.

Senate President Harrington declares that the Massachusetts Legislature will be in session shortly after New Year's Day next year and that if New Hampshire advances its Presidential Primary, he will keep in step by moving up the Bay State Primary.

The trouble is that if New Hampshire continues its dog-in-the-manger attitude, the Presidential Primaries will be held so early next year in Massachusetts and New Hampshire that there will not be much time for the Presidential candidates and their aides, advisers and supporters to come into either state to campaign–and spend money.

One of the contenders planning to come into New Hampshire next February to campaign is President Ford. He would be obliged to add Massachusetts to his list if the Presidential Primaries are held on the same day in the two states.

New Hampshire officials act as if Senate President Harrington and Representative Frank were trying to trespass on their private preserves.

Barnstead Not Likely To Turn Other Cheek

William Barnstead, who was ousted from the chairmanship of the Republican State Committee by Senator Edward W. Brooke after giving ex-Governor Francis W Sargent the back of his hand in last fall's campaign, has been asked to turn the other cheek and help extricate the official GOP state organization from its financial dilemma.

But Barnstead insists it would be illegal for him to be that generous and great-hearted.

As far as this observer can ascertain, most highly placing Republicans are not talking to each other, but they claim that everything is harmonious within the GOP, that there is no row about money and no quarrel about anything.

Everybody is working to put the pieces of the party wreckage back in place, according to Republican leaders who concede privately that some of the GOP faithful may be going in different direction.

Barnstead, who seems to have faculty for turning up as a centre of controversy, is the chairman of a fund-raising dinner to be held in Waltham May 30, with former California Governor Ronald Reagan the principal speaker.

Reagan, of course, is the darling of the Republican conservatives and right-wingers and has been mentioned as a potential candidate against President Ford in next year's Presidential Primaries and as a possible Third Party candidate for President.

John Sears, who succeeded Barnstead as chairman of the Republican State Committee, has requested 25 percent of the money raised by Barnstead at the May 30 dinner to help out the financially hard pressed GOP committee.

However, Barnstead, who insists his relations with the Republican State Committee are friendly, claims it would be illegal for him to share the proceeds of the fund-raising dinner with the committee.

Barnstead delcares that the money raised at the dinner will be contributed to grass roots organizations and local candidates. The Republican State Committee apparently does not qualify as a "grass roots organization."

Why Barnstead should be the one to parcel out the money raised at the dinner at which Reagan will speak, is not clear to his onlooker, but he apparently designated nimself in that capacity.

Republican State Committee Chairman John Sears, who seems to be making little headway in raising the Bay state GOP from the ashes of defeat, disaster and despair, diplomatically denies that there is any fight between Barnstead and himself. He says he's happy over the Reagan dinner arrangements. What he has to be happy about is a mystery.

But Sears adds that, in the future, events such as the Reagan dinner should be sponsored by the Republican State Committee That indicates to some extent how happy he is by Governor Dukakis of the death penalty but would be overturned by a 26-13 vote.

But we overlooked the fact that the 40th vote in the Senate is possessed by Senate President Kevin Harrington.

Harrington, who is presently opposed to the capital punishment concept, will vote to sustain the Governor's veto.

That means the move to revive the death penalty in Massachusetts and to prescribe death in the electric chair as the punishment for certain types of murders, will not be successful this year unless the police and other law-enforcement groups lobbying for the passage of a death penalty bill can shift one of the 13 Senators opposed to placing such a law back on the statute books.

Feeling is extremely high on this issue, and it will become even higher after Governor Dukakis vetoes the measure which has been enacted in both legislative bodies by substantial margins.

The the outcome of the death penalty battle will be decided by one vote in the Senate.

Will South Viets Go on Welfare Rolls?

While almost all Americans favor humanitarian assistance for the war-weary people of South Vietnam, the cold, hard fact is that the South Vietnamese, who are being evacuated to the United States, will offer a very difficult problem for this nation and its people.

Many observers believe President Ford acted impulsively and did not weigh the consequences when he ordered a large-scale evacuation of South Vietnamese refugees. Ford could be getting into trouble which will cause his defeat next year.

Because of the recession and the high unemployment rate the refugees from South Vietnam are being brought here at the worst possible time.

How are they going to exist? That seems to be a question which has not been fully explored by President Ford and his advisers.

Are we going to put them up in refugee camps and give them a few grains of rice each day? That, of course, is hardly practical. They would be better off if they remained in South Vietnam in such a turn of events.

Some of them presumably will compete for jobs which already are in short supply, and they probably will compete for the more menial jubs held by poor people.

The guessing here is that most of them will find their way onto the welfare rolls and be supported by the already over-burdened, over-taxes American people.

If the American economy suffers from Ford's action in bringing a large number of South Vietnamese to this country, it could result in his ouster from office next year.

The truth is that this country has grown poor trying to support the rest of the world.

NTA president raps story

To the Editor:

As president of the Newton Teachers Association and a member of the Educational Press Association of America, wish to register my strong protest regarding an article entitled: "52 teachers not rehired, 80 get tenure," which appeared on page 3 of the Thursday, April 24 edition of the Newton Graphic.

First, in a short blurb appearing on page one of the aforementioned article was described as follows: "School Committee tentatively cuts 52 teaching positions. See page 3."

In fact, the School Committee had not cut "52 teaching positions," but rather, had cut 52 teachers. The School Committee had previously cut but 23 teaching positions.

Second, School Committeewoman Dorothy Reichard was quoted in the article as stating three main reasons for deciding not to rehire teachers. However, since our contract would prohibit the attaching of specific reasons not to rehire teachers to the names of the 52, the reader was left to guess which teachers were not coming back because of poor evaluation and which teachers were not coming back because of declining enrollment.

Third, while the publication of the names of the 52 teachers may have been legal, it was journalistically inappropriate, because it tended to undermine the traditional support which this community has always rendered to its educators.

Furthemore, I wonder if the Graphic has given careful and due consideration to the implications of this article: how can we assess the damage which has been done to the professional careers of those 52 individuals? How are these 52 individuals supposed to maintain control and proper decorum in their classrooms for the next two months now that their non-rehiring has been made the subject of community gossip?

In a recent press release I stated that by cutting $500,000 from the School Committee budget, the Board of Aldermen had delivered to Newton educators a strong message, namely: "debased the quality of education in this City." The article about the 52 teachers which appeared in the Graphic was so unprofessional as to deliver the same kind of message to the educators.

At this point in time, if the Graphic is at all interested in serving the community, it should consider the morale of the educators who daily influence the citizens of Newton.

Robert T. Provencher,
President.

Abolishing neighborhood councils

Dear Mayor Mann:

We, the Newton Highland Area Council, the only Neighborhood Area Council in Newton, would like to let you and the citizens of Newton know that the Board of the League of Women Voters and some members of the Board of Aldermen have recommended to the Board of Aldermen that Article 9 of the Newton City Charter (which allows for the formation of Neighborhood Area Councils) be eliminated This action could subsequently abolish our Neighborhood Area Council (NAC) and Service Area.

In most of the short time since our election in December, we have been fighting for our very existence. In March the Board of the League printed a policy statement against Article 9. In April, at a Legislation and Rules Committee hearing called for the sole purpose of discussing Article 9, the Committee only proposed eliminating the words "substantive power" from Article 9, otherwise leaving that section of the Charter intact.

Last Thursday night at an I & R hearing for Charter revisions, the issue of the existence of Article 9, which we thought was closed, was brought up again. This time I & R voted to recommend eliminating Article 9 from the Charter. Is it possible that the very Committee that recommended to the Board of Aldermen to establish the Newton Highlands Are Council is now recommending in effect for that very Council to be abolished before it has had a fair trial? We would like to respond publicly to some of the criticisms of Article 9.

The League is concerned about the possibility of substantive powers being granted to the NACs. Our resolution does not provide for substantive authority, but only advisory authority. The Newton Highlands Neighborhood Council is primarily a communication agency, distributing information and gathering opinions, encouraging citizen participation in government. Our Council can not take a position on an issue — we only report the opinion of the community. This is a clear distinction between our operating procedures and those of other neighborhood organizations.

Another criticism of Article 9 is that if Service Area Boundaries do not coincide with ward boundaries, then people in the ward, but not in the Service Area, will not be represented equally by their Aldermen. Every Alderman is aware that the opinion we report only represents a percentage (minimum 20 percent) of the registered voters in our area, and the Aldermen should weigh that opinion in a proportional ratio to the total population he or she serves. The Aldermen learn the opinions of their constituents by the letters and telephone calls they receive. How often does this response amount to 20 percent of their population?

It is stated in the Charter and in our resolution that we will not receive city funds. Some are concerned about NACs receiving federal or state funds. We agree that if federal and state monies are given to the city, they become city funds. However, we feel strongly that we should be able to apply independently to public (state and federal) as well as private agencies for funding to support our communications network and other prospective neighborhood projects.

Objection has been raised to Council meetings in the public library. We would like to point out that we do not have exclusive use of any space, and that any group of citizens may use the library free of charge. Objection has also been raised about an NAC using other city services, such as the office of city solicitor, election, and treasurer. This has a positive consequence for the city: the city solicitor, the Board of Aldermen' the election commissioner and the treasurer are able to supervise our actions and monies.

In their report to the Board of Aldermen recommending the elimination of Article 9, the League uses the words "divisive" and "parochial" in regard to neighborhood representation in the form of NACs. The League prefers village organizations on a non-government level and ward organizations on a government level. NACs fit into neither category. The people of Newton Highlands, wanting to participate in city government on a local level, chose to organize as an NAC because they felt a strong sense of community and identity with their neighborhood, not their ward. In fact, we feel that the ward districts are artificial divisions of the city compared to the neighborhoods or villages. Identity with a local neighborhood is a positive concept, not negative. Notice that the Newton Times has recently focussed on the different villages in Newton and their individuality. Each neighborhood has its own special needs by the nature of its different population makeup, topography, economic base and physical conditions.

Encouraging citizen participation in government on a local level, where the citizen can see the direct cause-effect response to his or her own needs, is the concept behind the decision to include Article 9 in the Charter in the first place. Increased confidence in city government results from this kind of participation.

People resent assessments

To the Editor:

"What is the value of your home?" seems to be the only subject of conversation heard in Newton. The resentment of the new assessments is overwhelming.

"I worked for the same company for 15 years and now I'm out of work. When my unemployment check runs out—."

He put up his hands in dispair as he turned away from me.

"I'm retired now. We have lived in our home for 30 years now I'm old so where shall I get another $900? It is all I can do to get along now. You think I should go on welfare?"

But I could see that this proud old man would never to on welfare.

"How do you feel about placing a lien on your home if you do not have the money for taxes," I asked a man who has lived in Newton for 48 years. His face was ashen as he answered with a great deal of pain, "No! No! OUR HOME IS ALL WE HAVE TO GIVE TO THE CHILDREN. We must give it to them free and without this additional financial burden. Does the city really want to take our homes from us?"

One dear elderly man reasurred me, "Nobody should sell his home. Everybody should sell his home. Everybody should compalin. The assessors will appease everybody a little. Not enough, but a little. Somehow we will get along."

As of April 22 more than 6,000 homeowners had applied for appointments for reappraisal.

I asked several unhappy homeowners why they did not protest? One widow said, "I don't talk so good, and who will listen to me?

Another said, "I'm flattered that they think my home is so valuable."

"Taxes are always going up, so who can fight City Hall?"

Perhaps one of the most touching was from a woman whose husband is unemployed, "I would complain but I'm afraid that they might raise my taxes even higher because my husband fixed up the kitchen. So what shall we do?"

I can still hear the tearful lament of a 60-year-old working women, "My entire check goes to pay the existing taxes. Can I honestly say that my house is worth less because I can not afford to pay more?" And so she does not question the new assessments even tho it is more than she can bear.

And another said, "My husband is a proud man who always pays his bills even tho the family must make sacrifices."

I questioned an elderly couple as they came out of Memorial hall where they had just had a hearing. They had had a professional appraiser go thru their home (additional expense) and do the talking for them because, "I might say the wrong thing and now I won't sleep nights because I won't know how i made out till July 2!"

"How would you reduce the taxes?" I asked.

Almost everyone said, "Reduce the school budget." Or "Lets vote out the entire School Committee."

"Of course we love our children and we want the best education for them. But can we eally afford to sacrifice our very homes?"

ESTELLE MASON
NEWTONVILLE

Clarification

A story in the May 1 Graphic quoted Ald. Robert Tennant as saying some real estate brokers were "harassing" elderly people who have become frightened at the prospects of increased taxes do to revaluation.

Tennant clarified his statement this week and explained that he was referring to "unlicensed employees of real estate brokers" and so-called "kitchen brokers."

He declined to name anyone specifically

"The majority of brokers are very professional and businesslike," Tennant said. "They do a thorough job in a very professional manner."

Publishing the list

(The following letter was sent to the Newton Supt. of Schools Aaron Fink with a copy to the Newton Graphic) Dear Mr. Fink:

The executive board of the Beethoven PTA would like to take strong issue with a recent Newton Graphic publication which listed by name staff members of the Newton Public Schools who were not being rehired.

This form of publicizing teacher dismissals is not in keeping with the high starndards of professionalism which the superintendent of schools and the Newton School Committee represent.

We certainly hope that this practice will not continue. It is detrimental to the morale of our teachers, our children and our school system.

Mrs. Marc Titlebaum, corresponding secretary
Beethoven PTA

Regal answers Hawkridge . . .

Dear Ed,

In view of our longstanding good relationship I am a bit disappointed that your first correspondence with me in over two years was not a personal note or a phone call, but rather a caustic letter in the local press.

Ed, on what basis do you call me a "kneejerk spender?" The facts show that during the lengthy school committee budget discussions I personally moved and-or voted for cuts of $618,000 from the administration's original recommendations. I initiated one of the largest cuts of all; namely $84,560 from the maintenance of plant account. And I personally moved further cuts of $55,000 which unfortunately a majority of the committee chose not to support Does this sound like the action of "kneejerk spender?"

Perhaps you give me that epithet because I was the only school committee member to propose an increase on a recommended item. A majority of the committee agreed with me and $5,000 was added for music and drama at the secondary level. This is an increase I am proud to be the author of.

The school committee voted its budget for fiscal year 1976 back in february of this year. The tax rate will not be set until July. If the $500,000 that the Aldermen have cut from out budget were to be restored before July, either by a taxpayers' suit or howsoever, I would then personally favor looking to see if there had been any occurences or change between February and July which would enable the school committee to revise its budget downward and therby lower the tax vote. Does this sound like the position of a "kneejerk spender?"

All school committee budget discussions were open to the public. All budget information given to the school committee was and is available to you and to every member of the general public. Yet while you admit that you have not even looked at all the information available to you on the school budget, you nonetheless claim that you could cut $500,000.00. I see this as a flip comment based on inadequate information.

As you well know, the Newton School Committee, in deliberating the budget, demands a huge amount of detailed information. We work extremely hard to keep all costs down to a minimum commensurate with our determination of adequate programming for Newton. Over the years we have been hit with mandated state programs (hot lunch, free transportation for private and parochial school students, etc.) that have added substantially to our costs. It is true that over the past 10 years our budget has increased substantially while our enrollment has declined. But Aldermen always choose to ignore the fact that during the same time period the city side of the budget, despite a declining Newton population, has increased just as much as the school budget. ten years ago the schools accounted for slightly less than half of the total city budget. In 1974 the schools still accounted for slightly less than half the total city budget. The Newton School Committee works hard to keep its costs down. The Aldermen do the same. Let us all recognize this.

On the question of the "Bill to equalize educational opportunity" which I feel, your facts are totally in error. My bill would have had virtually no cost effect on Newton since under our present METCO plan we will have almost as many minority children in Newton schools as my bill would have required. Also my bill provided for payment to be made by the sending community to the receiving community. Thus the cost to Newton would have been virtually nothing. Your allegation that I would "greatly increase — enrollment, — at Newton's expense" simply does not square with the facts. iPD Finally, Ed, during the years we served together on the Newton School Committee, I found you to be a most reasonable conservative. Unfortunately your letter now makes you sound like a "kneejerk" reactionary.

and Hawkridge replies

Dear Herb:

I owe you two apologies. The first is for not writing you directly instead of to the editor. The second is for confusing your bill (H.4936) with another.

While the issue of this bill is now moot, the legislation having killed it on April 30, I cannot see how Newton could educate about 1,000 more ghetto children with the estra services they need for $400,000. While incremental accounting has some validity when small numbers are involved, when larger numbers are substituted this no longer is true, as many businesses have found out in bankruptcy. If our average cost has grown to nearly $2,000 per pupil, our cost for educating 1,000 more special needs children would surely exceed $1,000,000. I am sorry, but I must stand on the conclusions in this regard of my first letter.

But what truly concerns me with your response is your feeling that I was addressing myself to this year's budget in particular. As you know I was not able to attend school committee meetings this past winter. I could not talk intelligently about this year's deliberations, so I purposely avoided doing so.

But I was not trying to be "flip". I based my remarks on the 50 percent increase of staff between 1957 and 1975. You did not choose to address your comments to this issue. Therefore I make the following offer to the Newton School Committee, through you, if you would be so kind to relay it.

I will be free of my obligations, except for one week of vacation, after June 1. I will offer to try to establish position papers on areas I will list below that I believe deserve School Committee scrutiny. These will not be editorials but rather before and after comparisons that should enable the School Committee to make informed policy decisions, ones that I agree that only the duly elected members of a School Committee should make. Four areas that I would propose to evaluate initially are these:

1. Varsity Athletics: During my last term, I was gradually coming to the conclusion that the varsity teams at the high school were becoming the tail that was wagging the Phys-Ed dog. I would propose to compare enrollment in Varsity Teams, expenditures for coaching staff as well as other costs and expenditures in other Phys-Ed areas, recognizing that girls are rightfully receiving a bigger share of the available dollars now.

2. Secondary School electives: An area that demands real examination is the staff-pupil ratio of our secondary schools. I have more than a suspicion that lightly patronized electives are utilizing significant staff resources. A comparison in this area between 1957 and 1975 should tell the School Committee what the facts are and allow them to determine what changes of policy in this area should occur. After all, the reputation of the Newton Public Schools in 1957 was probably better than now. That was the year we had two

Dear Mrs. Titlebaum:

We too regret any inconvenience or embarrassment resulting from the publication of the list of appointments and non-reappointments in the Newton Graphic on April 24.

This action was not initiated by the school administration, but was in response to a specific request to us from the newspaper. With some exceptions which did not apply in this case, votes taken by the School Committee in executive session cannot remain privileged and the list had to be made public upon request.

When Dr. Laurits released the list he explained to the Graphic reporter that by far the largest number of the non-reappointments were due to declining enrollment and to the fact that positions must be available to teachers now on leave. iSH Aaron Fink Superintendent

Nice work

To the Editor:

Thanks to the Newton Fire and Police Departments and all those who responded so effectively to the emergency of Saturday evening when the tank truck exploded, a dangerous situation was promptly brought under control and the public's safety assured. The high praise being given is certainly well merited.

Treatment of vets

To the Editor:

Once again, it has been brought to our attention, and it disturbs me, that there is a tendency on the part of some unthinking people, to look down on the nations war veterans, cut his benefits and cast him adrift.

Let me say this, a fool may be known by six things: anger without cause; change without progress; speech without profit; inquiry without object; putting trust in a stranger; and mistaking foes for friends.

My dear American citizens, let us not fall into this trap. Let us not be lulled into complacency. Our veterans are precious to us. We are dealing here with America's finest. He was and is committed to fight to the death for the ideals of freedom around the world. Can we, in conscience, pay heed to those who would destroy, eliminate or otherwise place in jeopardy these rights and benefits that were so rightfully given to our Disabled Veterans.

The words of the late Bernard Baruch are just as true in 1975 as when he reported to President Franklin Delano Roosevelt 30 years ago at the end of World War II, and will be as true as long as this nation has war veterans - when he stated, "We must not fail the veteran - for then we fail ourselves".

On Feb. 27, 1919, Governor Calvin Coolidge went to the Senate and the House of Representatives, the following message. "It is desirable that proper action should be embodied in one pice of legislation to meet the requirements of the present and future and take care of the Veterans of all wars."

For almost 80 years, there has been upon the statute books in the Commonwealth, a Veterans Preference Act. In 1896, the Justices of the Supreme Judicial Court, in an opinion on the Constitutionality of the law, spells it all out. (166 Mass 589-595). This opinion was interpreted by the greatest jurist of modern times, our own Oliver Wendall Holmes.

We believe that this opinion is all the more true today and such ought to be the opinion of the Geneeral Court in 1975. Of one thing, both our friends and enemies can be sure "The Disabled American Veterans" shall continue to remind this country of our obligation, and that is to see that we as a nation "shall not fail the veteran, he did not fail us, we can do no less than show him "We care - We are One".

Gardeners say thanks

To the Editor:

We would be pleased to have you publish this letter of thanks to Ald. David Jackson as an open letter so that others may know of his contribution to the creation of garden plots. Dear Ald. Jackson:

The Newton Community Garden0Association wants to express its great appreciation to you for all your efforts in creating the garden plots on Winchester Street.

We know that without you. this project would never have become a reality. The enthusiastic response at the City Hall meeting April 8 attests to the desire of the residents of Newton for this opportunity to garden, and thus enhance their health, their recreation and their well-being.

Gas explosion raises havoc

they sprayed the fire with water to contain it, then used foam added to the water to extinguish the leaping, spreading flames.

The extent of damage to the bridge is not yet completely known, but most severely effected were conduits of wires under the surface of the road.

The fire department lost 1,500 feet of cable in the fire that had to be temporarily replaced to restore fire box service, and telephone and utility workers were busy for days trying to evaluate and repair damages.

Massachusetts Turnpike Authority Public Relations Director Jack Dixon said Tuesday, "The bridge itself is safe, but a lot of steel on the top deck will need to be replaced."

Engineers for the turnpike will be conducting tests this week and decide the exact extent of repairs that need to be made.

The turnpike was closed until 2 a.m. Sunday morning under the bridge, and traffic on the bridge was reduced from one to three lanes, depending on the amount of space needed by workmen Tuesday.

Traffic signals were restored on the bridge Tuesday, and an extra safety officer and school bus were put on duty to ensure the safety of children going to and from Underwood School from the Charlesbank Road area.

The city street department is working on plans to replace the damaged road and sidewalk on top of the bridge and make temporary changes in the islands on the bridge to facilitate traffic flow.

As the gasoline seeped out of the truck, it ran into the sewers and eventually into the Charles River, where small pools of it were still catching on fire Sunday night.

This eventually burned off or evaporated safely without creating a hazard to the nearby Charles River Yacht Club.

The greatest hazard was during the fire's height and shortly afterwards when the fuel in the sewers ignited and exploded, sending flames through sewer lids into the air.

Two sisters who were observing the fire were treated for facial burns at Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

they were Lynn and Donna MacQuarrie, 33 and 34 respectively, of 46 Park St., Newton.

Another fireman was also hurt on the right knee. He was John Garrabedian of 74 Albert Rd., Auburndale.

While firemen had a hard time keeping the fire from following the free flowing gasoline, policemen at the scene had almost as hard a time keeping the crowd out of the way.

All but two of the police units in the city were at the scene, trying to keep pedestrians, bicyclists, and automobiles out of the way of firefighters and danger.

About 1,000 onlookers tried to get as close as they could, resisting instructions from the firemen and police.

Appeals like "All right, everybody move back. This is no game," did not seem to work very well.

Later, when explosions were seen and heard coming from the sewer manholes, police warnings of, "Get out of here, people. Someone's gonna get killed. You saw what happened over there" (referring to the sisters that were injured) seemed to work a little, but the crowd hung on long after dusk and most of the fire was out.

increase will mean a raise to $12,923.

Lebner said this is the most favorable factfinder report any city has received under the state's new collective bargaining law, staying the closest to any offer that a city has made.

While Lebner may hope that the final arbi tration, which includes one person from the city, one from the union, and another person agreed on by both, will stay in favor of an final offer the ci makes, John Quinn feels the ty 15 percent increase originally asked for is still reasonable.

Chase results in 2 arrests

Police arrested two men Monday for allegedly stealing a motorcylce form the Dedham Police Department garage.

Newton officers saw a Cadillac speeding on Beacon Street in Waban, and pulled the car over.

In the trunk was a Harley Davidson motorcycle, which was traced to Bridget Whelton of Dedham. She said the cycle was in the Dedham Police garage, and the Dedham Police had not known it was gone until the Newton Police called.

Arrested for larceny of a motor vehicle were Joseph Mazzarino, Jr., 27, of 257 Winfield Park, Saugus, and James R. Murphy, 19, of 81 Culper St., East Boston.

the elected council would not be eligible for employee benefits as other city employees are, but may be eligible for retirement if they are salaried.

Ald. Susan Schur, not a member of the Legislation and Rules Committee but an avid supporter of the Newton Highlands council, said Aritcle 9 in the charter "gives official recognition to the citizens' voices."

Ald. Richard Bullwinkle, a member of the Legislation and Rules Committee, said, "I thought that was what I got elected for."

Committee Chairman Thomas Concannon felt the city has inordinate large board of aldermen and didn't need the councils.

He moved that the entire article be deleted, and it passed 3-1, with Ald. Joan Saklad opposed.

Discussion about when the mayor's salary should be raised stirred up discussion which led the group to limiting the amendment mentioned above.

The aldermen decided that no other restriction, except that of the current mayor's salary be raised, would keep the raise from becoming a subject of backscratching between the Board and the mayor, which the voters would be able to detect themselves.

The restriction only assures that raise would have to be approved by the Board before election papers are due to the Election Commission so someone could decide to be a candidate after the decision was made.

The committee also voted 3-1 to reduce to five percent the number of voters' signatures required on a referendum petition to the Board that must be collected in 20 days after any measure is passed by the Board.

Ald. Louis Egelson, Bullwinkle, and Concannon voted in favor, Ald. Saklad was opposed, and Ald. Andrew Magni, Sidney Small, Jason Sacks, and Eliot Cohen were absent.

Ald. Schur urged that the Capital Improvement Plan be be given more importance by making it mandatory that it be considered by the Board before or during the time it deliberates on the budget and this was passed by a 3-1 vote.

Many cahnges in the language of the charter were approved, and the committee voted to remove the restriction that new School Committee members can only serve two consecutive terms.

Parade

simultaneously with the Memorial Day Parade May 25.

Donna Zaremba, administrative assistant to Mayor Theodore Mann, said the Boy Scouts and Channel 2 are among new entries to the parade that would not have been able to march last Sunday.

More than 2,000 school students also are ready to join the parade down Washington and Walnut streets to City Hall.

The cake, donated by the Marriot Hotel, was nearly two feet wide and one foot high and was a replica of the Jackson Homestead .

After enjoying the cake, Mayor Mann stepped outside with the citizens present and dedicated the new flagpole at the homestead.

Harry Whalen, president of the Friends of Jackson Homestead who financed the flagpole, presented it to the city.

Congressman Robert F. Drinan and Ald. Wendell Baukman were officials present at the rained-on ceremony.

3. The Arts: You and I both supported the Arts when I was on the School Committee but if you have to choose between meat and potatoes and dessert, you may have to cut down on the apple pie, at least if you want to lose weight.

I think a comparison should be made between 1957 and 1975 I could predict how you and Ellie would vote when I was serving with you. Naturally, I do not know how the four newer members of the School Committee would vote; I understand that at least one is really unpredictable. But I reiterate, in the case of truly debatable expenditures, most of the time you were on the side of the expenditure. Obviously, you voted for many reductions on all levels to find out what the facts are. Then, and only then, can the School Committee make an informed choice.

4. Supervisory Staff: I suggest that it could be highly informative to compare supervisory staffing levels in 1957 and 1975. We would have to agree on a definition of supervisor but, having done so, and recognizing the policy of moving many such individuals into the schools, the School Committee would again have an opportunity to make a choice.

Further thought, I am sure, will suggest other areas of compariyon, but this letter is getting too long. If the Committee agrees, I am certain that the necessary staff assistance would be provided.

Let's talk about the knee-jerk epithet. I would guarantee that that were obvious — we all did.

Reactionary can be defined as one whose attitudes constitutes a response to a stimulus. If you will accept this dictionary definition, which I suspect you will not, I am proud to be labelled a reactionary; because what I am asking the School Committee to do is to respond to change. My indictment is that the majority have failed to do so.

Finally, and for the edification of the editors, this is my last letter, at least until the School Committee gives me a new issue. I am not running for the School Committee, Herb, as has been suggested by at least one planted letter. Fourteen years is still long enough.

I must stand on my opinion that the School Committee should have reduced its budget, as suggested by the Finance Committee of the Board of Aldermen. I regret that citizens felt that a suit should be entered to restore the $500,000 that the Aldermen cut from the School Committee budget. I am saddened but not surprised that Mrs. Whitemore did not recognize the difference between now and 1959.

But if the School Committee should choose to accept my offer of service on the special assignment suggested above, perhaps Mrs. Rosenblum will contact me. And in closing, I should congratulate you and the School Committee because if you were quoted correctly in the paper, your meeting of April 28 sounded most encouraging.

Public servants honored for saving girl's life

The Insurance Agents of Newton presented their first Annual Community Service Award to Newton Police Officer Vincent Lipoma and Newton Firefighter Joseph P. Muzi at a luncheon at Valle's Steak House.

Association President David Krongard of the Maurice Helfant Agency explained that the Community Service Award was created by the association in order to express appreciation for extraordinary performance of duty by a public servant.

He pointed out that the actions of Vincent Lipoma and Joseph Muzi at the scene of a serious pedestrian accident last December exemplify the kind of community service deserving of the Association's highest recognition.

Patrolman Vincent Lipoma, on his way to report for duty stopped at the accident and recognized that the victim, a young girl, was in serious condition. Lipoma, who had recently concluded a course in Emergency Medical Training at the Newton-Wellesley Hospital, immediately started mouth to mouth resusitation. At this point, Firefighter Joseph P. Muzi came to the scene and at Lipoma's request applied external heart massage.

Both men continued their operations until the child was safely in the hands of medical personnel at Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

At the time, one of the doctors indicated that the prompt and efficient work by Lipoma and Muzi was instrumental in saving the child's life

Norman C. Aronson, Chairman of the Awards Committee stated "The performance of Officer Lipoma and Firefighter Muzi was such that all of Newton can be proud of their skills and dedication to the professions they are engaged in, and the Insurance Agents of Newton are pleased to recognize these men and the service they represent."

Old pools need yearly check, new ones need building permits

With summer near, the city's Public Buildings Department reminds citizens of the Swimming Pool Ordinance, no. 519, which regulates construction and maintenance of swimming pools.

The department is particularly concerned that as of May 1, no one has filed the annual certificate of electrical inspection required on that date for any pool that has electrical devices associated with it.

Building Commissioner Gene Larson said he has no intention of prosecuting anyone for late inspection.

He said he was more concerned with making everyone aware of the ordinance and making sure the seim pools are safe.

In the event of an electrical shock at a pool area, the commissioner said the property owner would have a better case in court if they could prove that they complied with the ordinance.

A summary of the ordinance follows, with the last paragraph pertaining to the annual inspection.

The ordinance applies to any facility used or intended to be used for swimming, wading or recreational bathing, whether located indoors or outdoors. Portable pools holding less than twenty-four inches of water are exempted.

The construction or erection of swimming pools requires a building permit.

Every outdooc swimming pool shall be completely surrounded at all times, whether or not filled with water, by a fence or wall not less than five feet in height This fence or wall must be constructed so as to make the pool impervious to view.

All gates or doors shall be qeuipped with a self-closing and self-latchkng device. Each such gate or door shall be kept locked at all times when the swimming pool is not in use.

Any swimming pool lighting fixture shall be directed at the pool and shall be shielded from view from any streeet or adjoining property.

Every residential swimming pool which has any associated electric wiring or electrical equipment shall be inspected annually prior to May 1 by a licensed electrician. In addition, the electrician, on or before May 1, shall file or cause to be filed with the Building Commissioner his certificate in writing staring that in his opinion such wiring and elecrrical equipment is in a safe operating condition and conforms with the elctrical code. Any wiring, outlets, or lights on a house related to a pool area must also be inspected.

Seven bands to march for Memorial Day fest

Henry R. Lever, re-elected adjutant general of the Newton Memorial Day Parade Committee, has advised that the annual Memorial Day Parade will be held in Newton on Sunday afternoon, May 25 with a starting time of 1 p.m.

As in past years the parade units will consist of representatives of all veterans organizations in Newton as well as civic, youth, fraternal and patriotic groups.

Lever has advised that to date the Memorial Day Committee has contracted for the participation of seven bands and drum and bugle corps with the former national champions from Pembroke, The Imperials, heading the list of units.

Jayne C. Driscoll, secretary for the committee, has advised that representatives of Newton veterans organizations have voted to maintain the same route of march.

The marchers will form at the parking lot at the corner of Washington and Craft Streets, Newtonville, march up Washington Street to Walnut Street and then to the Newton Cemetery.

Following memorial observances at the GAR monument and at the Veterans' Lot, the parade units will march back to Newton City Hall to pass in review before city, state and national officials.

Israel: musings on peace

By BRENDA TANGER
Special to the Graphic
Last in Series

When we crossed the Allenby Bridge from Jordan into Israel we saw how the "open bridges" policy is working. trucks laden with produce from the West Bank were crossing into Jordan and others were returning empty, a total of about 100 a day. (One man told us that before the '73 war so many people held dual passports that some Jordanians were complaining there was too much Hebrew being spoken on the streets of Amman.)

Our first meeting was with Avraham Harman, president of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem and former ambassador to the U.S.

One of our group asked, "Is it not true that some Arab leaders would like to be more cooperative, but fear assassination?"

Said Harman without equivocation, "If we give back land, we may be taking a chance with suicide. I am willing to take a risk of suicide it they are willing to take a risk on assassination."

The questions relating to the PLO contention that Israel must become a democratic secular state aroused Harman's ire.

"There is no secular Arab country except Lebanon," he said "and they are not democratic."

Harman later added, "No one accuses Sweden of theocracy and yet Sweden must go to certain church authorities for some religious decisions."

At Hebrew University, we met with about a dozen students. There was a guard at the gate to examine packages, and the students said that guard duty had been established at other places on the campus as well, but that Israeli-Arab students were now refusing to participate as guards.

"Now," said one girl, "they consider themselves Palestinians instead of Israeli-Arabs'" and with this change in attitude some students have started worrying more about what was being carried in bags. "Now" she added, "Arab students really don't know where they belong."

Another student said that Arabs in the university now talk about the future PLO government in Israel. Some Jewish student reaction called that hypocrisy; others said it was disgusting, while the more outraged felt that those Arab students should be expelled.

Another day, we met with recent immigrants from the Soviet Union.

Victor Polski was an engineer and physicist, as was his wife. Aviva Braun was an architect who explained that coming from totalitarian world where someone else calls all the rules provides a disquieting background for those who must now learn how to handle new freedoms. But Boris Rubenstein said he often felt like a new-born child.

On the group's last day in Israel we attended a press session with Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin. From Rabin, as well as from other Israelis did we determine that there is a feeling about sultans, sheiks and kings working to undermine western civilization.

Said Rabin, "Israel is asked to take risks and give away so much that in the end it will have nothing to negotiate. The risk must be taken by both sides."

If King Hussein wished to have Palestinians in a negotiating group, that would be one thing according to the Prime Minister, but for the Israelis to accept a separate Palestinian entity on the west bank without an acceptance of the Israeli reality, was expressed as encouraging a new reign of terror from a border at which it had stopped.

I think that many, if not most of us, after visiting the five Middle East countries (Lebanon, Egypt, Syria, Jordan, Israel) were plagued by thoughts about the use of assassination from within as a means of expressing disapproval of political action, and about how this threat might be hindering any possible Mideast settlement.

Assassination has been tried so many times in Jordan where King Hussein has appeared to be the most flexible of Arab leaders. In fact, since the establishment of Israel, there have been over 75 political murders, about 20 of which were assaults upon top leaders and all of which represented attacks by Arab upon Arab.

With the exception of Syria, each country seemed to be calling out for peace, even as the Arab countries spoke of the Palestinians.

It should be noted that many Palestinians are not in camps, are educated and skilled and have found their way, as individuals, into Lebanese, Syrian and Jordanian business, political and professional circles.

But if any bid for peace must have Arafat's seal of approval, then a new question arises. How safe politically or physically would Arafat be within the PLO itself if he were to agree to recognition of Israel as a condition for a west bank Palestinian state?

When we were visiting the verbal 70-year-old Mrs. Wadad Nassif on the Syrian Golan Heights, one of our members asked her, "Why do you think people are always fighting?"

Mrs. Nassif never hesitated in answering, "If the hurricanes and earthquakes and other natural turmoil should subside, people will stop fighting."

Upper Falls considers becoming area council

Despite the shaky future of neighborhood area councils sanctioned under the City Charter, some Upper Falls residents are trying to form such a council.

Stephen Shugru, of 965 Chestnut St., Upper Falls, been said the first draft of the required petition has written, and a picni has been planned to gather c the 20 percent of registered voters' signatures of the area required.

The picnic is tentatively scheduled for May 31 on the lower playground near the tennis courts, and have set a rain date for the next Saturday. id a few of the organizers for a neighborood

Shugru sa council are members of the Upper Falls Improvement Association, and they are urging members of that group to organize under the charter.

The boundaries for the group would be the Charles River on the south and west, Boylston Street on the north, up to but not including Circuit Avenue on the east, following the postal zip code line south up to but not including Needham Street, and then accross to the river. The line would include all of Oak Street .

Shugru cited the neglect of the Metropolitan District Commission of the Echo Bridge area as one issue where official process and recognition might help get something accomplished.

He was also upset that no one in the neighborhood knew about the possible plan of the city using the Eliot Street inci site as a garage for all nerator city vehicles.

Shug ru can be contacted at 527-0138, and his neighbor Howard and Laurie Krosney, 969a Chestnut St., can be reached at 969-6246.

River cleanup this Saturday

If you "love that dirty water," as the song goes, but would like to see it a little cleaner, you can assist the Charles River Watershed Association (CRWA) with its annual cleanup of the river.

This Saturday, May 10, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., five sections of the river around Newton have been organized for the cleanup.

Newton coordinators are John Webber for the area from Watertown line to the Farwell George Martins, 527-6120, for the area from Rt. 9 to Rt. 16 ; Robert Smith, 244-9599, for the area from Echo Bridge to Nahanton Street; George Buffington, 332-6120, for the area from Nahanton Street to the West Roxbury line; and the CRWA from for the area from Rt. 16 to the Waltham line.

During this week before the cleanup, MDC park crews will be removing major debris. The Army Corps of Engineers will be assisting the CRWA on Saturday.

Recreation notes

Senior supervisor has long record of service

James E. "Jim" Murphy, senior recreation supervisor for the Newton Recreation Department, has an impressive record of service to the youth of the Garden City.

A native of Newton, Jim was an All Star pitcher for Our Lady's High School. After graduation he attended Villanova and Northeastern University where he majored in Business Administration.

In 1952 and 1958, he organized all five leagues of the Newton Little League program and later the Babe Ruth League, now known as the International League.

Following service as a member of the Board of Aldermen, he was appointed a member of the Newton Recreation Commission in 1950 and held that post until 1955 when he was named administrative assistant to then Mayor Howard Whitmore Jr.

Murphy joined the staff of the Newton Recreation Department in 1957 and was appointed senior recreation supervisor in 1963. Since that time, he has on several occasions served as acting recreation commissioner.

Known as the "Father of Little League in Newton," Murphy served as Little League commissioner and was the New England district delegate to the first Little League Conference held in Chicago, Ill.

He is a member of the Newton Lodge of Elks, the BoSox Club, the Gridiron Club, a Director of the Municipal Credit Union, Our Lady's Holy Name Society, Mass. Parks and Recreation Association, and former president of the Newton City Hall Associates.

Speaking on the future of Recreation, Murphy said, "We're on the upswing. What bothers me more today is the undue, malicious vandalism occuring on our playgrounds, and why?

"You'll always have vandalism, but the type we see today, the senseless destruction of equipment and facilities is frightening.

"The money we are spending on vandalism we could be spending on additional programs and equipment.

"We have appealed to young people at all age levels for suggestions on programs in an effort to reduce the instances of vandalism. Many times, to no avail.

"I feel we are talking about 10 percent of our kids where formerly, perhaps it involved only 5 percent.

"Disrespect for authority, generally, is on the increase and this goes right bask to the home. All of us at one time or another may have got into trouble. As a general rule it was not malicious, and the proper guidance in the home can very easily correct these problems.

"The growing demand for playing fields signifies future expansion of these facilities. Factors involved in the need for expanded facilities include the increase in the number of programs involving team play and the impact on Recreation Department facilities by the loss of playing fields at Newton High School. The elimination of these fields makes it necessary to schedule school athletic events on existing facilities and practically prohibits the use of local recreation areas by neighborhood young people. There's just no place for them."

Murphy and his wife, Margaret L., make their home at 309 Tremont St., Newton. They have three children, Mrs. Thomas F. Casey, James F. Jr., and Kevin J., six granddaughters and one grandson, all interested in sports.

Mofenson calls for elderly research

Rep. David J. Mofenson (D-Newton), House chairman of the Committee on Human Services and Elderly Affairs, urged the participants in a recent Brandeis-Boston University Gerontology Consortium to conduct needed research to help legislators make informed public policy decisions.

"The problems of the aging have been an iceberg issue in the formulation of political and social policies," Representative Mofenson said. "While the tip has been known for decades, the deeper elements are only now beginning to be fathomed."

"Research, especially that related to public policy formulation, is sorely needed. While awareness is a first step, we - especially those of us responsible for the development of responsive legislation - need information. One of the most serious problems of public policy making is the scarcity and quickly out-dated nature of information on which decisions are based."

"Without accurate and current information, we are forced to rely heavily on in stinctive judgments, stereotypes and generalizations. And this is unfortunate because one thing is increasingly clear, stereotype images of the elderly, generalizations which do not take into account significant individual and sub-group differences, are counter-productive to the effective development of programs to meet the needs of older Americans," Rep. Mofenson said.

Rep. Mofenson took note of a recent Lou Harris survey, sponsored by the National Council on the Aging, explaining that "if we are unclear on what the problems are, we will be less able to provide solutions."

In the survey, of those under 65, half think that the elderly are in poor health and live in fear of crime. 61 percent feel they suffer from loneliness.

But among the elderly themselves, Harris found that only 23 per cent reported they were in poor health or lived in fear of crime - and only 12 per cent said they suffered from loneliness.

"What do the survey findings mean?" Representative Mofenson questioned. "Are the elderly less concerned about their problems than the rest of the population? Or are the results a problem of some methodological error? What about regional or inter-elderly differences? Are some elderly too embarrassed to register their plights? And is not nearly 25 percent of the sample too many to live in poor health or fear of crime?"

"We still do not have a clear understanding of who are the elderly in Massachusetts - what are the key sub-groups in terms of needs and numbers. Within the large policy areas, how are different aged persons affected by the various problems. Furthermore, what are the different policy implications of defining the elderly along different chronological as opposed to functional or attitudinal criteria," Representative Mofenson asked.

"Although incomplete information inhibits the development of comprehensive planning and substantial targeting of priorities," Representative Mofenson noted, "the Massachusetts legislature is increasingly focusing attention on such elderly related issues as tax reform, nutrition, health care and transportation."

Mofenson concluded by inviting conference participants who have conducted or are conducting public policy oriented elderly research, especially those using Massachusetts data, to share their findings with the Human Services and Elderly Affairs Committee. "Legislative policy making is a cooperative endeavor," Mofenson said, "and we need your ideas, research and involvement."

May Fair at Burr School

City Committee calls for halt in budget cuts

After more than two hours of debate, the Newton Democratic City Committee voted last week to formally urge Governor Dukakis not to cut back on the delivery of human services to those in need.

In its resolution, the City Committee stated: "Though the Commonwealth and its residents face a severe financial crisis and though the efforts of the Governor for the economy and financial responsibility are welcome, the Newton Democratic City Committee hereby resolves to call upon the Governor to suspend measures cutting back on welfare and human services programs and to turn his attention and energies to developing equitable fiscal programs that will increase governmental income and not penalize the working poor, the unemployed, the sick and the handicapped, the children, the elderly and the retired."

During the month preceding the meeting, the various ward committees met to discuss and formulate specific resolutions concerning the Dukakis administration's economy moves and proposed welfare cuts. Underlying all the resolutions was the conviction that the poor and needy of Massachusetts should not bear the burden of the state's financial crisis.

At last week's meeting, the Ward 2 resolution was eventually used as the framework upon which amendments were offered.

Among the amendments voted down were a recommendation to provide a cost of living increase for low paid state employees and a special commendation to the Governor for his efforts toward cutting the fat out of the budget and increasing the efficiency of state government. Various proposals which made recommendations for specific types of tax increases were also not included in the final draft.

About 50 members of the City Committee attended the session which was chaired by City Committee Chairman David J. Mofenson, and held at the Newton Community Service Center

City receives $2,000 from pipe companies

The city has received a rebate of more than $2,000 as settlement of an antitrust suit filed against six national pipe manufacturers.

The state attorney general's office announced last week that it sent a check for $2,034.09 to Newton City Hall as one of 27 water departments in the state to receive parts of the nearly $70,000 settlement.

The 1973 case alleged that the iminate competition six companies "conspired to el by dividing the territories and selecting customers to which each company would sell the cast iron pipes," according to Atty. General Francis X. Bellotti's office.

Following a deadlocked jury, the companies agreed to pay $8.3 million throughout the country.

Water Commissioner Willard S. Pratt said the $2,000 represented about two percent of city's purchase from the companies over a seven or eight year period up to 1971 or 1972.

The six companies that made the settlement

Post 505 members rode bikes for charity

Explorer Post 505, based in Newton. sent nine boys to the American Youth Hostel Bicycling Double Century Qualifying Ride April 26-27. Riders must complete a 200 mile course within 24 hours.

Seven from Post 505 completed the event.

The past two Double Century events were rained out, but it only snowed and sleeted for this event.

Three young people came home from college especially for the ride. Ed Trumball, advisor of the post, rode 100 miles and fulfilled his pledge of 1453.00. Riders had solicited pledges for the Massachusetts Association of Retarded Children totalling $3000.

There was a total of 20 entrants in 200 miler; 13 finished, including the only two girls entrants. Local participants were Douglas Hanna, Burce McKenna, Sara Ross, Jay Corey, Dave Nelsen, lenis Bauka, Rudd Fountain.

Brian Egan completed last year's ride byt slept after 100 this time around.

Stuart Lerner, president of the post, pulled a muscle after 65 miles but went on to ride 130. Dave Woodruff got off to a fabulous night ride of 125 miles before giving in.

Several other over 100 mile rides are planned for the next few weeks while everyone is in shape.

Scout news

By JOHN CARROLL

At a Pack meeting held on April 30 at Williams School Auburndale, Cub Scout Pack 375 conducted "bridge crossing" ceremonies for 17 Webelos Scouts.

The ritual of crossing over the bridge is a significant step in the boy's Scouting lives inasmuch as some of the most important people they have had contact with take a personal and active part in the ceremonies. Parents, Den Leaders and Cub Master all participate in the removal of their Webelos neckerchiefs and the presentation of their new Boy Scout scarves.

The 17 boys crossing over to Boy Scouts were: Martin Lawson, Darryn Carroll, Brendan Parker, David Mafico, Patrick Jones, Korvid Nizarri, Mike Zafiropoulos, Jay Cox, Ezra Gould, Neal Hadro, Chris Noble, Scott St. Coeur, John Chaison, Eric Herndon, Paul Vaccaro, Eric Vogel and Malcolm Weiner Advancing from Bear into Webelos Scout were: Billy Johnston, Andrew Kier, Chris Murphy, Ricky Gaines, Joth McConathy, Peter Carpenter, Jeffrey Drew and Bobby Chambers.

Wrapping up the evening was a slide display presented by the Rev. Timba Mafico. The slides were well presented as the Rev. took the audience first to the scenic splendor of his native land Rhodesia across the continents of Africa and Europe and, finally, to the United States.

When, after a short stay in Cambridge, the Maficos moved to Auburndale, they registered their son David as a Cub Scout in Pack 375. From that point on, the Rev. Mafico and his camera were to be seen at almost every Cubbing activity that took place. One day in particular is etched deeply in my mind, while in between speaking engagements, Mafico attended the Webelos Craftsman Activity Day at Nobscot. Dressed in a business suit, no raincoat and low cut dress shoes, he made his way up the hill to Legion Hall in a steady rainfall, took a dozen or so pictures and made his way back down the hill to keep his next appointment. A very remarkable man! And it has been a pleasure to have had him with Pack 375!

TRAIL TIP - Lint from the family clothes dryer makes a good fire starter. You can pack a lot of it in a small plastic bag and it's light to carry. Even sparks from a flint will set it afire.

Dukakis and Bellotti address state LWV

Six hundred league members from throughout the Commonwealth will meet at the Marriott Motor Hotel in Newton on May 13 and 14 for the 26th biennial state convention of the League of Women Voters of Massachusetts.

Governor Michael Bukakis will address the convention on Wednesday noon. Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti will be the guest speaker at the banquet Tuesday evening.

Convention delegates will be considering the adoption of a new state study of decision making in public education. The scope of the study includes metropolitan structures and programs, collective bargaining, and financial independence of local school committees.

Many leagues, however, will be interested in working for the passage of a study item in other areas, including the administration of justice, specifically probate, and in mental and public health fields.

New league positions in transportation and administration of justice to be announced will be the basis for league action during the next few years.

Representing the Newton League as delegates will be Miriam Erlich, Judy Obermayer, Beverly Smith, Sieglinde Martin, Jane Leighton, Elaine Leppo, Bonnie Carter, Pam Valentinas, Fran Seasholes, and Betty Smith.

Welcoming remarks to the assemblage will be made by Miriam Erlich, president of the Newton league, and by Mayor Theodore Mann.

The convention will also be electing new state officers and members of the Board of Directors. From Newton, Florence Rubin has been nominated to serve for a second term as president of the state league. Mrs. Rubin is known for having served as Newton LWV president, as a member of the city Charter Commission, and currrently serving on many local civic associations and boards.

Residents help plan hospital health fair

Three Newton residents are helping plan a health fair at West Roxbury Veterans Administration Hospital, 1400 VFW Parkway, that will be Thursday, May 15, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Newton residents are invited to join in the fair, which is in observation of National Hospital Week.

Dr. Richard M. Ryan, Jr., Hospital Director, said, "With the growing public concern over health care cost and quality, this year's theme, A Constant Concern for a Healthy Community, is particularly appropriate."

Dr. Ryan said three Newton residents involved in the planning include Michael L. Fisher, who is coordinator of National Hospital Week Activities, and is the hospital's administrative officer for ambulatory care service.

Also Kathy Marshak, who is in charge of the Health Fair Reception Committee and is a personnel management specialist at the hospital and Rosemary Phillips who is in charge of public relations for the Health Fair and is acting chief of the Medical Illustration Service.

Tve fair will include a health awareness panel of hospital physicians, lead paint screening, a good diet booth, home and fire safety demonstrations, home health care information provided by members of the hospital's nursing staff, and a body mechanics demonstration.

There will also be a Veterans assistance and information booth and health careers information which will be made available.

Drinan files to keep fuel bills down

Congressman Robert F. Drinan feels most people were cheated by oil companies and distributors last winter.

Drinan announced last week that he has introduced legislation requiring the federal government to strictly enforce existing pricing regulations.

The priest-congressman said, "The lack of enforcement by the government has resulted in the American consumer being consistently overcharged for energy due to widespread pricing violations by energy producers and suppliers.

"The Government Accounting Office reported in December, 1974, that violations and fraudulent practices by refineries alone cost the consumer between $1 and $2 billion.

"The Federal Energy Administration (FEA), which is responsible for enforcing the federal regulations, then revealed that 'tens of millions of dollars' in energy overcharges had been discovered.

"In March of this year the FEA also disclosed that Americans in rural communities were overcharged by $80 million for propane during the 1973 Arab oil embargo," Drinan said.

The violations which have most often led to overcharges include kickbacks and payoffs to brokers, excessive brokerage fees, excessive transportation and handling cost' violations of mandatory allocation regulations, and unnecessary off-loading and physical movements to increase costs.

"In a number of instances, the price of the fuel oil was raised 300 percent while the oil moved only a few miles from refiner to fuel storage terminals," the Congressman said.

Drinan has filed two pieces of legislation aimed at remedying the lack of energy price enforcement. The first bill' H.R. 3715, requires the president to take all necessary actions to enforce strictly the pricing regulations issued under the Emergency Petroleum Allocation Act of 1973.

The president must report to the Congress within 90 days of the bill's enactment with respect to the compliance and enforcement actions that have been taken.

The second measure sponsored by Drinan, H.R. 251, requests the Department of Justice to investigate possible conflict of interest situations in the FEA.

"In August of 1974, I learned from the FEA that 62 former oil company executives work at the Energy Administration in GS-13 through top policy level jobs," the Congressman maintained.

"There has been widespread interest in these two pieces of legislation since I have introduced them. Twenty-eight members of Congress have cosponsored the two bills, and I am hopeful that we will move forward in this important area in the near future. The consumer has been overcharged for energy for too long, and action must be taken," the Congressman said.

Say "Thanks, Mom"

Sunday, May 11th is Mother's Day and a great time to say, "Thanks, Mom."

Jewelry, accessories and lingerie are wonderful gift choices and they come in every price range—both luxurious and practical.

There's new excitement in today's loungewear fashions—tacky bathrobes and wrinkled housecoats are out. This is the era of easy-care permanent press fabrics and no-iron knits which pop out of the dryer looking perky and new.

Many spring loungewear fashions are available with built-in bras and linings which allow a woman to wear them on the patio or at casual evening parties. Today's loungewear fabrics and colors know no season. Lightweight doubleknits in delicious peaches and lime are tempting anytime, anywhere.

If you're shopping for at-home clothes for Mom and you're not sure of her size, the caftan is an ideal choice. Its big shape requires only an approximate size, such as Small, Medium or Large—often times the garment is purposely "unsized" and has a tag which reads "Fits all sizes."

The caftan with chemise styling is now available in short or long versions. This look generally has shirring, stitching and some detail work on the yoke (square or scoop neck) full dropped-shoulder sleeves and full skirts.

Some of the most exciting at home fashions are inspired by the glamorous old movies—only now they have the virtues of today's modern fabrics...fluid crepes and tricots, flowing jerseys with the anti-cling qualities as well as beautiful fabrics of "Qiana" nylon. Be sure to look for instructions on the label or tag and avoid hard-to-care-for fabrics.

Does Mother have a spring bag? Roomy carryall totes are lighthearted and gay. There are those with full-length outside zippers in tapestry fabrics...crisp, finely-woven straw bags enriched with gleaming gold hardware trim as well as sleek envelope styles.

Marvelous natural color hemp-straw bags with double wooden handles as well as butcher bag styles with rope handles are low priced yet serve many purposes during summer months. Mom can tuck a bathing suit, cap, towel and sandwich into this tote bag or take it to do the marketing when carrying small parcels can be a nuisance.

There are also lustrous leathers with swingy shoulder straps. The trim but spacious elongated satchel in white simulated lizard with gold ornamental closing is a practical, elegant gift.

And for glamorous nights there are delicate, exquisite evening bags on every price level. The best gift is the unusual—the extra bag that Mother might not be self-indulgent enough to buy for herself.

A gift of evening slippers will certainly delight her and if size, style and color are a problem, ask your local shoe store about a gift certificate. Speaking of slippers, bed slippers with matching robe, both in lightweight fabrics, are ideal for travel.

Sweaters have long been important wardrobe additions and few women have ever felt they couldn't use "one more" sweater. From short-sleeve pull-overs to over-the-hip cardigans, sweaters make excellent gifts.

How long has it been since Mother's bought herself a watch? There are now an endless variety to choose from at affordable prices—white faces, colored faces, miniature shapes, outsized shapes, leather-like straps, gold and silver-tone bands. There are also watches which are disguised as bracelets with intricate detailing of design on one side and dial on the other.

Fragrance has long been the ideal gift on this holiday. The prettiest morning-glory blue chintz pattern was chosen by Estee Lauder as a wrapping for her boutique fragrance collection. You can choose Youth-Dew, a hauntingly beautiful scent or the more sophisticated Estee....and then there is the out-of-doors joy of Aliage.

There are many wonderful, thoughtful down-to-earth gifts that are relatively inexpensive yet will bring Mother special joy for months. Visit your garden center and buy a half dozen or so bulbs, garden gloves, a straw coolie hat and gardening book.

If gardening is not her thing, how about a series of art lessons, tickets to a play or a beginner's needlepoint kit....after all, it's not the gift that is important but rather the thought behind it that Mothers treasure most.

Question: I am looking for two banana recipes—one is a banana poundcake that does not call for milk and a banana cream pie. These recipes are actually for my daughter-in-law and she plans on serving them at a party in Atlanta, Georgia. Thank you for your help.

Mrs. I. L. N., Needham

Answer: Whether you're north or south, these two recipes are sure to delight guests as well as hostess:

CLASSIC BANANA CREAM PIE

¾ cup sugar
3 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons cornstarch
¼ teaspoon salt
3 cups milk
2 eggs, slightly beaten
1-½ teaspoons vanilla
4 bananas
1 9-inch pastry shell or crumb crust

In large saucepan, mix together sugar, flour, corn starch and salt. Gradually stir in milk. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until mixture comes to a boil. Simmer 2 to 3 minutes, stirring constantly, until thickened. Gradually stir hot mixture into eggs. Return egg mixture to saucepan; cook over very low heat for 2 minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from heat; stir in vanilla. Cool. Peel and slice 2 bananas; place in pie shell. Cover with filling. Chill several hours. Just before serving, peel remaining two bananas, cut in slices and place on top of pie. (If desired, brush lightly with lemon juice to prevent discoloration.)

BANANA POUNDCAKE

1 cup margarine
1-½ cups sugar
4 eggs
1 cup mashed ripe bananas (3 medium)
1 teaspoon vanilla
2-½ cups sifted all purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon nutmeg

In a large bowl cream margarine with sugar. Beat in eggs one at a time, beating well after each additon. Blend in bananas and vanilla. Sift together flour, baking powder and nutmeg; blend into banana mixture. Turn into a greased and floured 9-inch tube pan. Bake in preheated 350 degree oven for 1 hour and 10 minutes or until cake tester comes out clean. Cool for 10 minutes; turn out of pan and cool completely. If desired, serve sprinkled with confectioners' sugar. Yield 12 servings.

Question: I hope you can help me. I have many recipes for molds that call for regular cabbage, and I can't find one that specifically calls for red cabbage. Do you suppose you could locate one and print it before Memorial Day when I intend to do quite a bit of entertaining that weekend. Thank you very much.

Mrs. E.O., Walpole

Answer: Please try this salad mold it's got a lot of zip! Pickles and pickle juice add a piquant flavoring.

RED CABBAGE SALAD MOLD

2 tablespoons lemon juice
two-thirds cup sweet pickle juice
2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
3 cups water
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup finely shredded red cabbage one-third cup finely chopped sweet pickles
Lettuce
Salad dressing is optional

Combine lemon and pickle juices in small bowl; sprinkle on gelatin. Heat water with salt added to the boiling point. Remove from heat and stir in the gelatin mixture. Stir until gelatin dissolves. Cool; refrigerate until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from a spoon. (It will be the consistency of unbeaten egg whites.) Fold in cabbage and pickles. Pour into a 1-½ quart mold. Cover and chill until firm. Serve on lettuce with salad dressing, if desired. Makes 8 servings.

Our thanks to E.C., Medfield who has sent in a most unusual recipe—Rice Delmonico. She suggests that it take the place of potato.

RICE DELMONICO

Combine 4 cups cooked rice, 1 cup chopped green onion, one-third cup pimiento, 1 tablespoon melted butter, 1 teaspoon sweet basil, ½ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper; mix well. Turn mixture into a well buttered 2-quart casserole. Top with 1 cup sour cream and sprinkle with 6 slices crisp cooked bacon, crumbled. Cover and bake in a preheated 400 degree oven for 20 minutes.

Question: I once had a marvelous recipe for Sesame Chicken and though I memorized the recipe, I am now not quite sure about the ingredients the chicken is dipped in before baking. Can you help me?

A.G., W. Roxbury

Answer: Marvelous it is—here is your recipe again:

BAKED SESAME CHICKEN

1 egg, slightly beaten
½ cup milk
½ cup flour
¼ cup sesame seed
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon freshly ground pepper (if possible)
¼ cup butter or margarine
1 broiler-fryer chicken (about 2-½ lbs.) cut in pieces

Combine the egg and milk. In anotner small bowl, mix the flour, sesame seed, salt, and pepper. Melt butter in a baking pan. Dip chicken parts in milk mixture; then dip them in flour mixture. Put chicken in pan, turning so that butter coats all sides well. Bake uncovered in a 350 degree oven for 1 to 1-¼ hours, or until tender, brown and crisp. Serves 3-4

Across the kitchen counter

RUTH LENSON

Statistics tell us that mother's role is changing and that today's mother often divides her time between working 9 to 5 and the home. It's not easy — and since Mother's Day is designed to give Mom a real holiday away from the kitchen, the whole family should get into the fun of preparing Sunday dinner.

As for the first course, how about a hearty Minestrone soup! The only difficult preparation here, is shopping for the ingredients, so make a list before going to the market. The actual putting together of the soup is quite easy — the results excellent, and Mother will enjoy leftover soup to be enjoyed the following evening or put into the freezer for another meal.

We are including a main dish, Mustard Chicken and Bananas, because it is unique and most likely a dish Mother has never cooked before, she's bound to be delighted. In this recipe a zesty mustard sauce dresses both the chicken and the pieces of banana to bake to a brilliant mustard color that looks so appetizing. The taste is stimulating and different — a no-fuss, no-muss main dish. Along with your main dish, a green salad and hot rolls.

Celebrate Mother's Day with Chicken and bananas

Dessert should be light and delicate — and again, easy. Marshmallow Parfaits can be the responsibility of little brother or sister — with some supervision. Use parfait or slender 5 oz. glasses.

As a special touch, have the artist in the family prepare a hand decorated menu with a border of hearts and flowers, and it will most likely find its way into Mom's "memento drawer" — every mother has one. Just one more suggestion . . . leave the kitchen as clean as you found it — remember, it's Mother's day to relax!

MINESTRONE

1 cup dried white beans
10 cups water
3 tablespoons margarine
1 cup chopped onion
1 cup chopped celery
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1 clove garlic, minced
1 can (1 lb.) whole tomatoes, undrained
4 cups (about 6 oz.) fresh torn spinach
1 cup elbow macaroni
1 cup diced potato
½ cup chopped carrot
1 medium zucchini, sliced
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon oregano leaves, crushed
¼ teaspoon black pepper
¼ teaspoon crushed red pepper (optional)
¼ teaspoon thyme leaves, crushed
4 beef bouillon cubes

Combine beans and water in a large saucepot or Dutch oven. Bring to a boil; cover and simmer until tender, about 2 hours. Melt margarine in a medium skillet. Add onions, celery, parsley and garlic; saute until tender, about 5 minutes. Add to beans with remaining ingredients. Bring to a boil; reduce heat and let simmer, uncovered for 30 minutes, stirring occasionally. Serves 13.

MUSTARD CHICKEN AND BANANAS

1 broiler-fryer chicken (2½ to 3 lbs.) cut in serving pieces
¼ cup prepared mustard
2 tablespoons vinegar
2 tablespoons water
2 tablespoons salad oil
1 teaspoon dried leaf thyme
¼ teaspoon ginger
3 medium bananas

Place chicken skin side up in a shallow 3-quart casserole or baking dish. Mix mustard, vinegar, water, salad oil, thyme and ginger. Spoon ¾ of the sauce over chicken and bake in 375 degree oven for 40 minutes. Remove from oven. Peel bananas, cut in half lengthwise and then crosswise; add to casserole. Brush bananas with remaining mustard sauce; return to oven and bake for 10 minutes longer. Serve immediately. Serves 4.

MARSHMALLOW PARFAITS

1 pkg. (3 oz.) fruit flavored gelatin
1 cup boiling water
1 cup cold water
1 cup miniature or diced marshmallows

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Add cold water; chill until very thick and "jiggly." Whip with electric beater two-thirds cup of the gelatin until fluffy. Spoon about half of the clear gelatin into 8 parfait or slender 5 oz. glasses. Top with marshmallows, then whipped gelatin and then top with remaining clear gelatin in that order. Chill until firm. Makes 8 servings.

Zani is president of computer company

Ralph Zani, of 75 Hunnewell Ave. Newton, is president of a new company, Martec International Corporation in Wellesley, that has been formed to market U.S. computer products in Japan and the Far East.

Ralph Zani

Zani said that Martec International is the first major company to specialize in marketing computer products to this area of the world.

Martec will not only provide easier communications with customers in Japan, but it will facilitate the flow of more American computer products to this fast increasing market which has been growing at the rate of 30 per cent, he said.

Martec's distributor in Japan is Marubeni Electronics of Tokyo. which is a subsidiary of the $20 billion Marubeni Corporation of Tokyo, one of the three largest trading companies in Japan.

Present business projections, according to Zani, are $10 million in 1975 and up to $50 million within five years.

Martec is currently exporting products for such firms as Entrex, Teletype, Data Products, Wangco, Applicon and Gerber Scientific.

Prior to beginning Martec, Zani was vice-president and general manager of Di-An Controls, Inc., Dorchester.

He had previously served with General Electric where he was Manager of Marketing for G.E.'s MEDINET operation – a computer service business dedicated to providing on-line computer services to hospitals.

For four years he had managed the commercial computer services business for the National Shawmut Bank of Boston and had also served briefly as an expert on computer services and software industries for International Data Corporation, in Newton. He began his career with IBM.

A nationwide program to get every licensed driver to voluntarily make five gallons of gasoline do the work of six has been launched by the American Automobile Association. The motoring organization says with its new Gas Watchers plan, the nation's goal of reducing foreign oil imports by one million barrels a day in 1975 could be surpassed.

Guzzi visits Kiwanis

State Secretary Paul Guzzi was in Newton last week to address the Newton Kiwanis Club at Valle's.

Secretary Guzzi outlined his priorities for 1975 as secretary of the commonwealth and noted that there is a "severe crisis in government today" and emphasized that everything he does as state secretary "will be aimed at winning the confidence of the people of Massachusetts."

Determined to make both this year and his first teerm "fruitful and constructive", Guzzi cited three major priorities, involving the state census, public financing of campaigns, and public information.

A primary objective is "to conduct the state census in the most thorough and efficient manner possible," Guzzi said.

The census, which is now underway, is being taken in accordance with a constitutional amendment passed by boters in November to reduce the size of the House of Representatives from 240 to 160 members. It will also be the basis for state and federal reimbursements to cities and towns.

Secretary Guzzi also emphasized his second priority which is to legislation for public financing of campaigns in order "to stop the insidious influence of money on the political process."

zguzzi who has co sponsored major legislation now before the Massachusetts legislature said, "money is polluting our system of electing our public officials and unless we do something to stop that pollution — and do it very soon — our system will be seriously damaged."

In order to "make state government more accessible to people," Guzzi is working to donvert an existing Public Document Division into a State Bookstore similar to the Federal Bookstore and to establish a Citizen's Information Service to respond to questions and problems related to state government. The Citizen's Information Service will officially open on May 15.

The 1975 New Mexico Legislature repealed the state's presidential preference primary law, which only had been used once. The original law was passed in 1969 and was used only in 1972, when the state's voters expressed preference for Democrat George McGovern and Republican Richard M. Nixon.

'Money Matters' workshop underway for families

"Money Matters," an experimental workshop program designed to help families save a portion of their income, is now meeting at Christ Church, United Methodist, 9 Wellesley Ave.

Emphasizing voluntary husband and wife participation, the workshops convene at 8 p.m. on the second and fourth Monday's of each month under the leadership of Arnold Zenker, a well-known lawyer and broadcaster.

Using computer techniques and group discussions of spending attitudes, "Money Matters" strives to show couples exactly where their money is going and why they have been unable to save. The Program is directed to families with incomes of $15,000 or more per year.

"There is something wrong when families in this income range end a year with not a dime saved and with no idea where much of their income went," says Zenker. "Money does, in fact, matter in terms of material happiness and coping with life in general. It is too vital an issue to be ignored."

People interested in learning more about how the workshop operates can call 964-0240 or write "Money Matters," P.O. Box 26, Newton, MA 02159.

The concerts, which are free, will take place on May 17 and 18 at 8:30 p.m. in Gary Hall, on Massachusetts Avenue in the center of Lexington.

Malpractice coverage costs jack N-W rates

The Board of Governors of Newton-Wellesley Hospital in special meeting last week voted an average rate increase for private and semi-private rooms of $6 per day as registered with the Rate Setting Commission effective May 1.

The new daily rates will be $113 to $116 for a private room, $105 to $107 for a semi-private room, and $91 for a room with four patients.

A significant part of the increase has been brought about by the rate hikes in malpractice coverage which are creating havoc with hospital budgets everywhere, and which are not specifically based upon hospital experience.

Among other mcreased expenses which had to be factored into the rate increase were fuel and utility costs which have roughly doubled even though hospital consumption has stayed the same.

"It is the insurance component of the increase that really hurts," said hospital President H. Irving Grousbeck, Weston resident and president of Continental Cablevision. "Our patients are being penalized for the irresponsibility of some people in instituting a mounting number of suits based more on hoped for results than malpractice of doctors."

Even more serious, in Grousbeck's opinion, is "the threat to patient care implicit in the difficulties the higher rates pose for physicians both financially and in taking the necessary risks in developing new medical and surgical techniques."

Grousbeck urges people to support legislative remedies for the high insurance rates.

Doane enjoyed stay at Frau Bauer's

Der Gemuetlichkeit.

To Allan Doane, of 19 Jenison St., Newtonville, that German phrase holds a special meaning. Translated it means good cheer, happiness, health and brotherhood.

Its meaning and the feeling it entails became apparent to Doane during a recent stay in Germany as a senior at Utica College, Utica, N.Y.

Doane said, "The time I spent in Europe gave me a much broader perspective of different cultures and the way the people within those cultures look at things affecting them directly and indirectly."

While in Gauting, Germany, Doane and his 13 companions stayed in a boarding house owned by Frau (Mrs.) Elizabeth Bauer. "She is a wonderful, loving German woman, who treated us all like her own children," remarked Doane.

It was in Frau Bauer's house that Doane and the other students were instructed for three hours daily by Dr. Verne Snyder, a Utica instructor.

The courses were demanding, especially those in German. In fact, Doane feels the work load was greater than it would have been in his upstate New York college because "Dr. Snyder didn't want anyone to lose sight of the fact that academics were of major importance."

"It is interesting to note that all of us, except one, managed to adapt to our living situation quite well. The fact that we were in constant contact with one another could have been an unnerving situation."

The inhabitants of the town were anxious to become acquainted with the Utica College students as was the case in reverse. Doane recalls paying visits to the local bank, which had never done business with Americans. "We got to be such good friends with the people in the bank that we would stop in for the hell of it to chat," he said.

As if Frau Bauer's delicious traditional German meals topped off with cold mugs of ale were not enough, the students were treated to one of the happier times of year in Germany: the October Fest.

This festival, held in late September and early October, is a time when Germans relax and party, and includes the introduction of new beers from the nation's breweries.

The American students wee in argreement that Germany's policy of subsidizing the arts is an excellent idea because it allows everyone, rich and poor, to enjoy cultural events.

Doane found very few psychological scars on the citizens of a country that twice fought brutal and destructive wars against the United States.

"Most of the German people have put the war behind them," stressed Doane.

BU to honor Judge Rose

Judge David A. Rose of Newton, an associate justice of the Appeals Court of Massachusetts, will be honored by Boston University's School of Law Alumni Association for distinguished service to the legal profession.

Others who will receive the Silver Shingle on May 10 are Edward F. Hennessey, associate justice of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, for distinguished public service; and Bernice Downs Parks, who was the first woman named senior vice-president and trustee of the Provident Institute for Savings. The Young Lawyer's Chair, presented to lawyers of significant accomplishment with less than 10 years of practice, will be awarded this year to United States Rep. William S. Cohen of Maine, who was graduated from Boston University Law School in 1965. Rep. Cohen is a member of the U.S. House of Representatives Committee on the Judiciary.

POOLS AND PLANTS CAN CO-EXIST

Whether or not to have a swimming pool is a big question with lots of homeowners these days. Many people who love their gardens hesitate to install a pool because they are afraid that the pool and its associated chemicals will kill the lawn and shrubs.

From the horticultural aspect I have no objection to a swimming pool, as long as it is well designed, placed, constructed, maintained and landscaped. Pools are highly recommended by most landscape architects and designers.

Pool chemicals seem to be the primary concern of most home gardeners. They kill flowers, shrubs and evergreens. This need not be the case. Plain, old-fashioned Lawn & Garden Gypsum should be spread on the lawn area, in the flower beds and evergreen rows, at a rate of fifty pounds over 1,000 sq. ft. two or three times a season Gypsum keeps soil loose so harmful chemicals will flush right out.

The shape of the pool should compliment the home. It should become part of the landscape and lend pleasure and beauty. It shouldn't be a big round or square hole in the ground or an oversized tin can in the middle of the lawn. A good pool builder will take into consideration the style of the building and design the pool to blend gracefully.

Above-the-ground pools present more of a challenge. On large lots, soil can be mounded up around the exposed sides and sandstone steps added, leading up to the deck. Pines and groundcovers can be used at the base, so that the mound gives the illusion of being a natural hill.

Small lots are a bit more difficult, but I have used arborvitaes in random groups with spreading junipers in small beds in between and have accomplished a very pleasant result.

A garden is to be lived in and enjoyed, not just admired. So, don't deprive your family or yourself the pleasure of a swimming pool if you have the room, patience, and capital.

Major Bicentennial exhibition opened at Museum of Fine Arts

On the 200th anniversary of Paul Revere's ride, April 18, 1975, the Museum of Fine Arts launched its first major Bicentennial exhibition—Paul Revere's Boston, 1735-1818.

Paul Revere has been chosen as the key figure of the Museum's historical celebration because of his many social, political and business activities. During his lifetime (1735-1818) Revere witnessed Boston's emergence as a wealthy and influential mercantile community. After the Revolution, during Revere's adult life, Boston emerged as a leading Federal city with a new architecture, new fashions, and new areas of trade and manufacture.

Paintings, furniture, silver, textiles, rare prints and drawings, and historical documents produced during Revere's lifetime have been assembled to portray this famous patriot's society. Historic personalities— including the Reveres, the Hancocks, the Quincys—come to life in the authentic 18th century context of their art and belongings.

Over one hundred pieces of Boston silver from the Museum's collection including teapots, tankards, porringers, and outstanding presentation silver given to churches and distinguished citizens, featured throughout the exhibition with special emphasis on objects by Paul Revere II, craftsman and patriot. English and continental furniture and silver owned by Bostonians may be compared with Boston styles to illustrate the European influence on Boston craftsmen.

The Boston Museum is exhibiting objects loaned from private and public institutions across the country, and locally from the Massachusetts Historical Society, the Boston Public Library, the Boston Athenaeum, the State House Archives, and the American Antiquarian Society. Many of the objects from private collections are being exhibited publicly for the first time.

A special lecture series focusing on the life and times of Revere has been organized to complement the exhibition. A free film, Silversmith of Williamsburg, will be shown in the Museum Lecture Hall throughout the exhibition. It is an authentic recreation of the techniques of the 18th century silversmith, on loan courtesy of the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation.

Difficult to handle

Q. I would like some information concerning my son. He has always been a pretty easy boy to handle but over the past two years he has been rather difficult. He is starting college in the fall. Do you see anything in the future of his finishing at least the four years? His statistics are born December 11, 1956 at 7:45 p.m. in Greenville, South Carolina. L.Z.

A. Your son's horoscope indicates one who has considerable vital energy that is apt to be applied in a dynamic, courageous manner. This despite the fact that at times inwardly he may be anxious about the outcome of his contemplated activities.

Instinctively he is inclined to try to attract attention and is apt to do that which will be recognized, appreciated and applauded. He has excellent potentials to become a leader of men and should benefit from a formal education if he controls his impatience and persists. However, it will take considerable will power on his part to finish his four year college course since there are indications he may become impatient to get going before he is properly prepared and ready.

He will have high ideals which he will try to work out in practical ways. He will admire those who are intellectual and well educated but though he has excellent mental possibilities he may deprive himself of the discipline a formal education could give him.

With mental training, respect for those in authority and a willingness to learn from the experiences of others and from books he could go far. He is apt to develop liberal and advanced, somewhat unconventional ideas and an independence to do as he pleases whether others approve or otherwise.

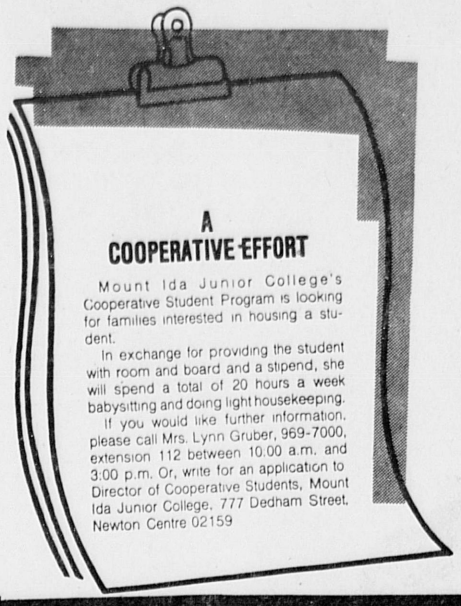
North lacrosse team bows to Concord



By ERIC YAFFE
Sports Correspondent

"The team played terribly. The players have got to get themselves emotionally up for the next few games," commented a disappointed Tiger Lacrosse coach, Tom DePeter, after Newton North had lost to a strong Concord-Carlisle team 7-3 on May 2.

Concord held at least a two goal lead throughout the game as the Tigers had trouble with their offensive attack.

Newton's only major threat came in the closing minutes of the third quarter. With Concord leading by a score of 5-1, the Tiger offense began to jell and erupted for two scores, narrowing Concord's lead to a slim two goals.

North continued to keep the pressure on, but then the Tiger's leading scorer, co-captain Bussy Adam, got into a fight with a Concord player and was promptly taken out of the game.

Concord took full advantage of Adam's absence and scored two quick goals in the next three minutes to ice the victory.

"I thought the team played well in the first period and we were never really out of the game, but our attack didn't keep the pressure on their defense," said coach DePeter.

Dave Sistrunk and Ed Glover were defensive stalwarts. Along with the other Concord defensemen they held Newton to one of their lowest goal production totals of the season.

The Tigers have played only one league game, which they won easily, beating a weak Medford team, 14-1.

Prior to the Concord-Carlisle contest, the Tigers had won two straight games by walloping Beverly 21-2, and handing Burlington a 13-2 defeat.

Tough Test

Newton North will be facing their toughest test over the next four games. All four opponents are Southern Division contenders: Newton South, Framingham North, Framingham South and Needham. With at least three victories against these opponents, it will be difficult for anyone to catch up to the Tigers.

However, if the Tigers lose more than one of these games, the Southern Division race could be a battle right down to the wire.

"We usually begin to play well as a team by our sixth or seventh game. Over the next few games, we should begin to peak," said DePeter.

For the Tigers to do well, they must continue to play tight defense. As a whole, the team has only allowed an average of 3.8 goals per game. Seniors Richard Doolin, Chris Jones and Kevin O'Dowd, and junior Kenny Hagerstrom have been defensive standouts.

Offensively Bussy Adam is the Tiger's leading goal scorer with 17, while attacker Doug Jessup has chipped in with 10.

Newton North now has an overall record of 4-3. The Tigers have played a difficult schedule. Besides Concord-Carlisle, Newton lost to defending Eastern Mass. champions Lincoln-Sudbury by a score of 9-7, and Port Washington from New York State, 4-2.

4 inducted into honor society

Four Newton residents were recently inducted into the the National Honor Society who are students at Mount Saint Joseph's Academy in Brighton.

The four girls were Rosemarie Fiore and Julie Schoenfeld, seniors, and Kathleen Grant and Patricia Paulin, juniors.

Sister Marie de Lourdes, CSJ, principal of the school' accepted the pledges made by the inductees.

The students fulfilled the requirements of the National Association of Secondary Schools for scholarship, leadership, service, and character.

Margie McGraw on UMass gym team

AMHERST, MASS. - Margie Magraw, daughter of Charles and Delores Magraw of 111 Hobart road, Newton Center, Ma. is a member of the University of Massachusetts Women's Gymnastics which has completed a Won 5, Lost 1 season. They were Champions in the Eastern Regionals for the second straight year and No. 2 to Southern Illinois in the Nationals held in California.

Margie is a graduate of Newton North High '74 and is majoring in English at the State University. Margie was instrumental in the team effort of the Minutewomen in their quest for the National Championship. In the Nationals she had her best score for the year in her strong event the balance beam. She scored an 8.55 which was most important because the two top performers for the team had fallen off the beam and Margie scored extremely well to keep the team in contention. Big things are expected from this first year performer.

AND MORE TO COME

Come let us reason together

By DR. WILLIAM KNOX
"If You're Going to do Something"

No one can feel good about himself-herself if what he-she does doesn't count. Many people are depressed for exactly that reason...what they do has no value to themselves nor anyone else. What we do needs to have human value...for that's the only real value.

"If you're going to do something"...this implies that you have the power of decision. And you do. You can decide to learn to play tennis...or to write a book...or to take your dog to obedience school. You don't learn to play tennis, nor write books, nor train dogs unless you have made a rational decision to do that thing. These things don't just happen. You make them happen. So this is the first necessary part of doing something...a conscious decision to do something. What you do may be determined by a host of reasons...an inward desire to find fulfillment...a suggestion from a firend...a need that you see and want to meet...or you may decide to do something just because you are bored and no longer can tolerate the drag of time. So...if you're going to do something, your first step is to decide what you're going to do...preferably what you do best.

Now that your conscious decision is made...get an image in your mind of the goal. See yourself on the tennis court using what you've learned expertly...see yourself serving...using your backhand...at the net to make a point...see yourself in good form on the court. Or...get a mental image of the book you're going to write...see people reading your book...see it in the stores...hear people talk about you as the author...hear some of the complimentary remarks people are making about your receipt book...you "How to...." book of the thing you know best how to do. Let these images in your mind tug you along on the preparation of your book.

Along the way to arrive at this goal you will face discouragement...some disappointment...you'll hit stone walls and not know how to proceed. That's when you'll need to use your will to see it through...your determination to reach to the goal. Some time go I counseled a lady who wanted to lose 131 pounds. It took us only one year. We cut her half in two...thre away the waste. Every week she weighed in with a loss from two to five pounds. Every week she had to perservere so that she could make a report to me of a weight loss. She succeeded because she wanted to. Determination is necessary in anything from tennis...to losing weight.

"If you're going to do something"...trust your own judgment. You'll get all kinds of suggestions from other people who know less about what you're doing. Some will be good suggestions...some worthless. Listen...make your own assessment...throw away what you can't use...use what fits your purpose. Learn to trust your own judgment.

"If you're going to do something"...make a definite decision...see yourself reaching you goal...trust your own judgment. Really now...I don't see any reason why you can't do SMOETHING THAT COUNTS as well as anyone selse.

Ethos Choir

The Norfolk County-Newton Lung Assn. will feature an evening of entertainment with the Ethos Choir of Wellesley College at its 54th annual meeting Thursday evening, May 8 at the Lantana in Randolph, to which the public is invited. The Choir, which has sung recently at Yale and Cornell Universities, was founded in 1969 by a group of students, who are "just interested in singing." For reservations contact the Lung Assn. at 326-4081.

"Transfer factor" subject of exciting research

The "transfer factor" sounds like a crosstown bus pass. The subject of exciting medical research, it may indeed turn out to be a ticket to better health.

The transfer factor functions as a kind of CIA for the cells of the body, a surveillance system against foreign enemies. Actually, the factor is a little-understood molecule that circulates constantly in the white blood cells of healthy people. What attackers like the TB germ or flu virus are spotted, the transfer factor rallies a phalanx of defending cells. The battle is on.

Sometimes, the transfer factor has trouble telling potential friends from confirmed enemies, though. It is the transfer factor that recognizes a lung or kidney transplant as foreign tissue and then reject it. And some people's transfer factor functions more effectively than other's, particularly against specific diseases.

The fascinating aspect of the factor itself is that it can be transferred from one person to another. It can be frozen, dried, or stored for a long as five years. It can be taken from a person who is immune to a specific disease and given to another person who is highly susceptible to that disease.

According to Dr. H. Sherwood Lawrence of the New York University School of Medicine, the transfer factor seems to perform the same function for the donor as for the recipient. In a sense, the factor "remembers" how the defense system of the donor worked. Even more amazing, the transfer factor specific to one disease may also build up defenses against other diseases as well. The implications for fighting all kinds of diseases, including lung diseases, are staggering.

To find out more about the defenses of the lungs and how they work, contact your American Lung Association affiliate, the Christmas Seal people. It's a matter of life and breath.

Swing rite is latest baseball batting aid

A West Roxbury man, Daniel F. Greaney, just received a United States Patent for a baseball batting aid, which he has called swing rite.

Swing rite is presently being used by Little League and High School Coaches.

Swing rite is a 5 oz. batting sleeve which you slip over a baseball bat, and it allows a player of any age to practice batting in a small or confined area using a regulation baseball bat. Swing rite's energy absorbing design prevents the ball from going too far while at the same time forcing the batter to swing in a level and equal plane. The 5 ozs. that Swing Rite adds to the bat helps the batter to develop better bat control while providing safe play. Swing Rite is designed to fit all regulation baseball bats.

Aquarium offers home for sick aquatic animals

Spring brings with it the birth of many aquatic animals which may lose their parents and need a wet-nurse. Animals may also be abandoned by their parents so that bed and board becomes imperative until they can care for themselves.

The New England Aquarium has maintained a home for young aquatic animals since it opened in 1969, and has nursed back to health or adulthood such animals as muskrats, beavers, turtles, herring gulls, baby seals and porpoises. Many are returned to the wild when they are healthy, while others who become too tame to release are given a home at the Aquarium and used in the Aquarium's many educational programs.

"I don't know how many thousands of children here have learned about aquatic mammals through their introduction to Floyd, our pet muskrat," Dr. Warren Little, director of education at the Aquarium, notes. Floyd came from the marshes of Sudbury and was brought to the Aquarium by a resident of Sudbury, who nursed him until he got too big for her bathtub.

"Unfortunately, Floyd passed away a week or two ago, and we already miss him," Dr. Little went on to say. Permits are required to trap and keep all wild animals in the state, but any which were hurt and-or orphaned could be brought to the Aquarium where they will be well cared for.

North streak stops at nine wins

By RON MACLEAN
Sports Correspondent

The Newton North High baseball team suffered their first setback of the season, a 4-2 verdict to Brookline, April 30.

The Tigers kept a one-game lead over Waltham and Brockton, though, by winning the other two games. Newton bombed Cambridge Latin 7-1 on April 29, and edged Weymouth South' 5-4 on May 2.

A four run third inning provided the winning margin against Weymouth South.

The game marked the return of Bob Vona to second base, and the return of Steve Dibenidetto to the mound. DiBenidetto, plagued with a sore arm early in the season, made his return to pitching in relief of Steve Cononico.

After the teams traded runs in the first two innings, Weymouth jumped ahead 4-1 with three runs in the third.

Two walks and an error brought one run home and brought out Cononico, who had trouble with two balks. DiBeneditto came on, and after giving up a single for two runs. retired the side.

The Tigers came back to win the game in the bottom of the third. The rally came with two outs, as DiBenidetto was on first with two outs, when a fit of wildness struck the Weymouth pitching staff.

Starting pitcher John Manning was mercifully removed after giving up a walk to Jack Ryan, a two run double to Bob Vona, and a walk to Bob Kinsella.

Reliever Bill Buchan wasn't much better' walking three straight to force another run. Buchan also had a mental error.

With the bases loaded, Buchan called his catcher out to talk to him but neglected to call time. Kinsella alertly raced home past the stunned Weymouth players for the winning run.

DiBenidetto and Dewey pitched shutout ball for their respective teams the rest of the way. DiBenidetto went 5 2-3 innings with two strikeouts and one walk for the win.

Vona led the way with a double and a triple raising his average to .450. For the first time this year Ryan went hitless, 0 for 2 with a walk.

The Tigers had some fielding gems also. Bob Cunningham made a good stab of a Mark Pardo line drive with a runner on third. Mike Tocci made a diving stab of a grounder and threw the man out to cut off a run in the seventh inning.

Brookline 4
Newton North 2

Brookline got a great pitching performance from Mike Leivi end scored two runs in the seventh to hand Newton their first loss. It was the third straight win for the Wealthy Towners, who moved to 3-5.

Leivi totally stopped the Tigers after the first inning. He gave up only three hits and no runs after the first when an error brought home a run.

Steve DiBenidetto and Jim Visakis walked and Jack Ryan singled for the first run. Don Morrell then hit a one out grounder which shortstop Percy Cook threw away for a run.

Brookline scored pairs of runs in the third and seventh off Ed Aucoin. Two singles and a sacrifice fly tied the game in the third and the Wealthy Towners moved ahead in the seventh.

Carl Rao led off with a triple to center and was driven in by Percy Cook. Jeff Horblitt then singled, went to second on a wild pitch and scored on a Billy Simmons single.

Aucoin pitched well enough to win most days but Leivi was too much, yeilding only one really solid hit.

Newton had a rally going in the seventh, as Rich Hunt reached on an error, Bob Vona singled and Jim Visakis walked to load the bases. Ryan grounded one to the second baseman who made the game-ending play.

Newton North 7
Cambridge Latin 1

The Tigers came up with a 12-hit attack and a combined three hitter to defeat the Cantabs 7-1.

Cambridge jumped in front with a run in the first, but Newton quickly established command with a three-run second.

Bob Cunningham singled to center and Rich Hunt sacrificed him along. John Carey doubled to score Cunningham, went to third on the throw home, and scored on a bunt single by Steve DiBenidetto.

Jack Ryan singled to left center to score DiBenidetto.

After adding a run in the third, Newton scored three more in the sixth. John Reider walked, and Ryan doubled him to third. Bob Kinsella then lined one to right-center for a two-run triple.

Don Morrell hit a sacrifice fly to score Kinsella.

Carey, Ed Aucoin, and Steve Cononico combined for the three-hitter. Carey pitched 4 2-3 innings to get the win, Aucoin pitched to only one man, striking him out. Cononico pitched two innings.

Ryan still leads the team in hitting with a .571 average. Next is Bob Vona at .450, then Rich Hunt and Bob Kinsella at .333. Mike Tocci rounds out the .300 club with a .313 average.

Ryan and Steve DiBenidetto lead the team with eight runs scored while Ryan and Vona lead with eight rbi's. Kinsella is right behind with seven rbi's.

Newton LL to hold baseball clinic

On Saturday, May 17th, Coach Neil McPhee of Newton South High School nad his staff will conduct a baseball clinic at Newton South for the benefit of the Newton East and South Little Leagues.

The Clinic will commence sharply at 10 a.m. and run for approximately two hours. Newton East Little League officers and Board members strongly urge that ALL our managers - coaches and players attend. We are assuming that those teams having scheduled games on Saturday afternoon will be dressed in their game uniforms for the Clinic and proceed directly to their game after the Clinic. Lunch arrangements should be worked out by team coaches or mothers.

This Clinic is the first of its kind at Newton South and I feel it can be most advantageous for all our players and coaches. Please make every effort to have your team there on time and prepared to learn about the real thing.

Twilight League International Division holds first meeting

The Newton Twilight League International Division re-elected Richard Keyes as President during its first organizational meeting of the season at the Albermarle Field House on Thursday evening, April 17th.

In other spirited contests, elected were Joe Siciliano as Vice-President, David Roberts as Secretary, John Balkus as Treasurer, and James Murphy as League Advisor.

Try-out dates for the coming season were announced as Saturdays, May 10, 17 and 24, between 1 and 5 p.m.

In the event of rain, the same hours will prevail on the following Sundays, May 11, 18 and 25.

Teams represented at the meeting were the Upper Falls Lions, Our Lady's, the Boys' Club, Waban Chiefs, St. Bernard's, Carson Post, Post 440 A.L., Oak Hill, and the Highlanders.

The league voted to continue the insurance policy which covers all team players, manager, two coaches, umpires, scorekeeper, and bat boy. After considerable discussion, it was voted on a motion by Dave Roberts, seconded by Bob Huguley and Luman Barry, that the starting time for games would be 6 p.m. for the 1975 season. The league is for players, 13, 14 and 15 years of age.

A Rules Committee, proposed by John Bibbo, was assigned to meet prior to the next meeting on May 7th for improvements to the Rules and Regulations already in existence. This will be held at 7 p.m. at the Albermarle Field House. This Rules Committee is composed of John Bibbo, Ken Aries, Rick Tedeschi, and Bob Huguley.

It was also voted that the winning team will call in the scores immediately following the game. This is essential in order for the papers to continue giving the League the excellent coverage we have had in past years.

Roster sheets were passed out to all team managers. Those present include: Luman J. Barry, manager of Carson Post; Kenneth C. Aries, manager of the Highlanders; Richard Tedeschi, coach of the Highlanders; Al Huberman, manager of the Waban Chiefs; Bill Lancilotti, manager of St. Bernard's; Anthony D'Amico, manager of Our Lady's; John Bibbo, manager of the Upper Falls Lions; David Roberts, manager of the Boys' Club; Robert Huguley, manager of Post 440 A.L.; Bob Waxman, coach of Post 440 A.L.; and Dave Sellers, manager of the Boys' Club National Division team eas a guest. Frank Moore, Umpire-In-Chief, spoke on some of the problems in 1974 and the remedies to same during the 1975 season.

Tentative plans call for the opening of this Divisivn on Monday, June 2, 1975.

The following permit has been issued to the Newton Twilight League, (International Division), for tryouts on Saturdays, May 10, 17 and 24 at the following fields. In the event of rain on above dates, permit is valid for the following Sundays, May 11, 18 and 25, at stated times.

Up to our fannies in alligators

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Texas alligators, thought to be endangered just six years ago, now are so numerous authorities fear humans may be in more danger than the reptiles. Lawmakers are being asked to repeal a 1969 law prohibiting killing the reptiles.

"We're literally up to our fannies in alligators in places," says Ted Clark, wildlife director for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

Latest estimates of the alligator population in Jefferson County indicate there are 13,600 of the animals in a 312-squaremile area, an average of 44 per square mile.

Parks officials estimate there are 36,600 alligators living in 97 counties in the state. The 'gator population is increasing so rapidly in 34 counties experts are concerned the reptiles are reaching the saturation point.

State Sen. D. Roy Harrington of Port Arthur, author of the 1969 law protecting alligators, is sponsoring a bill this year to repeal the earlier measure and give the Parks Department authority to manage the reptile population.

"Right now the law is nobody can kill an alligator or even have an alligator hide in his possession," Harrington said.

Information from VA

Q — Will my wife's income help me qualify for a GI home loan from the Veterans Administration? I was honorably discharged from the military service last month, and plan to buy a home using my VA loan entitlement.

A — Yes. VA since July 1973 has been giving full recognition to income of both veteran and spouse in determining ability to repay GI loans.

Q — I've been having trouble lately with a stomach condition developed during military service. Since I've been out of service three years, I wonder if I can still apply for disability

A — Yes. There is no deadline for veterans to file claims for service-connected disabilities.

"Education is the bridge between opportunity and despair." —Dr. Norman Francis, President, Xavier University.

From an interview with Dr. Francis:

"My mother and father were not even high school graduates but they educated five children. Their feeling was that in order to make it in life, one had to develop one's talents to the fullest. And that meant learning everything one could learn. What makes this unusual is to have that outlook at a time when there was a Depression, and racial discrimination was very high. You really had to set your sights, as one would say, on the stars

"I guess I must have shined shoes throughout my high school days. I paid my way through high school shining shoes. Now I must confess, I never thought I'd be a shoeshine boy the rest of my life but shining shoes was not demeaning to me My father used to say, 'Any man who works with his hands will make a living. Any man who works with his head will make money'

Dr. Francis is now President of Xavier University. His greatest satisfaction is to see the thousands of black students who have come through his school and gone on to become professionals. "I see the young lawyers, the teachers, I can go to City Hall and see all those young guys and gals. It's like throwing a rock into the water... the ripple effect And that's the key to change." The United Negro College Fund gave Norman Francis the opportunity to make a significant contribution to society. Your contribution can help us give others the same opportunity A mind is a terrible thing to waste.

Parking Meters:

By JOHN D. THOMPSON

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Nettie Ridley remembers the world's first parking meter and she hasn't changed her mind about it to this day.

"Well, I just quit parking on those streets," she said.

Harold Chappell was there, too. He thought it was a reasonable idea.

"Why shouldn't a person pay a small fee to park?" he said.

The first working model went on public display May 8, 1935, and battle lines were well drawn before the actual installation in downtown Oklahoma City on July 16, 1935.

When the device sprouted from the curb, things began to happen.

A rancher put in a nickel and tied up his horse, saying it beat taking it to a rubber of bridge. Serious foes began a long fight in court.

The Rev. C. H. North was the first person arrested for a meter violation. Police Judge Mike Foster accepted the pastor's explanation that he had gone to get change and dismissed the case.

R. H. Avant of Clinton, Okla., was the first to actually pay a fine, $11.

Judge Foster suspended Mrs. C. W. Alley's $3 fine for overtime parking, allowing her time to sell some chickens to raise the money.

Chappell and others disagreed.

"I think it (the meter) was very good, I think it was really right," Chappell said. "People should pay a little bit of their money to park on the street."

Carl B. Magee, who envisioned a mechanical timing device to control automobile parking, could not foresee his brainchild as something that would drive people to shopping centers—as then unheard of—or as a revenue gathering device.

But controversy wasn't new to him. Magee, a former Albuquerque, N.M., newspaperman, had testified before the Senate Public Lands Committee that was partially responsible for the Teapot Dome exposure. He also was arrested for libel and contempt in New Mexico and sentenced to prison but was pardoned by the governor.

Magee later shot a bystander in a scuffle with the judge who sentenced him. After his acquittal he went to Oklahoma City and started the weekly Oklahoma News.

His concern soon turned to traffic control—finding a way to alleviate the congestion caused by the rapidly expanding number of automobiles on the streets.

Although his concept was simple, it also was exacting. He turned to the engineering department of Oklahoma State University to design an operable parking meter.

The project was turned into a contest, with money provided for materials and a prize for the best design. Numerous models were offered but none was up to the standards demanded by Magee.

Professors H. G. Thuesen and G. A. Hale then took a personal interest in the problem. They perfected the first complete and operable meter in 1933.

Keeping a picture record is a fun part of your travel trips

By MURRAY J. BROWN
UPI Travel Editor

Keeping a pictorial record of your travels is part of the enjoyment of going to faraway places.

And in these days of instamatic cameras, which automatically adjust to changing lighting conditions, you don't have to be a professional photographer to capture the beauty of the earth, or the sky.

Photographs of clusters of white clouds, a silvery wing or engine, or the changing terrain below can add extra punch to your still or movie shots.

The first aerial photograph was taken by Frenchman G. F. Tournachon —known as Nadar —from the swaying basket of a balloon 240 feet above the suburbs of Paris, with a rudimentary wet-plate camera in December of 1858.

"I urge, I force, the image appears little by little, very weak, very pale, but sharp, definite," he said of the developing of mankind's first photograph from the skies.

It's a lot easier and simpler for the airborne traveler-photographer today. For the amateur, best results can be obtained by following the advice of photo experts from a leading camera and film maker:

Choose a window seat on the shady side of the plane if possible. Avoid seats in line with the wing, as it blocks visibility.

Hold the camera steady in your hands. Do not rest it against the vibrating window or window frame.

Keep the camera loaded and readily available so as not to miss an unusual shot. In a speeding plane, picture opportunities are measured in seconds.

Don't be afraid to shoot. You can catch dramatic scenes of runways, skyscrapers, mountains, farms, traffic-clogged highways even when conditions are not perfect.

When landing or shooting ground objects from a low level, pan —that is move the camera very slowly —to keep the subject centered in the viewfinder.

The U.S. Postal Service also has some advice on how to guard against losing your films in the mail, noting that a picture may be worth a thousand words, but only if it is in the hands of the owner.

It said that thousands of film packages are lost or end up in dead letter offices each year because of careless wrapping and addressing. It suggests:

Make sure film cartridges are put in envelopes sturdy enough to withstand handling in the mail processing system.

Make sure the envelope is properly addressed on the outside to the processor and contains the sender's return address on the inside. As an added precaution, adhesive tape with the sender's name and address should be attached to the film cartridge or roll itself.

In mailing film or snapshots, put the words "hand cancel" on all sides of the envelope to prevent damage from automatic canceling machines.

In sending irreplaceable photographs, put a nahe and address on the back in case they are separated from the envelope in which they were mailed.

Americans going abroad should take plenty of film. Prices for black-and-white and color film are usually much higher overseas.

Those sales reports mean more than rows of figures

DETROIT (UPI) — Larry McGee isn't happy with the auto industry slump. When he reads that new car sales haven't begun their traditional spring upturn, he worries.

McGee just returned to his white collar job at Chrysler. He'd been off the job since the day before Thanksgiving and is fearful of even more layoffs at the nation's third-ranking auto company.

McGee, 34, father of three young children, had little to be cheerful about Monday. The four U.S. automakers reported their April sales were off 26 per cent from last year and at a 14-year low. It was the 19th straight month in which they had been unable to match a year-ago level.

But imports jumped 26 per cent above year ago to an April record and for a third straight month grabbed better than one of every five sales in this country.

One of the jobs McGee is working on is a subcompact Chrysler hopes to have on the market within five years. It's the kind of car he says Chrysler needs if it is to fight off the inroads imports have been making.

"They haven't really decided what it's going to be like," he said. "But I hope they make the decision soon."

So does one Detroit auto company analyst who said after viewing the April results: "The imports are really beginning to worry us. We never thought they'd get over 21 per cent of the market three months in a row."

Imports accounted for 140,000 of the total sales with domestic makes tallying 517,637 sales

MISSIONARIES

NEW YORK (UPI) — A sharp rise in the cost of maintaining missionaries overseas, along with decreasing support for the Lutheran Church in America's mission division, means there are no funds for sending new LCA missionaries overseas in 1975, according to church officials.

TV MONITORING

NEW YORK (UPI) — The United Church of Christ has launched a new program of regional workshops designed to alert citizen groups to Federal Communications Commmission rules and involve people in citizen-action programs aimed at improving television broadcasting.

It's a steal.

One of the biggest pains about having your car stolen comes after it's stolen. And the same is true when you get into an accident.

In both cases, you're stuck without a car for awhile. Unless you rent one. And if you rent one, what you end up paying for mileage adds up to a small fortune.

Unless...

Unless you rent a new Ford from Goode Ford. In that case, you pay no local mileage charge whatsoever All you pay is $10 a day. Period.

It's a steal, wouldn't you say? Rent from Goode. Goode is better.

New foursome featured in comedy, 'Dr. Fish'

The Newton Country Players will feature a foursome of new personalities in Murray Schisgal's hilarious romp "Dr. Fish," their final production of the season.

Under the banner "An Evening of Outrageous Comedy," the Players' spring show is paired with a second one-act play, Tom Stoppard's zany farce, "The Real Inspector Hound," directed by Danny Kosow of Chestnut Hill.

Performances of the twin-bill are slated for Saturday and Sunday, May 17-18, and Friday and Saturday, May 23-24, at the Rebecca Pomroy Playhouse, 84 Eldredge St., Newton. Curtain for all performances is 8:15 p.m., with a 7:30 p.m. opening on Sunday. The production will be staged cabaret-style, with tables and chairs.

Ellen Colton of Chestnut Hill, having debuted as Dottie in last Fall's musical "Pal Joey," assumes her first major assignment as Charlotte Mendelson, a middle-aged housewife. Recipient of a B.A. degree in Speech and Drama from Cornell University, Ms. Colton has worked with such well-known luminaries as Uta Hagen, William Hickey and Charles Nelson Reilly. She has been associated also with the Theatre Company of Boston, Caravan Theatre of Cambridge and the MIT Community Theatre.

Skip Portney steps into the role of the harassed husband, Marty Mendelson. In his only previous outing with the Players, he appeared as Roy in last season's "The Odd Couple." On production, he has served as house manager, lighting technician and on set construction.

Making his debut with the Players is George Alland in the title role of Dr. Fish, the sexual crusader. His previous associations have been with The People's Theatre of Cambridge, The Cambridge Center for Adult Education, The Caravan Theatre and the Theatre Workshop of MIT.

Also working with the group for the initial time is Betty King, who has been cast as the slightly dotty grandmother of Dr. Fish.

"Dr. Fish" was described by Clive Barnes of the N.Y. Times as "a battle report from the barricades of the sexual revolution," while Newsday reported, "Murray Schisgal continues to amaze me with his constant originality of themes and his gift of comic dialogue and of warm and rich characterizations."

Anxious to make their sex life more "meaningful", a middle-aged couple consult the eminent Dr. Fish, a sex expert whose doctorate happens to be in American history. The wife and the doctor get along swimmingly once she has overcome her reluctance to say certain forbidden words, but her husband, a down-to-earth type, remains unconvinced.

The efforts of the eager young Dr. Fish to overcome these doubts lead to some enormously funny moments, but the one who finally wins over the husband is Dr. Fish's nutty grandmother, who keeps bustling in with unwanted advice and steaming bowls of homemade lentil soup.

Students participate in model Congress

Some Newton South High School students spent three days and nights of their spring vacation as delegates to the Eleventh Model Congress at New Rochelle High School, New York.

They joined more than 400 students from 75 high schools in 15 states debating and defending legislation written by every delegate a month before the Congress met.

Addressing the Model Congress in joint session on the first day, Congresswoman Bella Abzug and former Congressman Hamilton Fish Sr. delivered impassioned, and opposing, speeches which brought standing ovations from the student delegates, many of whom intend to seek careers in politics or public service.

Committee and floor sessions ran from 8:30 a.m. until after midnight. With the aid of parliamentary and party maneuvering, the Congress managed to pass bills dealing with "reverse discrimination," personal privacy rights, withdrawal from NATO, and modification of the welfare and Social Security systems.

The nine Newton South delegates, the first ones to attend from their school, hope to establish Model Congress as a continuing activity to train future delegates to draft and debate legislation on public issues. The nine delegates were Gary Abramson, David Alexander, Stan Chesler, Barbara Fischbein, David Kamowitz, Thomas McMahon, Daniel Miller, Laura Prager, Mark Sostek and Faculty Advisor, William Hollman.

Benefit Phyllis Curtin, internationally known soprano, will give a concert at the Second Church as a benefit for the All Newton Music School Scholarship Fund. The concert will be Friday, May 16, at 8 p.m. Call 527-4553 for further information.

According to a recent Business Week article, a study of 1,774 urban wives showed that "families with an income of $15,000 per year lost an average of 57 percent of that in the first two years after their husbands died."

Thus, while the wives were left financially bur dened society also expected them to make their sole occupation remarriage. If the widow is working at establishing her identity, she has no role models to guide her. For, as Lewis says, "Boston has given birth to the phenomenon of our time...the super widow."

He points out that while "Jackie Kennedy has found a way to live her life, on her terms, no matter how we may feel about it, Ethel, an admirable woman in many ways, manages to give widows all over the country a massive guilt complex."

"Every other week, for the benefit of the mass media, what do we see but Ethel Kennedy gaily tripping over the grave, lighting candles, kneeling...try to forget when the great symbol of motherhood is doing nothing but remind you..."

Not letting go or trying to idolize the deceased mate were two situations the authors saw as being unhealthy for the widow.

To avoid getting into that trap Ms. Barrie urges women to do what they want to "with a purpose." Lewis even advised women, especially older women to take secretarial courses.

They said that working women made a better adjustment and many said "it was too bad they didn't have jobs when their husbands were alive."

"It has nothing to do with economic need," said Ms. Berns, "these women had a purpose for getting up in the morning." She also said that women should become more aware of the educational opportunities available to them.

Although many women dabble in many kinds of courses such as art appreciation, modern dance, the authors felt that practical courses were more worthwhile. "Get out of the Italian Renaissance" asserts Lewis and into such courses as business management, and adult education.

"Every woman in America must have a way of earning a living," declares Lewis and says that even women who think they have no skills "must look at themselves and assess the qualities they have."

"If they are good cooks, they may think about catering; if they are good at sewing they might think about dressmaking."

He saw one unexplored field for women in the area of day care where centers could be manned by older women. "Put the young wives together with the older women," proposes Lewis.

In order to accomplish ends such as this, Lewis felt that legislation will be needed. He maintains women should band together, cease being afraid and fight. He suggested they lobby for a Widow's Foundation to assist with job training, consciousness raising and political action. "Go out to the political parties," he advised, "and say, hey, what are you doing for me?"

Whatever area of involvement you choose, the message is clear... begin now.

Junior college must close

By RICHARD WILLIAMS
of the Graphic staff

Newton Junior College will not exist after June 30, 1976.

The Board of Directors of the Regional Community Colleges gave a sense of the meeting Friday, May 9, to terminate the college, and a letter notifying the City of Newton of the action was scheduled to have been sent Wednesday.

John Costello, executive director of the board, said the board acted on a letter it received April 18 from Patrick McCarthy, president of the Board of Hig her Education, which said it "did not look with favor" on the state takeover of the college.

Costello and other state officials said the reason for the decision is the severe financi al pinch the state is in, and the desire of the governor to cut 10 percent from the present budgets of state departments.

President of Newton Junior College Charles W. Dudley said, Wednesday morning "I don't appreciate anyone not notifying me" of the action by the Board of Higher Education that was approved by Secretary of Higher Education Paul Parks.

He said he requested official notice of any action three weeks ago, but had not received any.

Dudley and his xtaff has fought four years to have the college continue at its present location' but will fight no more.

"I've appealed to everyone that has any power.

"I'm tired of dealing with bureaucracy and politicians. We (the members of his staff) have run out of gas."

Dudley, president of the college for the past 15 years, said he will find another job in the educational field . But as for the rest of his staff, he wasn't as optimistic.

"It will be difficult. They are qualified people and have an advantage, but no one should have any illusions" about the job market' he said.

He gave strong appreciation to Mayor Theodore Mann and former Mayor Monte Basbas for their attempts to save the college, and also said the board of directors of Newton Junior College had been a great assistance.

However, he said various areas in the city "could have helped fight, but I think they gave up."

As for the students, all students will presently at the college will be allowed to graduate, - if they finish courses by next June, but there will be no freshman class next year.

Undersecretary of Higher Education Burton Wolfman said there is sufficient room in colleges . wtihin commuting distance from Newton that have 500 empty spaces.

He said Massachusetts Bay and Bunker Hill Community Colleges, University of Massachusetts in Boston, and Boston State College all have room for more students.

Newton Junior College was the first public two-year college in New England, founded in 1946.

Seven teachers on the college staff are currently suing the School Committee to give them jobs in secondary schools since their postition have been cut for September, 1975 when there will be no freshman class at the college.

Norumbega proposals denied

At a special meeting Tuesday night, the Board of Aldermen voted to deny construction on the Norumbega land in Auburndale.

Aldermen voted against petitions from the Perini Land & Development Corp. for an office building on the south side of Washington Street and condominiums on the north side.

Land Use Committee members Alan Barkin and Joseph McDonnell, while voting against building condominiums on the north side of the street, voted in favor of allowing the developer to buildthe office building on the south side.

Conal Doyle, spokesman for the Perini company, indicated that negotiations are underway to sell at least one portion of the land that might be used for duplexes.

One parcel being considered for sale is the Little League field on the north side of Commonwealth Avenue, fronting on Commonwealth Avenue.

Doyle also did not rule out the possibility of building single family homes on the Norumbega land.

The Perini spokesman said he was not aware of the fact Newton might be considering a landtaking on the north side of Commonwealth Avenue to preserve this parcel as open space.

He said he was "disappointed" that the Land Use Committee did not try to resolve the land's furture with the company and said he will meet with members of the Auburndale community to discuss any future plans.

He also said the Perini Co. would sell the land and urge any other developer to develop it within existing zoning. This would mean the development plans would not have to go before the Board of Aldermen.

Some aldermen tried to stall the ougtright denial of Perini's requests in order to keep the matter within the Board of Aldermen and allow time for discussion of whether or not a deal could be made that would have allowed Perini to build on the south side of Commonwealth Avenue and sell the north side to the city.

Ald. David Jackson, when this matter came up at the regular Board meeting last week, "chartered" the matter which, in effect, tabled it.

Jackson could not attend Tuesday night's meeting. He sent a letter to the Board urging them to reconsider outright denial.

Revaluation appeals top 7,000

The number of people seeking hearings on their revaluation assessments climbed to 7100 this week.

The figure represents more than 30 per cent of the taxpayers .

Meanwhile, neighborhood groups, aldermen and state representatives are getting ready for the public hearing on revaluation that will be held next Tuesday.

The hearing was called by Board of Aldermen President Eliot K. Cohen after he received a petition from State Rep. Peter Harrington containing the signatures of 150 citizens asking for a public hearing.

The hearing will be in the aldermanic chambers at City Hall. It will begin at 8 p.m.

Harrington pointed out Tuesday that the intent of the public hearing is to build a case so that the city can go to court and ask for at least a one-year delay before revaluation would be put into effect.

In order to do this, both he and Cohen have pointed out, the city needs hard data indicating inequalities exist.

"In order to present the case, the city solicitor needs factual and statistical information on which to base his request for a delay," Harrington said Tuesday.

"We must collect specific examples of inequities that have been caused by Cole-LayerTrumble," he said, referring to the firm that conducted Newton's citywide reassessment.

"We know, for example, of cases where two or more houses that were built by the same contractor have values differing by as much as $5,000," Harrington explained. "We know that there are different values given to land in different portions of the city."

The Newton Graphic has agreed to cooperate in the effort to collect data for the city's delay case. The staff will record the address of the property, the reassessed value, the value the owner gives his own home, and the owner's reasons for the discrepancy in figures.

Other organizations will be compiling the same ifnormation. All of it will be presented at Tuesday's public hearing.

The Graphic staff will be available during regular business hours at 965-6300. Data will be compiled until 5 p.m. Tuesday.

Harrington emphasized that next Tuesday's meeting is "not a political meeting nor a forum for demagoguery."

Revaluation hearings, meanwhile, have entered their fourth week. and will probably continue through the first part of June, according to a statement issue by Paul Reinhard, project director for Cole-Layer-Trumble (CLT).

Reinhard noted that the number of hearings scheduled was "relatively high," and attributed this fact to "the ease with which an appointment could be scheduled and the exension of time granted for the hearings."

"Normally," he said' "a two-week period is allotted for scheduling hearings. We have extended this period at the request of the Board of Aldermen and the mayor and have kept the phone lines open.

"We have held 3100 hearings to date, with almost 300 property owners not showing up for their appointments."

Reinhard also said that many property owners were confused by their tax bill and some "simply wanted an explanation of how the value was determined."

He explained that the estimated tax bill shown on the appraisal notice included a 10 percent anticipated increase in the city budget. If a property owner wants to compare the taxes he would have paid last year using the new appraised value, he needs only to subtract 10 per cent from the estimated tax bill shown and compare that figure against last year's tax bill.

The project supervisor went on to praise

Students travel in Soviet Union

By ELEANOR SIEGEL
of the Graphic staff

With characteristic American warmth and breeziness, 22 students from Newton North High School traveled to the Soviet Union for a two week stay. By definition they were tourists. But they pushed loose from the "touristy" mold and spent their time trying to get to know the people and the culture.

The trip was sponsored by the Citizen's Exchange Corps which specializes in tours to Russia. Costing $895, the fee included meals, fare and hotel rooms.

Of the five students interviewed, two their fare. Brenda R worked for Kentucky Fried Chicken and used her savings for the trip. Laura Buxbaum, a junior, said her parents paid for the fare, but she would have to work to pay them back ½ the amount.

Lacking apprehension, the students attributed their enthusiasm for the trip to Lucien Wiesbrod, their Russian teacher.

The language barrier seemed to be nonexistent even though some of the students had only one year of Russian to help them along. Some had, however, taken as much as three years.

Their orientation for the journey came from Weisbrod, who they said tried to "prepare us for the worst." The "worst" would be customs inspectors "ransacking" their luggage— that never happened—or having trains break down. That never happened.

After a four hour stopover in Helsinki, the group boarded an overnight train. Most of them were too excited to sleep and stayed up all night talking.

Judith Fixman, a junior' said the "best part of the train trip was when a lady came in and asked us if we wanted tea." Weisbrod told them it was the proper thing to buy the tea. So they did. The woman returned with a glass of tea in a "really beautiful" silver holder and cookies, or tea biscuits. The sheer elegance of the service impressed the students.

On a damp, rainy day a group of tired, but thrilled students arrived in Leningrad. The first thing they did was take a bus tour of the city where the buildings were older and as one student described them "unbelievably ornate, but beautiful." A river ran through most of the city and bridges added to the view. High rise buildings noticeably absent.

From their tour they went to a hotel which Michelle Fried, a junior, said was "a first class hotel." They all agreed, however, Laura pointed out it "catered to a certain type of tourist who is really obnoxious." What is the typical tourist? Well, the students felt it was the kind of person who came to spend a lot of money, stay in the hotel and not make any attempt to see the culture or get to know the people. "The kind who wants a hot dog in Russia."

Sensitive to the image of the "Ugly American," the students did take some "mandatory" tours, but also managed to break off into splinter groups, tour the museums on their own and then go off into the city. They saw "getting lost" as the secret to enjoying themselves, by discovering what the city had to offer.

The stereotyped image of restricted tourists in the U.S.S.R. certainly didn't apply to the students. Secret police didn't track them down and noone they en-

Madoc St. townhouses challenged

Robert Cohen wants to put a four-unit townhouse on Madoc Street in Chesnut Hill and his only real opposition seems to be coming from a townhouse developer in the same neighborhood.

The president of the Newton Community Development Foundation (NCDF), developer's of 50 low-income townhouse units on Hamlet Street in Chestnut Hill, appeared at the public hearing Monday on Cohen's petition.

The NCDF project, stepchild of the defunct Chestnut Hill Towers development, is being held up pending an appeal before the Department of Natural Resources. Robert Cohen is the attorney for the group that filed the appeal.

NCDF President Gilbert Avery III told members of the aldermanic Land Use Committee that the group believes Cohen's petition "is so interrelated with our development on Hamlet Street that his opposition to one cannot be reconciled to his proposing the other."

Cohen replied that he had no intention of being blackmailed by NCDF.

"If they think for one moment I'm going to be the victim of their blackmail the way the Towers was, they've got another thing coming," he announced to the committee and audience.

Avery said NCDF feels Cohen's permissive use should not be granted at this time, and that if it is, certain conditions should be attached.

Avery suggested the conditions include provisions that use of the Madoc Street land would not change the run-off into

Springfest '75 will be held Sunday

Springfest '75, the art, crafts, entertainment and food fair sponsored Sunday, May 18, on City Hall grounds by the Newton Cultural Affairs Commission, gives promise of attracting even more than the 7,000 who attended last year.

According to Beverly Berson and CeCe Sloan' over 90 groups will have sales booths demonstrating art, hobbies and crafts, and providing ethnic, regional, and gourmet foods.

Besides the fixed exhibits there will be so much entertainment that ti will be like a three-ring circus, with dance and folk singing at one spot, music at another, and drama and poetry reading at still another.

On a stage near Homer Street Louise Bielski and Nancy Cohen will present the Norumbega Indian dancers, Union Grape, the Metropolitan Civic Ballet, folk and sing-along specialist Lisa Neustadt, the All Newton Music School Ballet, the Garden City Squares, and others.

Near Commonwealth Avenue events staged by Marilyn Krassin and Daniel Kosow include productions by the Newton High School gymnastic team, the Peanut Players, Country Players, Beginnings, Newton High Players, Freeland Players, and several Newton poets.

On the steps in front of War Memorial Auditorium, at 2 p.m. Mayor Theodore Mann will honor Pulitzer Prize winner Maxine Kumin, who is official poet laureate of Newton. During the day, Ms. Kumin will be available to autograph copies of her latest book, "House, Bridge, Fountain." Before and after the presentation there will be a musical program including brass motets from the New England Conservatory and the All Newton Music School, choruses from Underwood, Spaulding, Bigelow, Day, and Bowen Schools, the Warren Junior High orchestra, the All Newton Elementary School Band, the Metropolitan Wind Instrument Symphony, the Highland Glee Club, Gospel Singers, the Newton High Brothers, and the New Joy Group.

In the parking lot on Homer Street there will be a children's fair from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and square dancing from 2 to 4 p.m. Food will be provided by the YMCA and numerous booths all day.

As part of The Newton Cultural Affairs Commission's Spring Festival, the annual concert of original compositions created, arranged and orchestrated by members of the Theory of Music I and II and Independent Study in Composition Classes at Newton North High School will take place Thursday evening' May 22 at 7·45 p.m. in the auditorium.

The compositions for symphony orchestra, concert band, stage band, chamber and vocal ensembles, and solos have been written in styles representative of the Renaissance, Baroque, Rococo, Classical, Romantic, and Contemporary twentieth century periods. Several of the pieces will be conducted by the composers themselves.

Henry Lasker0is the ynstructor of the courses. The student composers are Ross Alrert, Jonathan Black, Dory Coddington, Linda Denaro, Aldo Fabrizi, Sarita Goldberg, Kathy Goldwait, Susan Greenberg, Jurgen Kern, David Klashman, Joan Laine, Melanie Morgan, Michele Morgan, Michael O'Brien, Marie O'Nell, Barbara Rattigan, Jeffrey Santis, Diane Solov, and Carty Thompson.

For many years this program in composition, a unique experience for a high school, has motivated scores of students who have never had the opportunity or stimulus to compose. At the Youth Concerts performed by the Boston and Newton Symphony Orchestras, compositions by Newton North students have been included traditionally.

Following the concert a reception will be held at which refreshments will be served. The public is cordially invited.

Harrington files malpractice legislation

Legislation to resolve the crisis in medical malpractice insurance in the Commonwealth is being filed and cosponsored by Rep. Peter F. Harrington of Newton.

"The crisis in medial malpractice insurance was reached in the past few months with the threat of the insurance companies who write the bulk of malpractice insurance in Massachusetts to terminate sales in June, raising the fear that there will not be any coverage available," Harington said.

"Doctors, lawyers and the insurance industry have been wrestling with the problem of increasing malpractice insurance costs and have been unable to reach any agreement," Harrington went on to say. "As a result, state government has been asked to come to the rescue."

The Joint Insurance Committee of the Legislature, of which Harrington is a member, has held a series of meetings in the past few weeks with representatives of the medical societies, hospital associations, the insurance industry, the Dept. of Insurance and the Mass. Bar Association in an attempt to determine where the problems lie and to get further recommendations for possible solutions.

As a result of these meetings, Insurance Committee members have decided that legislation is required to solve the crisis.

"We have no other choice but to legislate," Harrington said. "It is obvious that the private market cannot survive the present problems."

He added that Massachusetts is not as bad off as other states.

"Surprisingly, our malpractice premiums are lower than some of the rural states, but the insurance companies claim they are losing money and are threatening to withdraw from the malpractice market."

"The legislation that we will be presenting must be far-reaching in its impact to alleviate the crisis that has developed," he said.

Harrington reported that it appears that one such feature will have to be a mandatory joint underwriting association to guarantee the availability of medical malpractice insurance, to ensure that all physcians have coverage so that health care in the Commonwealth will not be impaired by any physician's refusal to treat patients without insurance coverage.

Other key issues the committee members are considering are a mandatory medical arbitration tribunal of professional and lay people to hear all malpractice cases with appeals only to the Supreme Court, screening committees to filter out non-meritorious claims, limitations on judgments, restrictions on an attorney,s contingency fee, a committee to hear grievances against doctors, similar to the Board of Bar Overseers for attorneys, and allowing companies to change to a claims made rate of setting system to cover only those claims while the policy is in force.

Highlights of the Medical Malpractice Legislation:

A Medical Malpractice Tribunal would be fored for every medical malpractice case and would consist of Superior Court Justice, a physician and an attorney. The tribunal would conduct their hearing within 15 days after the defendant has filed his answer in court to avoid the delay of four to five years before these cases receive any type of hearing or trial. The hearing would basically be an informal evidentiary proceeding to determine if there is sufficient probably cause for liability to allow the case to go before a jury.

Strong sanctions would be imposed against any plaintiff who has a finding rendered against him by the Tribunal as he would be required to post a minimum of $2,000 cash bond before he could take the case to a trial before a jury. In addition, the findings of the Tribunal would be admissable in a full trial. These measures are expected to effectively preclude a substantial number of cases from going before a jury for a full trial with significant savings for the defence of these claims which will be passed on in the form of lower premium rates.

A Joint Underwriting Association (JUA) would be created to guarantee the availability of medical malpractice insurance for all physicians and hsopitals. All insurance companies writing casualty insurance in the Commonwealth would be required to participate based on the amount of casualty premiums that they write.

The JUA would go into effect 30 days after the passage of the bill to ensure immediate availability of malpractice insurance and would terminate at the end of 1977. Participation by the companies would be mandatory, failure to participate would result in suspension of their license to do business in Massachusetts

A Board of Medical Discipline would be created that will be similar in nature to the Board of Bar Overseers for attorneys, and would investigate and hold hearing on complaints of unprofessional conduct against physicians. The Board would consist of five physicians and two consumers all of whom would be appointed by the governor. If a physician is found to be guilty of "unprofessional conduct" as defined in the bill, the board could reprimand him or suspend or revoke his license to practice medicine.

The Commissioner of Insurance would be required to fix and establish all medical malpractice insurance rates. Presently there is a system of file and use whereby the companies have virtually charged whatever rates they desire and the physician has had no choice but to either accept the rate or go without insurance coverage.

Doctors would also have the right to pay their premiums in installments rather than being required to pay the entire premium at one time. Also, a rebate provision has been included to require the companies to refund any excessive profits they may earn if the Tribunal system is as successful as we anticipate.

The International Division of the National League sponsored by the Newton Recreation Department has elected Richard Keyes president.

Meeting at the Albemarle Field House earlier this month' the Division also elected Joseph Siciliano, vice president; David Roberts, secretary; John Balkus, treasurer; Frank Moore, umpire-in-chief; Howard Ferguson, protest chairman; and James E. Murphy, league advisor.

Those present voted six to four not to accept the free substitute rules, but voted to have the ground rules remain the same as in past years; not to allow advanced players to participate in the National Division; and to have each catcher wear protective headgear on defense. The committee also urged all teams to consider double ear protective gear when buying new equipment.

Murphy recommended that because of conflicts with junior high and high school, the season will open on June 9 rather than June 2. The recommendation was adopted unanimously.

Aldermen debate charter changes

Newton voters will have a chance to take any potential power away from neighborhood councils when proposed changes in the in November. City Charter appear on the ballot

Also on the ballot will be a proposed reduction in the amount of money the School Committee can budget for maintenance of school buildings, and elimination of restriction of four terms as the limit of service of a School Committee member.

These proposed changes were passed by the Board of Aldermen Tuesday night.

Two other suggested changes were postponed and will be taken up Monday at 7:30 p.m. at a continuation of Tuesday night's meeting.

To be discussed Monday are giving the Board permission to raise the mayor's salary in the middle of his term and a motion to eliminate specific mention of the Planning Department or Planning Board in the Charter.

Several other matters involving language changes and clarification of city procedures will be lumped into one question on the ballot.

All referendum questions must be approved by Mayor Theodore D. Mann and the attorney general.

At the speci f the Board with about al meeting o 40 people present to hear ab the members carefully considered the future of the Newton Highlands Neighborhood Area Council. n

The first motion on the floor was the Legislation and Rules Committee's report to eliminate the whole section of the charter that established the councils.

This was defeated by a 13-6 vote.

The motion by Ald. President Eliot Cohen to eliminate giving the Board power to delegat any "substantive powers' to the powers" councils seemed to be a compromise. that narrowly received the necessary two-thirds vote.

Ald. Joseph McDonnell pointed out that this would leave the Newton with "the most complicated advisory group in the world," due to the process required for recognition of a group under the charter.

Ald. Susan Schur and Joan Saklad were among aldermen to favor the councils' existence for two more years.

The elimination of substantive power however will not apparently take away from the councils the right to use manpower in the city's offices, although the Newton Highlands group said it would not make a burden of itself, according to Ald. Saklad who is from Ward 6.

Several School Committee members spoke against any changes in the so-called "Charter Maintenance" account.

Currently the charter says the School Committee - may include in its budget a "maximum expenditure equal to four percent" of the previous year's operating budget in order to "provide ordinary maintenance and repairs on all school buildings . . .

A yes vote on the referendum will reduce this school account to two percent of the previous budget, and would require a vote of two-thirds of the Board of Aldermen for the School Committee to trans fer funds from the account.

City Solicitor Howard Levine ruled Tuesday that ittee to transfer it was legal for the School Comm funds from its maintenance account to pay for other expenses under the current charter.

Levine said "The charter is very ambiguous," in this area, and in such an unclear situation, cases from 1922 allow the School Committee to transfer funds inside their budget.

Levine said Wednesday he will begin to study the Board's proposed change in the ordinance to see if it is in conflict with the fiscal autonomy of the School Department's funds.

He added that this current change is signifcant because it will give the School Committee complete responsibility to determine what maintenance is necessary.

This year the School Committee used approximately $193,000 from this account to cover deficits in utility, transportation, and salary accounts. As a result, only emergency maintenance will be done on buildings from May 1 to July 1.

Ald. David Cohen noted that Public Buildings Commissioner Gene Larson said $1 million could easily be spent on annual regular maintenance of the schools, an amount which would be about 3.3 percent of the School Committee's present budget. ing the two

One reason for approv percent limitation was because the Committee never spent the full four percent, and this lower amount would possibly increase the need for communi ion between the Board and the School cat Committee.

The current charter clause limiting the terms of School Committee members was felt unfair by the Board, since there is no limit on the number of terms aldermen may serve.

The vote to delete that section of the charter was 12-0, with seven members absent.

School closing study ready June 9

By RICHARD WILLIAMS
of the Graphic staff

The School Committee recommitted itself to a school consolidation study at M onday

Vincent Siluzio, director of the Research and Planning Department of the school adminstration, said he will follow the basic plan of the Citizens Advisory (CACDE). Committee on Declining Enrollment

At a School Committee meeting on March 25, Silluzio in line with was given the responsibility to compile data the study to present to the committee June 9.

Silluzio said he will compile two different cost estimates for each possible school closing using inflation factors of five and eight percent based on 1974-75 operating costs. .

He also will consider the change in the distance from the old school to the new school that each child must travel.

No schools will be closed before September, 1976 .

William Shaevel, a former member of the the now defunct CACDE, felt free to express his dissent from the entire committee's report.

His specific complaint was that if Memorial School were to be closed, the concept of a neighborhood would be better preserved if all the students went to one school rather than being split between two schools.

Countryside School is separated from the Oak Hill area by the Charles River Country Club, and he felt the neighborhood would be disrupted if students were sent to both Countryside and Spaulding.

The CACDE report only suggested that students be sent to contiguous schools, but also urged preserving neighborhoods wherever possible.

Several of the 50 people at the meeting, including some Committee members, were upset that Silluzio's report would not make any specific recommendations for redistricting to allow for more equitable use of schools in September,1975, or before any schools are closed. ges

During the communications part of the agenda, Fink read a letter from a parent praising the preschool collaborative program at Spaulding School, where the meeting took place.

The parents of a cerebral palsy child said the program helped the child develop library and cognitive skills, and has helped the child to be well-adjusted and happy.

The hearing

Next Tuesday night, the city has will hold a public hearing on revaluation, without question the hottest topic in Newton today.

The public hearing, at the behest of 150 citizens, should be viewed as a group effort to build a case for a delay in implementation of revaluation, not a political forum or a general gripe session.

The city's political leaders have been stressing this point during the week, and we'd like to stress it too.

Is Newton's revaluation fair or unfair? That is the question to be answered. The question is not "how did you like your tax bill?"

At this point, there is no concrete answer to whether or not Newton has been fairly revalued and the tax burden is now equally borne by every taxpayer in the city.

If we, as a city, cannot or do not endeavor to answer this question next Tuesday, we will be wasting our time.

In order to make a case for a delay in court, we must present specific examples of unfair assessing. To this end, as is indicated in a story on the front page, various groups throughout the city will be compiling data for presentation at the hearing Tuesday.

The Newton Graphic will be one of the groups taking data, that is specific reasons why you think you have been unfairly assessed.

If you call us at 965-6300, we will take down your address, your assessed valuation, what you think your house is worth, and what you base the discrepancy upon.

This material will be turned over to State Rep. Peter Harrington Tuesday before the hearing.

We are in no position to judge whether or not Newton's revaluation is accurate. We are assisting in the effort to compile citywide data in order to help present a clear picture of the impact of revaluation.

Perhaps when all the data is compiled, we will learn that the assessing firm has done an excellent job. Perhaps not.

In any case we hope you will join in this citywide effort, and if you plan to attend the hearing, come with facts, not fantasies.

Cables for Kissinger

Who makes U.S. foreign policy?

Commentary by Marquis Childs

WASHINGTON — Compiled for Secretary of State Henry Kissinger is a thick volume made up of cables from around the world following the fall of Vietnam asking more or less bluntly this question: Who makes the foreign policy of the United States?

There are variants on this theme: Who is responsible for decisions taken? And even, whom can we trust when we hear conflicting views on a policy issue?

For Kissinger, trying to pull together the tangled threads of American policy following the debacle, this is a black book that cannot be simply filed and forgotten. For the inquiries come from foreign ministers, from prime ministers and presidents. While the tone is not unfriendly, it is nevertheless insistent.

And there is no answer or, at any rate in this moment of doubt and uncertainty, there can be no unequivocal response.

Foreigners, even those best informed and responsible, have always found it difficult to understand the American system of divided powers with the executive and the legislature sharing power even on foreign policy W to some degree.

In the aftermath of the debacle, as Kissinger muses, the nation might have had a Dunkirk reaction. We shall all stand together with unity in diversity. We will demonstrate to the world that we are one people able to withstand a blow to our pride and prestige.

But that was not to be. The abyss between Congress and the State Department and the White House, to speak of only one of the fissures in the body politic, is wider than ever. Old differences over policy have, if anything, been accentuated. Foremost on this list is Turkey and the Greek-Turkish quarrel over Cyprus.

Congressional action to prevent further military aid to Turkey still stands, with little chance the blockade will be lifted short of action on Cyprus not presently in the cards. As Kissinger sees it, he has gone a long way to try to meet the demands of the members of Congress chiefly responsible for putting up the barrier.

Twice he has held lengthy meetings with Representatives John Brademas, Paul Sarbanes and Benjamin Rosenthal to try to convince them that the ban can only be harmful to American security and the NATO structure.

Not only that but he showed them the most important N cables passing between the department and Ankara in an effort to convince them that everything possible was being done to persuade the Turks to show some give on Cyprus. In later sessions with Brademas, he debated the issue with all his brilliant forensic skill.

But the three were unmoved. They felt the cables showed the Secretary had not taken a firm line with the Turks. Instead he had tried persuasion and sweet reasonableness. Until he was willing to state that the foreign-aid law had been broken when the Turks used American weapons for other . than defensive purposes and bring Ankara to account on this score, the ban will remain.

The Senate foreign relations committee approved a resolution by Majority Leader Mike Mansfield and Minority Leader Hugh Scott to resume the flow of military materiel.

But the vote was only 9 to 7 which is pretty narrow for that body on an issue endorsed by the leadership and sought by the administration. Once on the Senate floor, it would have tough going and certainly it would be defeated in the House.

That is only one impasse, although it is extremely important as Kissinger prepares to go to a NATO meeting with Greece and Turkey and the strength of the alliance on the southern flank on the critical list. Divergent views on how to avert war in the Middle East smolder just below the surface following the failure of Kissinger's second round of shuttle diplomacy.

The Secretary is embattled with his enemies, notably in Congress and in the press, determined to cut him up into little pieces. But Kissinger is fighting it out with the high articulateness, the public presence, which have stood him in good stead in the past.

He is telling his story to reporters. He gave a 45-minute interview to Barbara Walters on NBC's "Today" show and, somewhat to his surprise, she is releasing it in five segments. He is speaking in St. Louis and Kansas City.

A striking parallel is with Dean Acheson, Harry Truman's Secretary of State, who in his last months in office was set upon by violent opponents. Acheson stood on the dignity of the office and the loyalty of his president. Kissinger is in the sweaty arena giving his critics as good as he gets.

The doctors' strike is really against lawyers

Analysis by Gus Tyler

New York — Doctors are threatening a nationwide strike, the first such action by medics in our nation's history. They are striking against the lawyers of America. And the issue is malpractice.

The physicians don't call it a "strike," but it is. They do not say the lawyers are their enemies, but they are.

From Maryland come reports that the chief of surgery at Suburban Hospital in Bethesda will not see any more patients after May 31. The peninsula General Hospital in Salisbury is scheduling no operations after the last day in May. Doctors and hospital are refusing all services, except for emergencies.

The healing profession is protesting malpractice rates. The big insurance company for Maryland doctors — the St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Company — raised its rates by 125 per cent in the last three years. When the insurance outfit was denied still another increase, the company announced that it was discontinuing all coverage after May 31.

Doctors in Northern California announce that they will quit practice altogether rather than pay present malpractice rates. The big carrier in that state is the Argonaut Insurance Co. The company wanted out. But, under pressure, it agreed to continue issuing policies for three-month periods provided they were granted increases of up to 322 per cent on previous rates.

When doctors were faced with renewal on the first of May, about half of them simply refused.

"While doctor and lawyer are locked in combat, the sick and the stricken will be expected to hold their breath—if they have any left."

From New York comes the news that, if there is no satisfactory legislation by July 1 to cover malpractice, a number of hospitals will shut down normal services. The Kings County Medical Society found that 70 per cent of its members would not treat patients unless they are able to get an adequate insurance plan.

The insurance companies complain that malpractice awards are so gigantic that the carriers can no longer carry the burden. Unless they can triple and quadruple the rates, they will also go on strike by quitting malpractice insurance.

Doctors refuse to pay outrageous rates, totalling tens of thousands a year for a doctor.

Their proposal, of course, is legislative. Brooklyn doctors like the Indiana formula: in malpractice cases to have an impartial medical panel advise the jury, with a maximum award to the patient of half a million dollars.

Opposing the doctors are many lawyers, some of whom count on the impressive awards in malpractice cases for a lucrative business. In California, the doctors say that only 14 to 19 cents of every insurance dollar ever gets to the aggrieved patient. The rest goes to the insurance company and the lawyer.

The doctors have not been able to get very far with pleas to insurance companies or governors or legislatures. So now they resort to the ultimate weapon: a refusal to work.

The big obstacle in the legislature is the body of lawyers, many of whom loom large in the law-making body.

While doctor and lawyer are locked in combat, the sick and the striken will be expected to hold their breath—if they have any left.

No one ever speaks up for American business

By Henry J. Taylor, national columnist

Pollster Louis Harris recently sent an assistant to interview me as a newspaperman on the public attitude toward business. Mr. Harris prepared about 100 questions.

'There! That ought to protect you from getting shot . . . unless they happen to hit one of those teeny weeney loopholes.'

Some I could not answer, of course. But others skillfully revelaed, as humorist Artemus Ward said long ago, "It ain't the things we know that causes the trouble. It's the things we know that ain't so."

My thoughts turned to a survey by the American Association of Advertising Agencies. It indicates that about nine out of ten — 88 per cent — of the surveyed college students say they'd prefer careers in government, a professorship, or academic life rather than business.

The 88 per cent see business "removed from social and moral affairs," "dull," "noncreative," etc.

My thoughts turned as well to another poll, this one of law students. There are 68,000 full-time law students in our country. The poll shows that the majority disdain corporate law, as if business were shomehow shameful and not a life worth living.

For example, the 39 editors of the Harvard Law Review are considered the Law School's top and most promising students. All 39 stated that it is unlikely that a single one of them will enter business practice.

Their expressed interest is in the legal aspects of poverty affairs, environmental questions, pollution, consumer protection and social reforms — practically anything except becoming involved with business.

Yet this is a business country. Nearly everybody is in business one way or another. And every one of us is sharing the benefits that are produced.

How does it happen that a mere six per cent of the world's people — we Americans — have been able to accumulate more of man's needs than the other 94 per cent put together? How is it that this six per cent accounts for 33 per cent of the world's total production. Why is our purchasing power greater than that of all the people in Asia, Africa, and Latin America combined?

How does it happen that two-thirds of all the inventions created in the world are created in the United States? How is it that we have here the shortest working hours and the highest rate of pay in the world?

The extent to which we Americans distribute wealth — the useful physical things — among us is the marvel of the world. We distribute wealth better than any place in the world.

Nobody could be so insane as to claim that everything is right with our country. But nobody lives on the moon. Everything in the world is relative. But from the viewpoint of the workingman, the man or woman in a profession, or from any viewpoint, every scorecard comparing our country with other nations gives America the championship blue ribbon.

How true you find that as soon as you leave our shores. Our country has always had a special quality. It caused countless millions to come here and more millions to want to come if they could. That quality is that here the plain man always had a chance.

There is no security as great as the ability to qualify for a better job. Here you have the opportunity to get and fill a better job. Opportunity for a career. Opportunity to go into business for yourself. Opportunity to improve yourself and your family. Yet this system can survive only if we all clearly understand it and speak for it.

The detractors are so articulate, and most businessmen so mute, that sometimes it sounds as if this country grew to be the greatest nation on earth by doing everything wrong. And what does it do to have the system which brings the greatest good to the greatest number, unique in all the world, if the majority of the people in it do not know it?

The 100 questions Mr. Harris prepared make one thing crystal clear: If those who believe in free enterprise are not willing and able to defend it, those who don't believe in it will take over.

Changing values

To the Editor:

Assuming that all the inequities in the CLT valuations are eventually ironed out and Newton finally achieves 100 per cent assessment, this would be true for only one year as the real estate market fluctuates and properties change up or down.

Will the Board of Assessors be able to keep assessments up to date, or will a mass appraisal firm have to come in again to reinspect every building and home?

It really should not be anyone's business, least of all the assessor's, whether my kitchen has a built-in dishwasher (three per cent sales tax besides all the hidden taxes), if I finish off the attic, or if I line the bathroom walls with plastic, ceramic tile or gold leaf, spending from income already taxed twice to do it.

There is a growing body of respected economists, planners and others who feel that the only salvation for cities and towns is to remove the tax from improvements and tax only the land, unimproved as well as improved, at its full value due to community activities and expenditures, combined with the necessary zoning regulations. This would be a much easier job for the assessors; it would stop penalizing those who improve and maintain their property; and it would keep neighborhoods from becoming rundown, while producing as much or more revenue for the city. Think what a boon it would be for the construction industry.

I expect Newton property owners have learned more about the real estate tax since April 6 than they ever cared to know, but anyone who wants to know more should write to Senator Muskie's Subcommittee on Intergovernmental Operations for a copy of S1255, "a bill to provide for a program of assistance to state governments in reforming their real property tax laws and providing relief from real property taxes for low-income individuals and for other purposes." The 948 pages of testimony at the hearings can also be very instructive.

Open letter to CLT

To the Editor:

Your representative, Paul J. Reinhard, has told our Newton aldermen that your methods of mass assessing our city is "like a trade secret." Since Watergate, our citizenry has become mighty suspicious of secrets. This letter is to help you add a bright new page of credibility so you may proudly open your books with no fear. You will have no need for secrets.

We don't really want your employees to join the long unemployment line, so we respectfully suggest that Cole, Layer, and Trumble should pursue further study in real estate assessments.

Start a new page.

Your 12 highly trained (two weeks training) young people, six with college degrees, you assured us, who raced through our homes half-heartedly counting rooms and toilets must have noticed that we care about our homes.

Even though the structures are made of wood and stone, to secretly assess their value by "how much it would get on the market" is wrong. To play one neighbor against the other is all wrong. This is the way that wars are started even between brothers. Tear these two pages from your book.

Start another new page.

Our Cub Scouts could help you with the concept of equal justice for all. It's in our constitution. You must remember reading some place about equal justice. I mean like assessing the tiny backyard tomato gardener $1.50 per foot and rich country clubs 19 cents per foot.

You won't need a college math course to help you understand that if a person does not want to sell his home, it has no market value. The home is preceless. To the homeowner each bit of earth his home rests on is precious and he resents arbitrary assessments. It's very simple, you don't even need a pocket calculator.

More simple lessons — older homes are more expensive to maintain, and much harder to hear. One fireplace — add. Eight fireplaces — subtract. Eighteen thousand five hundred sixteen of our homes were built before 1939.

The small office of Human Resources at City Hall could help with more complicated lessons. Like how hard it is for the almost 4,000 unemployed in our city, or the 18,000 people who are over 60 years of age, and the widows and veterans, and many bright young families who find it very hard to just get along. You might call this a course of Human Economics.

Don't expect much help from the local banks. As one mortgage officer told me, "Banks don't want to get involved in politics." But our fine local real estate brokers will be glad to tell you that overtaxed real estate is indeed difficult to sell. Our Newton Board of Assessors know our city well and you would be wise to listen to them. You could learn a great deal about our people.

Honesty is the best policy and like I said, after Watergate you should not even try to keep secrets from our Board of Aldermen. And never, no never, from the taxpayer. It would be wrong!

After all, this study when you at last get your diploma go some place else to practice. Newton doesn't want you anymore. Sorry we cannot even give you a good recommendation. You didn't try hard enough.

The car as a weapon

To the Editor:

The events of May 3, on the Washington Street bridge, in which the Citgo gasoline truck was totally destroyed, and a major accident occured on our city streets, stands out in my mind as a totally distressing event. Newspapers and television stations reported the catastrophe with gusto, yet failed to see a major point in the entire event.

On one Saturday evening a driver of a single automobile, in a moment of unknown passion, cut out of his lane on the bridge and came close to destroying a man's life, several large buildings, and threatened the existence of many people. To me, this is a symbol of a driver's nation that if it doesn't come to grips with itself, will destroy itself.

Do I exaggerate? I truly don't think so. For one car to cause an accident of such proportions is frightening. During daylight hours, on a week day, that single driver could have changed the lives of thousands. And each day, as I travel from my Newton home, I see drivers use their automobiles as a machine that can vent their frustration, demonstrate the strength of their ego, establish their sense of power, and perhaps, most frightening, demonstrate their power to kill, or reprieve.

One driver can threaten thousands of lives. How many of today's drivers come close?

Autocratic School Committee

To the Editor

At this time, the entire American nation is pausing to mark and reflect upon the momentous series of events which took place 200 years ago within a fifteen-mile radious of our city.

There were many grievances and reasons contributing towards the Revolution, bit if one were asked what single rallying cry most fired dissidence in the hearts of patriots a likely answer would be "no taxation without representation."

The current School Committee budget outcry suggests certain parallels with the aforementioned events. Autocratic King George III had his Stamp Act Parliament and the autocratic School Committee shairwoman has her rubber stamp Schoo Committee majority. Not by the wildest stretch of imagination can one believe that the confiscatory tax burden of our schools has been levied by representatives reflecting the majority will of the electorate.

To disagree with the pontifications and decisions of the insensitive School Committee majority is to be labeled as "dangerous to quality education," just as disagreement with royal decrees earned patriots appellations such as "rabble-rousers" and "radicals."

The monarch had his "Writs" enforced by stamp collectors and marching redcoats while the School Committee, hiding behind the philosophical mantle of "fiscal autonomy" causes a taxpayers' suit to be filed by fifteen citizens who as far as the writer is aware have made no prior attempt to relieve the suffering taxpayers in an honest, intelligent effort to effect a compromise — far easier to bring the bayonets of litigation to bear in blind self-righteousness!

What recourse do we now have? Thanks to the blood shed by many generations of forebears, our democracy is still intact and it is no longer necessary to take up arms against domestic tyrants. All that is necessary is for a concerned, informed citizenry to actively support new candidates who will faithfully discharge their obligations to their electors, who will help legitimatize fiscal autonomy with fiscal responsibility, and who will support the two responsible (albeit ineffective minority) voices of incumbents Delicata and Mandell.

Commends firefighters

Here is a letter received by Chief Frederick A. Perkins Jr., of the Newton Fire Department that we wish printed in your next edition:

Dear Chief Perkins:

I would like to thank you and the firemen of the Newton Fire Department for the outstanding work that they performed in controlling the fire on the bridge at Newton Corner on the evening of May 3.

Without their speedy and efficient response, we may have had a much more serious situation, both on the Turnpike as well as in the local community. The officers and men of the Newton Fire Department were most cooperative in every respect including the assistance rendered to our engineers in securing the bridge before traffic was allowed to travel on the Turnpike.

The members of the Board of the Massachusetts Turnpike Authority join me in extending our sincere thanks to you, your officers and to your men.

John T. Driscoll,
Chairman
Massachusetts Turnpike Authority

Journalistic shabbiness

To the Editor:

On May 1, the Newton Graphic departed from its normally high standard of excellence in reporting the news and allowed itself to fall to journalistic shabiness. It is a responsibility to condemn poor reporting regardless of how infrequently it may occur in any newspaper.

The story I refer to was entitled "People Being Harassed" and specifically the statement attributed to Alderman Tennant. He referred to the reports of some unnamed elderly people that were reportedly being harassed by unnamed real estate brokers.

My qualler with the Newton Graphic's reporting of such statements casting aspersions on all real estate brokers is obvious, but I must also take exception with Alderman Tennant.

If these low tactics are indeed being used, that is clearly unethical. It is the duty of Alerman Tennant to act now, and bring charges against those responsible. I am certain those guilty will be dealth with severely by the Real Estate Board.

To prevent any further harassment, these unfortunate people must be exposed and weeded out from our real estate community.

I beg of you, by your generalization of a sad incident by thoughtless people, you must not condemn those of us in the real estate profession who cherish our good names and reputations.

I urge the Newton Graphic to print the identity of the persons responsible for these harassing tactics, so they may be exposed and separated from the highly reputable Newton Real Estate Community. I also urge Alderman Tennant to submit formal grievances against these people to the Real Estate Board of Registration in Boston so disciplinary action may be taken.

However, if these complaints cannot be substantiated, I ask the Newton Graphic to retract the charges made.

Guzzi opens information service today

State Secretary Paul Guzzi today announced the opening of a new CITIZEN INFORMATION SERVICE to be operated by his office beginning May 15.

The new service will handle citizens' questions and problems related to state agencies through a statewide toll-free telephone number.

The new service is deisgned to "make state government more accessible to people" according to Secretary Guzzi who is optimistic that this "much needed centralized information service will help end the red tape usually associated with governmental agencies.

"There is a great deal of public information in my office and throughout state government that should be easy for people to obtain. The Citizen Information Service is intended to provide a quick link to state government for people throughout the Commonwealth."

Questions will be handled that relate to all state agencies including public health, education, public safety, unemployment, taxation, and transportation. Callers will either receive immediate answers to their concerns or will receive a follow-up phone call.

The new service, part of an overall commitment to make public information easier to obtain, has been created through a reorganization of existing divisions and personnel. The service will be open Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Citizen Information Service can be reached toll-free by calling: 727-7030 (metropolitan Boston area) and 1-800-392-6090 (outside Boston area); or by writing: Citizen Information Service, Office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, State House, Boston, MA 02133.

Newton reimbursed for fighting costs

Newton will be reimbursed for expenses incurred in fighting the gasoline fire on the Washington Street Bridge in Newton Corner May 3.

Cities Service Oil Co. of Braintree has agreed to replace the 530 gallons of foam, valued at more than $3,000, used to contained the fire.

The Massachusetts Turnpike Authority will pick up the cost of 1500 feet of fire and police cable, costing $1200, and overtime pay amounting to $2777.

"I have requested other departments which responded to this critical situation, including street, water, engineering, and police, to seek reimbursement for our costs to the fullest possible extent," Mayor Theodore D. Mann said.

Former transportation secretary is at MIT

Alan A. Altshuler of 55 Prentice Rd., Newton Centre has returned to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology as professor of political science and urban studies and planning after three and one-half years as the Commwealth of Massachusetts' Secretary of Transportation and Construction.

Altshuler, 39, was professor of political science in 1971 when he resigned his MIT faculty position to join the administration of former Massachusetts Governor Francis W. Sargent.

Altshuler, known for his writing in the fields of American government and urban public policy and for his public activity in the field of transportation, was named by Time magazine in July, 1974, as one of the 200 outstanding young American leaders.

From September, 1969, to August, 1970, Altshuler served as chairman of Governor Sargent's Task Force on Transportation, a committee formed to advise the governor on major transportation controversies in Greater Boston.

On the advice of the Task Force, Sargent halted work on the planned new expressways within Rt. 128 and ordered a comprehensive effort to develop a new comprehensive transportation plan for Greater Boston.

Altshuler then served as director of this comprehensive planning study, known as the Boston Transportation Planning Review, until he was appointed secretary in June, 1971. As secretary, he had overall responsibility for the Review, which produced a new plan emphasizing mass transit rather than highway development for the region late in 1972.

Change the ceremony

To the Editor:

On Sunday morning, June 9, 1974 the Newton Fire Department held its annual Memorial Exercise at the Centre Street headquarters in Newton Centre opposite the playground.

In past years it had been a beautiful and impressive ceremony with an honor guard and its colors, the chief and his lieutenats laying a huge rib-boned wreath on the embedded stone, the mayor and his assistant present, giving the main address, one of the best singers available giving the whole affair a perfect atmosphere for honoring our past, valiant men of the department who have passed away; wonderfully dedicated men readied upon an instant noitce to lay down their lives for our protection day or night, in the freezing winter or sweltering summer.

Sadly, tho, this annual memorial service has been neglected and allowed to settle back into mediocracy. Only a handful of our Newton citizens attend, the men of the honor guard march Falstaffianly, their uniforms shabby and unpressed, their paraded attention irregular. Cars go by outside on Centre street with impunity, totally unaware of the sacredness of the affair, some intentionally obnoxious, as a jeep that last year reving it up insultingly and backfiring a few times so we could not hear.

Isn't it time for a change for this annual ceremony? At least the Police Department could cooperate and block off Centre Street this year for one hour to prevent this interruption! Might they even join with the Fire Department in its annual memorial exercises and together give due recognition to their men who both serve us so well and faithfully. And just as much to blame are the citizens of Newton who neglect to honor and attend this potentially beautiful service, certainly if only the families of the fire department itself turned up there wouldn't be enough room on the large headquarters lawn to sit and listen and pray sincerely for those dedicated men now passed on, who guarded us so well through the years we took so safely for granted.

Nine officers in last Newton College class

Nine Newton Police officers, including two grandfathers were the recipients of degrees and graduated with the last class at Newton College.

They entered Newton College of the Sacred Heart in 1967 and earned their associate degrees from Newton College, after the name change, and their bachelor of arts degrees are being granted by Boston College, due to the merger of Newton College and Boston College.

The officers became students at the invitation of the then President Gabrielle Husson, and Dean Mary Quinlan in 1967. The offer was made by Sisters Husson and Quinlan as a means of the college returning a value to the community for services rendered.

There were many changes in the seven years since the officers presence. The campus created a coed institution, the first in the Sacred Heart Colleges chain. Sister Husson, after inaugurating the program for the Newton officers, resigned her position as President to make way for a lay administration and to return to active teaching. James Whalen became president, the college became Newton College, and this year was merged with Boston College.

No matter what hat you wear, profits help you.

Have you ever thought what profits do for you?

Profits create new products, new industries, new services and new jobs. The evidence is all around us. Look at the fantastic growth of the communications, chemical, computer and many other industries in the past 20 years.

This growth is reflected in the steady rise in our standard of living. And, not knowing the facts, some people think that there have been equally big gains in profits.

This is probably why a recent survey shows many people think business takes a profit margin on sales of 28% after taxes.

Try a quick guesstimate of the correct figure.

Would you believe 5%? That's it for our manufacturing industries. And in retailing and construction, it's only 1.4%.

Businesses profit by serving the consumer well...and we're all consumers. On the other hand, unprofitable businesses cannot even provide well for their own employees.

Don't keep it under your hat.

We all profit from profits.

Students travel —

countered was hesitant to speak to them.

Some of this was explained by Weisbrod. "Because this is the Soviet Union, it creates an intimidating aura...my God, this is Communism." Tourists feel they must stick together and do everything they are told to. Much of this Weisbrod maintains is due to the Soviet approach to tourism "which is strikingly different than ours...they do believe in a central organization where everyone clutters together as in a beehive."

"The rule that applies," says Weisbrod, "is one of common sense...it is obvious if you are doing something wrong and when you are not...to walk around on your own, there is nothing wrong in that...as long as you are not trying to instigate some kind of street demonstration."

With that guideline, the students set out and with their knowledge of Russian were fully able to make themselves understood. Weisbrod pointed out that the only way they could use the language was in this manner of touring the city. The students also made good use of a Russian-English dictionary.

"The people were really concerned about us, realizing we weren't acquainted with the city," said Judith. Many of the students found their way to a stolovaya or a Russian cafeteria. Judith, her sister and two friends asked a young man for directions to the stolovaya and found themselves personally escorted there.

In the cafeteria Judith explaii that she wanted to say that she and her sister and friends wanted to try different foods, but the first thing that came to her mind was "we want to try everything." The young man took them literally and came over with big plates of cabbage soup, a main course with noodles and meat and six bottles of beer for four of us. "We just sat and ate and ate." He refused payment for the meal.

Not only were the Russians hospitable, but the students were impressed with their honesty on the trams. Riders drop in their three kopecks without an offical "there to make sure you pay." Even in crowds, Laura said "everyone passes their kopecks along." The passengers honesty and their efforts to let everyone know about their honesty extended to a rider who waved his free pass around for everyone to see.

In an effort to see how their Soviet peers are educated, the students visited three schools. In Leningrad, they visited an English school, one where English was taught. Their visit totally disrupted the school. In an unusual informal atmosphere the Russian and American students responded with spontaneity providing all with a "unique experience." Here the students had prepared a show for the Americans. Afterwards the visitors decided to put on a show for their Soviet hosts. Judy had a guitar, another student had a harmonica, some had recorders. In minutes the students had created a "jam session" with everyone singing and clapping to the tune of When the Saints Come Marchin' In. While the Russian students had obviously practiced their routines, the U.S. students were looser, freer and not upset by any mistakes in their repertoire.

They found the Russian students interested in popular music, and Enlish books. The books are hard to get in the Soviet Union. The students were aware of this and came with gifts of books donated by a publisher. The books included "Brave New Worlds", books by Ernest Hemmingway, books on art, books on chemistry and "a lot of Kurt Vonnegut." The Russians love buttons and the students gave away Bicentennial buttons.

The students agreed they came back fro the trip with an "appreciation of the country as a whole." They stopped comparing it to their country and began to appreciate it for what it was. Laura has made the decision that she "must go back." She hopes to know more about the country when she returns and has already begun to read a tremendous amount about Russia. She viewed the two weeks as an introduction to the country.

Their manner of touring Moscow, Leningrad and Novgorad would not be recommended to anyone who didn't know the language or to any leader who didn't know his participants, says Weisbrod. He had, over a period of time, gotten to know the students on weekend outings and in class and knew they would not "create embarassments or jeopardize other members of the group."

Politics were not discussed and as Laura pointed out, "if we had met more people from the Universities, we might have gotten into it more." She said they did see many soldiers and much regimentation in the schools, but never really got a sense of "oppression."

Wiesbrod said the trip was not geared to "issues" but to experiencing what life is like on a daily basis... we were not going as ambassadors."

However, the students, Weisbrod asserted, "behaved much better than most adults" and must have left behind much of the same good will they came home with.

Webster Vale that no more than three unreleated persons could occupy any of the vour units, that two cars be the limit per unit, that no work would begin until the Conservation Commission had held a hearing, and that one unit be given to the Newton Housing Authority.

It was pointed out that these are the same conditions as the ones attached to NCDF's permissive use.

Cohen's Madoc Street site, under present zoning, would accomodate three single-family homes and one duplex.

Cohen is proposing building one four-unit townhouse and leaving the remainder of the land undeveloped. The remaining portion of the land borders Webster Vale.

In other business, the Land Use Committee also held hearings and took the following action:

—Heard neighborhood opposition to a Boston College plan to build a bus depot on College Street to accomodate bus traffic, including that to be generated by shuttle service between Newton College and Boston College that will begin in the fall.

Neighbors want BC to pick an internal site on the campus for the bus depot.

—Voted 6-0 in favor of denying a petition for an office building on land at Agawam and Neshobe roads and Washington Street.

According to aldermen, this peition was the same as the one the Board denied without prejudice in February. The committee will recommend a flat denial for it this time.

GROWING WITH JERRY BAKER

CARE AND FEEDING OF EVERGREENS

Most folks think that all there is to planting an evergreen is to dig a hole, drop in the plant, refill the hole with surrounding dirt and the evergreen will grow into a healthy, lovely specimen.

Actually, the planting procedure begins before you bring your purchase home. Home gardeners buy about 45 to 50 million evergreens a year, and over half of them die before they're planted! Select only plants with plenty of soil in the container; otherwise you may be buying a plant that is half-dead from root shock. I always pick the plants with the largest ball or container. Take care, also, to avoid damage when you handle and transport evergreens. And be sure to plant them the day you bring them home. Many green thumbers let them dry out on a hot driveway or sidewalk.

Make sure the planting hole is not too small. This will cramp the roots and stunt growth of the plant. Dig a large hole about half again as wide as the width of the container. Don't plant too deeply or the root system will smother — no more than one inch deeper than it was planted in the nursery. When the hole is ready, add a large handful of bone meal and Lawn & Garden Gypsum in the bottom of the hole. Then half-fill the hole with a 50-50 mixture of gravel and soil. Sprinkle with water but don't wash away the sides of the hole or alter its base. Completely fill the hole with the mixture of gravel and soil, and tamp the ground firmly in place with your foot to eliminate air pockets or hollow spots that can sink later and expose roots to drying air or cause the plant to tilt.

To dedicate monument to Dr. King

Ceremonies marking the dedication of "A Monument to Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr." will be held at 11 a.m., Friday, May 16, at Boston University's Marsh Shapel, 735 Commonwealth avenue.

The 25-foot high monument, consisting of 50 doves representing each of the states in the union, was designed and built by sculptor Sergio Castillo, known throughout the world for his public works of art. Included in the more than 40 monuments and edifices he has done are works at Sausalito Plaza in San Franscio, the Sheraton Hotel in Santiago, Chile, and the Kremlin.

Other sculptures by Castillo will be on exhibit at Boston University's George Sherman Union Gallery, 775 Commonwealth Avenue, from May 6 through May 16. Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. The exhibit is free and open to the public.

Christian Science lecture in Wellesley

Edward C. Williams, a teacher of Christian Science, will give a free public talk, "Let There Be Light," on Monday, May 19, at 8 p.m. in the Wellesley Junior High School, Kingsbury street, Wellesley.

Williams will explain how prayer can change the dark moments of daily living. He is a long-time practitioner and teacher of Christian Science, from Indianapolis, Indiana.

Care for young children will be provided for the hour of the lecture, which is sponsored by the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Wellesley.

Local arrangements are being coordinated by Mrs. Judith R. Erikson, Wellesley, and Williams will be introduced by John D. Moorhead, also of Wellesley.

Presidential papers on exhibit at BU

"Presidential Papers: Washington to Ford" will be on display in Special Collections at Boston University's Mugar Memorial Library,775 Commonwealth Avenue, as part of the University's observance of the nation's 200th birthday.

Papers and memorabilia of each of the presidents are part of the University's permanent collections.

The exhibit will be open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. - 5 p.m. through December.

Admission is free and open to the public.

How Nutrition Labeling Can Help You

Though packages of some foods have provided facts on their nutritional composition for many years, most have not. During 1973, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration issued regulations for Nutrition Labeling, seeking to encourage many food manufacturers to provide such information on nutrients.

The goal is to provide nutrient information in the same form on many foods. This information can help you:

- become more aware of key nutrients needed for good nutrition and health.
- recognize the specific nutrients present in individual foods.
- compare the nutritive values and relative costs of different foods.
- select foods for the whole day that in total will supply the recommended amounts of vital nutrients.

At A&P we are including this nutrition information on many of our private label products. Look for it and start to use it.

Nature's ways

By WAYNE HANLEY
Mass. Audubon Society

All of Mexico was in flames. Or, so it seemed as we rode across Yucatan, Campeche, Tabasco and Chiapas in pursuit of tropical birds. The route took us to the Maya ruins at Chichen Itza, Uxmal, and Palenque. For details on these fabulous places, please check the back file of National Geographics in the local dentist's office. At Palenque one winds up in a tropical jungle, about as far south as one can go without wet-backing it into Guatemala.

The late April temperature built up to 95 or 100 degrees each day, and didn't have far to build since the overnigh low dips to 70 but briefly. Because of burning fields, or worst of all, burning jungles, there was sufficient smoke aloft to keep the sun a vermilion disk until 10 a.m.

The fires were man-made. It was the annual pre-rainy season burning bash practiced by Mayas since before the era of human sacrifices. It is the most primitive agricultural method known to man. The woods are burned and the ashes fertilize the corn planted later among the stumps. The practice is so ingrained in modern Mayas taht their culture would collapse the first spring they failed to hear the brisk, brittle snap of wildfire. Meanwhile they are destroying the land that supports them.

There were 12 persons on the trip intent upon the array of tropical birds that infests the dry lands, marshes and jungles. Some 241 species were seen.

Since it was a highly successful trip, we might as well move on to the bloopers: I was in the wrong taxi when the great black hawk was seen, and on the wrong jungle trail when the gray-headed kite appeared. I saw what probably was the black-collared hawk, but at a great distance. The black-collar was a bit of a disappointment since it is the only bird in Mexico with much brains. It spends its time out of the noon-day sun, perched over a gurgling brook and in a willow tree whose leaves shield it from curious eyes. If hunger strikes, it plops down upon the first passing fish and then resumes its siesta.

Because of the black-collar's obsession about privacy, even such an experienced bird guide as Victor Emaneul of Houston, Texas, had failed to find it before the trip preceding ours. He had located one on the river that slices Tabasco from Campeche. When on the trail of a bird for a client, Emanuel becomes a wide-ranging pointer hard to whistle in. He beat his way through tick-infested shrubbery to shake all willows in hopes of flushing a black-collar. But it was not to be. Meanwhile, in the far distance a tailless vulture-form emerged from celestial oblivion, flapping its wing in a style rejected by vultures. It was, Emanuel declared, the black-collar. But, it was unsocial and remained a vague flapping form.

We saw the plumbeous kite, a lead-colored hawk which considers 95 degrees frigid and ventures as far north as southern Mexico only to breed and then hasten back toward the eq.uator. We saw a bat falcon take six prey items within five minutes, devoting most of that time to eating! We had the double-toothed kite, lesser yellow-headed vulture, snail kite, gray hawk, laughing falcon, crested caracara, dozens of roadside hawks and a great time.

GI education bill offers more benefits

Veterans in need of financial aid to continue GI Bill education are eligible for increased benefits under the Veterans Administration's work study grant program, VA reminded veterans today.

Administrator of Veterans Affairs Richarld L. Roudebush noted that a December 3 law (PL 93-508) increased the amount veterans can earn in the program to a maximum of $625 per semester for full time students who agree to work 250 hours for the agency.

Prior to December, VA could provide a maximum of only $250 a fiscal year to a limited number of selected veterans for 100 hours of service.

From April 1973 when the original program started through last December, 27,157 veterans received nearly $6.6 million in grants for 2.6 million hours of work, the VA official revealed.

Veterans interested in work study grants were urged to apply to VA regional offices which maintain their records.

Chestnut Hill School holds annual meeting

The annual meeting of the Chestnut Hill School was held last week.

At that time, the following trustees were elected: Dr. Amelia Blackwell of Brookline, G. West Saltonstall of Chestnut Hill, George Sandberg of Newton and Warren J. Simmons of Chestnut Hill. Also elected for one year terms as secretary and treasurer respectively were Mrs. Berton Fliegel of Newton Centre and David Hawkins of Chestnut Hill.

In his annual report to parents Headmaster Allison announced three different programs which should enhance the quality of the program at Chestnut Hill. First, in the fall Mrs. George Sandberg will offer youngsters in the pre-school program instruction in the Suzuki Violin method.

This summer Chestnut Hill School will offer Reading '75 in connection with the Creative Arts Summer Camp. The school believes this will fill a noticeable void in local summer reading instruction. There are four teachers available who can work with youngsters for enrichment, developmental and disability reading. This will offer area youngsters an additional opportunity for maintaining and increasing their reading skills.

Another new program which the school is embarking upon is an afternoon pre-school program. In years past the school program has been a five day morning program, and this will continue. However, the new program is designed with a great deal more flexibility in that it will allow children to pick the number of days per week, per year, that they would like to attend (two, three, four or five days a week). The hours of the afternoon program are 1 to 4:30 p.m. The reason that this program is particularly exciting one in pre-school education is that it will be conducted in collaboration with the Boston College School of Education.

WRYT manager talks on fairness doctrine

Ken Carter, General Manager of Radio Station WRYT, in Boston will address the Eastern Massachusetts Chapter of Americans for Constitutional Action on Monday, May 19, at 8 p.m. on "The Fairness Doctrine." The meeting will take place at the Newton Community Center, 429 Cherry St., West Newton.

The Federal Radio Commission (now the Federal Communications Commission) first enunciated the fairness doctrine in 1929 in an effort to insure the public's right to hear different viewpoints on important matters.

Carter speaks with 20 years of broadcasting experience, and is well-versed in federal broadcasting law. He will discuss the FCC rules and regulations, and will tell what the citizens can do to insure that the fairness doctrine is enforced.

The public is invited to attend, and admission is free. For additional information call Arnold Garrison, 527;3744.

Republican sponsor evening for candidates

The Newton Republican City Committee will host Sen. Robert A. Hall at its "College of Practical Knowledge" meeting May 21.

Sen. Hall from Lunenberg will speak on "How to Defeat an Enriched Candidate on a Shoestring."

Other courses in the evening program at the Pomroy House will include Alice Roodkowski, chairwoman of the State Committee of the Middlesex Norfolk District, who will speak on the general subject of running for office.

Also speaking will be Newton Electi on Commission Executive Secretary Alan Licarie on campaign financing laws, and Affirmative Action GOP member G. G. Benjamin on "How to involve Young People in Campaigns."

The program will begin at 8 p.m., and the public is invited.

Tay-Sachs screening on Sunday

Young couples not yet tested for the Tay-Sachs trait will have the opportunity this Sunday to be tested.

According to Dr. Edwin Kolodny, codirector of the Tay-Sachs Prevention Program, "The simple blood test should be taken by all couples who are contemplating having children, whether in the immediate or distant future." Only by testing the entire eligible population, he said, will it be possible to prevent new cases of this fatal childhood disease.

The screening will beheld May 18 from 1-5 p.m. at Young Israel Synagogue, 62 Green Street, Brookline, near Coolidge Corner. A committee of more than 30 local men and women are working on the poster, telephone and mailing campaigns to publicize this event.

The committee is asking that persons who want to be tested call 893-0600 to indicate their time preferences for the Sunday afternoon testing. This number may also be used by anyone who would like more information or uncertain whether to be tested.

Tay-Sachs disease is an inherited metabolic disorder which occurs 100 times more frequently among Ashkenazi Jews than among Sephardim and non-Jews. Although children with this disease appear normal at birth, their development slows down after six months; and within a year, they lose all motor control. In succeeding months, frequent seizures, poor feeding, blindness and recurrent infections occur. Death is inevitable, usually before age five.

Until 1969, the birth of an infant with Tay-Sachs disease could not be foretold, and therefore prevention was impossible. The discovery of the biochemical defect, however, paved the way for development of a test which identifies carriers of the Tay-Sachs trait.

In Greater Boston, approximately 4,500 individuals (mostly young couples) have been tested by the Tay-Sachs Prevention Program since its inception in October, 1973. Nearly 150 carriers, one in every 30 tested, have been detected thus far, including four carrier-carrier couples. Three of those couples were either pregnant or became pregnant within a year. Prenatal diagnosis before the 20th week enabled two of these couples to bear normal children. Tests on the pregnancy of a third couple, their first, revealed a fetus with Tay-Sachs disease. This couple opted for an abortion.

Kolodny emphasized, "Each pregnancy of a carrier-carrier mating has a 25 per cent risk of producing a Tay-Sachs child. As long as each of their pregnancies is monitored, they need never fear having a child with Tay-Sachs disease."

The Tay-Sachs Prevention Program is closely allied with the Tay-Sachs Foundation of New England, Inc. It also receives support from the Combined Jewish Philanthropies of Greater Boston as well as other public and private charitable trusts. A major portion of its operating expenses comes from the voluntary donations of individuals who are tested.

The program conducts a regular clinic under the auspices of the Beth Israel Hospital and maintains its office and testing laboratory at the Eunice Kennedy Shriver Center in Waltham. Dr. Allen Crocker of the Children's Hospital Medical Center is genetics counselor and codirector of the program.

Churches represented in the choir festival are Auburndale Congregational Church, Central Congregational Church, Eliot Church, Newton Highlands Congregational Church, Second Church, and Union Church of Waban.

Included are works by Palestrina, Zingarelli, Tallis, a double-chorus composition by Leisring, several anthems by William Billings, and choruses from "The Creation" by Haydn, and Handel's "Messiah." Also programmed are Laudate Dominum from the "Vespers, K. 339," by Mozart, with Marsha Vleck, soprano soloist, and the Gloria from the "Twelfth Mass" by Mozart, with the solo quartet of Second Church, West Newton. Contemporary anthems include works by Jean Berger, Charles Ives, and Heinz Werner Zimmermann.

The choir directors of the participating churches will be very much in evidence, as well. Carrol Hassman of Newton Highlands Congregational Church, Lois Regestein of Auburndale Congregational Church, Ivar Sjostrom of Second Church, West Newton, and Marshall Wilkins of Central Congregational Church, Newtonville, will direct works and accompany.

Jack Fisher of the Union Church, Waban, will play the organ prelude and postlude.

Prior festival programs have been well attended and enthusiastically received. A recording of the most recent program was broadcast on the WCRB series, Choruses of New England.

Central Congregational Church, the site of the concert, is located on Walnut Street near Washington Street in Newtonville. The program is free, and the public is cordially invited.

Hospital recognizes 73 volunteer aids

The equivalent of more than four centuries of service to Newton-Wellesley Hospital were officially recognized Tuesday, May 13 during National Hospital Week as 73 men and women were honored for donating their time to the hospital.

The time has been given by the recognized in-house volunteers and members of the Aid Association to Newton-Wellesley.

Those who marked 3, 5, 10 and 15 years at the hospital were recognized, as well as two women who reached 20 years, one who marked 25, and one who marked 30 years.

There were also 55 people who received 100-hour pins for contributing that amount of time to the hospital.

The volunteers perform a variety of services at the hospital, including working on the information desk, assisting on patient floors, volunteering in the gift and coffee shops, and putting together the hospital's in-house news publication for distribution.

An annual event, the volunteer awards ceremony was held in Winslow Hall at Lasell Junior College, Newton.

Carpets of the latest in quality and design are stacked in Tile City's Norwood warehouse.

Tile City grows to 21 stores

NORWOOD — 21 years ago, Irwin L. Germaise started his carpet business in an auto body shop in Pennsylvania. Today he is president of Tile with 21 retail outlets in Massachusetts, Rhode Island

The corporation's headquarters is located at 1560 Providence Highway, Norwood, where Tile City is presently having its first warehouse sale with most items selling well below cost.

"Tile City prides itself in selling name brand merchandise at discount prices," said Germaise.

Tile City carries a full line of Armstrong hard surface floor coverings. Armstrong is the largest producer of this product in the world and Tile City is their fourth largest do-it-yourself account in the U.S.

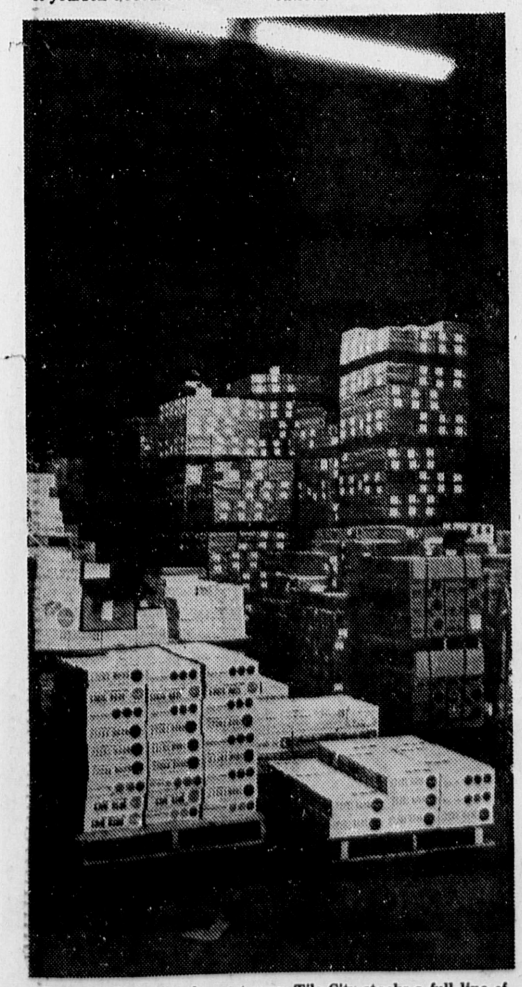
Their tiles include many with unique and unusual ceramic designs.

Last year, the Norwood store sold 10 million pieces of tile which if placed end on end would stretch 2,000 miles.

Beside ceramic floor and wall tile, Tile City also specializes in resilient floor covering and carpet. Their Norwood warehouse is overflowing with the latest in quality and design.

"Our policy is to be first in price, service and a good product," said Tile City's Vice President, Robert Cindric.

Tile City plans to add to its nine New England stores in the near future, "but the problem," said Germaise, is finding good management trainees to run the new outlets."



Ceramic tile awaits the customer. Tile City stocks a full line of ceramic tile with unique and unusual designs.

Here come the brides

RUTH LENSON

All's right with the world. Despite inflation and recessions, it's a comfort to know that brides go marching-on-with the marriage business blooming and booming.

Bridal departments are relieved that there are no longer any "far out" fashions such as the mini, jumpsuit or midriff. Fundamentally, today's fashions are feminine, delicate and so very flattering for all types.

Dotted Swiss, silk organdies and embroidered sheer fabrics are again important for spring and summer and this year girls seem interested in wearing hats . . . large hats . . . instead of headpieces.

Another innovative trend is more color in the bridal gown because white isn't the best for everyone to wear. For example, if you are wan or very fair, it could make you look washed out. A soft pink and white organza with delicate flowers appliqued on the neckline and hemline may be preferred. And then there is the sweet-as-sugar yellow and white cotton eyelit gown with pinafore detailing on the bodice and a white straw brimmed hat with yellow satin streamers down the back.

There seems to be much more emphasis on lightweight fabrics than the classic re-embroidered with seed pearl styles of the past few years. The entire mood of softness and informality is carried through with the bridesmaids and mother of the bride and groom with soft pastels and watercolor undefined floral patterns.

As for the groom, where once the bride was the focal point, dashing young grooms and their attendants are now commanding their full measure of attention. Formal wear for the groom, once drab and lackluster . . . black or gray . . . is now light and bright.

After Six Formals, has introduced colors like Something Blue, Happy Maize, Misty Grey, Seafoam Green, and Cloud White and the company advocates complete color coordination in two-toned shirts, butterfly and teardrop ties to match the jackets with a single or double breasted vest replacing the tired old cumberbund.

As a matter of fact, where the bridesmaids are wearing a variety of pretty pastel colors, solid or print, each of the groom's ushers may wear color coordinated formals for a picture-perfect rainbow wedding.

There are no longer hidebound rules regarding who pays what—it's up to the individuals and the situation at hand. And that's as it should be. However, for those who like to follow the "letter of the law" here are some guidelines, beginning with the groom's responsibility:

THE MARRIAGE LICENSE - You have to pay for it.

THE GUEST LIST - You can invite HALF the total number of wedding guests, not more. Less is permissible.

THE CLERGYMAN'S FEE - Give it to your best man; have him give it to the clergyman.

THE BRIDE'S BOUQUET AND GOING-AWAY FLOWERS - are selected by her, but you pay for and arrange to have them sent to her.

FLOWERS FOR YOUR MOTHER AND THE BRIDE'S MOTHER providing them is up to you.

YOUR OWN AND YOUR USHERS' BOUTONNIERES - yours is a sprig from the bridal bouquet. Ushers' should be alike—but different from yours.

YOUR ATTENDANTS' PRESENTS - Tie clips, watch chains, cuff links, studs or stud boxes, wallets or money clips are appropriate.

The bride's parents are generally involved with hiring the church and reception area, planning the type of menu to be served (and paying for it), ordering the flowers for the church and dinner tables. If there is music the bride's parents attend to this also—the question of which side pays for the liquor is usually one that is settled at the time of the planning of the menu and examination of the guest list.

So many traditions are taken as matter-of-course, it's interesting to examine a few.

What is meant by "giving away of the bride"? In days of old, when a man decided that it was time to marry, he armed himself with a strong friend to ward off the possibility of unfriendly kinsmen while the anxious groom led in his pursuit. Often times the bride was actually sold, and from this evolved "giving away of the bride".

Wedding rings, circular in shape express the wish that the marriage be continuous and never ending, with the ring worn on the left hand because it symbolizes submission of the bride to her groom whereas the right hand meant power and agression. The fourth finger was considered the finger carrying the love vein, said to run from that finger straight to the heart.

Wedding cakes and feasting symbolized hopes for a plentiful marriage with a larder that was never empty. Coins baked into the wedding cake meant good luck as well as an approaching marriage for the finder.

Toasting the bride and other members of the procession evolved from an old French custom of placing a small piece of bread at the bottom of the glass. Whoever (bride or groom) finished first and got the bread, would rule the family.

Why the shoes attached to the bumper of the groom's car? Some say it originated from an old custom whereby to signify his approval of the marriage and the surrender of his daughter, the bride's father threw her shoe to the groom.

Fair exchange is always fun, and so we are pleased to reprint the request of Millicent Adelman's for Aunt Gert's Strawberry Whipped Cream Pie and Lemon Meringue Pie for her Lee Lum's Lemon Chicken and Baked Stuffed in exchange for her Lee Lum's Lemon Chicken and Baked Stuffed Fufoli.

LEE LUM'S LEMON CHICKEN

4 whole chicken breasts, boned and skinned
2 tablespoons light soy sauce
¼ teaspoon sesame oil
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon gin or vodka
3 egg whites, beaten until frothy
1 cup water chestnut flour or powder
Peanut or salad oil
¾ cup sugar
½ cup white vinegar
1 cup chicken broth
1 tablespoon cornstarch
2 tablespoons water
1 teaspoon MSG
1 lemon, juice and thin rind finely chopped
¼ head iceberg lettuce, finely shredded
3 small carrots cut in julienne strips
½ large green pepper cut in strips
3 scallions cut in julienne strips
½ cup shredded canned pineapple
1 bottle (1 oz.) lemon extract

1. Place the chicken in a shallow earthenware dish on hand. Combine the soy sauce, sesame oil, salt and gin or vodka and pour over the chicken. Toss to coat and let it sit for 30 minutes. 2. Drain the chicken and discard the marinade. Add chicken pieces to the beaten egg whites and toss to coat. Place the water chestnut flour in a plate and coat the chicken pieces with the flour. 3. Pour peanut oil in a skillet to the depth of ½-inch and heat to 350 degrees. Add chicken pieces, a few at a time if necessary; brown on both sides; drain. 4. Meanwhile, place the sugar, vinegar, broth, cornstarch mixed with water, MSG, lemon juice and rind in a small pan. Bring to a boil, stirring until the mixture thickens. 5. Cut the drained chicken into 1-inch crosswise slices and place on top of the shredded lettuce on a serving platter. If necessary, keep it warm in a 200 degree oven. 6. Add the vegetables and pineapple to the sauce; remove from heat and stir in extract; pour over chicken. Serves 4.

Across the kitchen counter

This is the party season and engagement parties and weddings are among the happiest of family celebrations.

The main ingredients are lots of happy people, an abundance of good food (preferably with a homemade touch) and fine beverages. Even if you have a small house or apartment you can make space for easy people movement. Re-arrange the furniture in small groups, making space for traffic flow.

Have the bar at one end of the room and the food at the opposite end—as far from each other as possible so people can move around. Decorate the house with flowers or leaves and ferns— flowering dogwood and apple blossoms are quite effective.

Keep your menu simple and plan dishes that can be prepared ahead of time. Buffet entertaining allows the hostess to mingle with her guests and at the same time keep her party running smoothly.

Caraway Wheat Thin With Pate as an appetizer are easy to make and the wheat thins are great go-togethers with spreads and dips. Prepare both crackers and pate ahead . . . when guests arrive, there's no need to be in the kitchen. Enriched crescent dinner rolls become "crackers" and the chicken liver pate is tasty with more eye appeal than the average liver pate.

For the main dish, turkey is a great buy and in this Turkey Noodle Casserole the turkey can be roasted a day or two ahead and the carcass stripped; a sauce can be made from the turkey broth. The day of the party, the casserole is assembled and heated through. A colorful tomato aspic complements this dish.

Nosegay Cupcakes allow even the kitchen novice turn master decorator. Gumdrop "flowerets" gaily adorn each frosted, orange-flavored little cake.

Place flower and leaves on each cupcake. Makes 18 cupcakes. Note: If self-rising flour is used, omit baking powder and salt.

A&P offering bonus on tax rebate checks

Shoppers cashing federal tax rebate checks up to the maximum of $200 in Boston Division stores of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company, Inc. will be offered bonus merchandise certificates on a test basis, it was announced today. The promotion is also being tested in the Columbus (Ohio) Division of A&P.

"For each $10 merchandise certificate bought with tax rebate money, shoppers will be given a $1.00 bonus certificate toward purchase of merchandise," according to L. E. Leeson, vice president and general manager of A&P's Boston Division, which operates stores in most of eastern New England.

"This, in effect, offers consumers a 10 percent reduction in food costs." He noted the present offer is restricted to federal tax rebate checks and that certificates are not refundable for cash.

This offer would apply locally in A&P Stores in Newton, Canton, Dedham, Norwood and Roslindale.

Special golfing rates for senior citizens

Senior citizens can recover their youth at a cheaper-than-usual price on the Metropolitan District Commission's two golf courses when they buy five-day season tickets this year.

M.D.C. Commissioner William J. Byrne, Jr., said today the Commission has cut the $100 fee for five-day-a-week golfing privileges to $75 for those who are 65 years of age and older. The new policy takes effect immediately, and is an extension of an M.D.C. move that previously had given oldsters a break at M.D.C. pools and skating rinks.

Two golf courses are owned by the M.D.C. The Ponkapoag golf course on Route 138 in Canton includes two 18-hole courses, a clubhouse, pro shop and snack bar. It can be reached from Route 128 by taking exit 61, then heading south on Route 138.

The Leo J. Martin Memorial Golf Course in Weston can be reached from Route 128 southbound by taking exit 54 to Route 16, then a right turn on Concord Street. Northbound motorists on Route 128 should take exit 51 to Route 30, then a left turn on Park Road. The Martin golf complex also has a snack bar, pro shop, and clubhouse. It has one 18-hole course.

Both courses will close on November 30.

"The shot heard 'round the world" was fired April 19th, 1775 as the "Embattled Farmers" defended their beloved country against the British Red Coats at Concord and Lexington. Many of us can say at least part of Longfellow's "Ride of Paul Revere" telling the story of that gallant horseman — who was "ready to ride and spread the alarm to every middlesex village and farm" the night of April 18th. As we look back over 200 years of history, let all of us dedicate ourselves to the task of solving our great country's problems and continuing its growth and development as the world's greatest success story.

To show our resolve and our firm belief in America, let's all fly the flag — every day, if you will especially during our 200th Birthday — but certainly on every national holiday during this tremendously important event. Transcript Newspapers, as part of its Bicentennial Celebration, will make these fine quality home flag kits available as a patriotic and historical public service right through 1976.

South nine wins four straight

By MARK COOPER
Sports Correspondent

NEWTON- Newton South's baseball team finally "got its act together," running off a brilliant four game winning streak, topping Acton-Boxboro 2-1, Wayland 3-1, Weston 4-3, and Lincoln-Sudbury 6-4.

Lion righthander Tom Irvine was virtually unhittable after surrendering an unearned run to Acton in the top of the first inning. Striking out 16 hitters, Irvine displayed pinpoint control and a tremendous ability to keep the Acton hitters off balance.

Trailing 1-0 in the top of the fifth inning, the Lions scratched the scoreboard when Peter Castellanos beat out an infield hit and co-captain Mike Malkasian followed him with a double to left field that scored Castellanos from first base.

In the next frame the Lions tallied what was to be the eventual winning run when Greg Moan lined a single to left field and scored on successive throwing errors by the left fielder and the second baseman on the same play. Junior hurler Irvine made this "fluke" run stand up and the Lions hung on for a 2-1 victory.

Pitching once again was the story in the Lions' 3-1 triumph over Wayland High School. Senior southpaw Mike Stockman pitched and batted South to their second consecutive victory.

Once again the Lions dropped behind as Wayland took a 1-0 lead after three nnings. Stockman, however, after a rocky start began to baffle the Warrior hitters as he mixed a good curveball with a deceptive fastball while striking out seven batters.

Yet Stockman truly won the game with his bat as the Lions' offense came alive in the last of the sixth inning. With the contest tied at 1-1 due to theearlier hitting of Phil Small and Peter Castellanos, the Lions began a two-out rally when first baseman Jon Bamel walked and Glen ackenzie singled Bamel to second base.

Up stepped pitcher Stockman who promptly ripped a single to rightfield, scoring the winning runs. By virtue of their 3-1 victory over Wayland, South had brought their winning streak to two games and their season's record to 6-4.

Two More Wins

Thanks to errors and mental mistakes, the ions fell behind Weston 3-0 and needed a furious rally to win a thrilling 4-3 game.

John Bamel, who played an excellent all-round game, sparked the big Lion rally by doubling home two runs with a key hit to left field. Peter Castellanos also had a big day with the bat as he recorded three runs batted in, one being the game winner.

Weston scored an unearned run in the second and netted two more arkers in the fifth to mount a 3-0 lead after four and one-half innings.

Yet the Lions came back to tie the score with three runs in the fifth. Bruce Jennings stroked a double to right and Glenn Mackenzie reached base on an error to put runners on first and second. Then Bamel delivered his clutch hit to bring the Lions within a run at 3-2.

After Dave Meinhart reached base on a fielder's choice, Castellanos ripped a single to left to tie the score.

With two outs and the score 3-3 in the bottom of the seventh, Meinhart walked, Chandier Bosworth singled and when Castellanos beat out an infielb grounder, Meinhart came home with the winning run.

On Saturday the Lions needed a hrowing error by the Lincoln-Sudbury pitcher to pull out a 6-4 victory.

The Lions tallied four times in the fourth inning when Dave Meinhart walked and was sacrificed by Tom Irvine. Peter Castellanos was safe on a bunt down the third baseline and after Meinhart scored, Mike Malkasian followed with a walk.

Greg Moan dropped a beautiful squeeze bunt and both Malkasian and Castellanos scored. Phil Small later scored on Bruce Jennings' ground single to centerfield.

In the sixth Moan and Jennings combined with Small to bring South their final runs when Lincoln hurler made his costly throwing error that allowed both Moan and Jennings to score.

For a change, hitting was the key to South's triumph and Bruce Jennings led the Lion attack. In addition, Phil Small and Peter Castellanos continued their excellent play during South's prolonged winning streak.

Singh looks for win in Preakness Saturday

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Singh, who missed the Kentucky Derby because of an injury, is gearing up for a try in the 100th running of the Preakness with light early morning exercise.

Trainer John Russell, who was injured himself when another horse stepped on his foot and hobbles around on a cane, said after a 5:45 a.m. Tuesday workout, "He's a very restless horse and I have to get him out to settle him down."

Then Russell took the 3-year-old back to the stables for a whirlpool bath on its forelegs. "He liked it very much," reported Russell.

Singh, owned jointly by Cynthia Phipps and Hal Price Headly Jr., was listed at 8-1 for the second race in the Triple Crown after a 6-length victory in the Preakness Prep last

Nursing Home Week proclaimed at Hamilton Nursing Home

NEEDHAM - Even though thousands of Americans are more aware of the health problems of the aged, the chronically ill, and the disabled today than ever before, there are still many who are not.

This is one of the reasons why the American Health Care Association - celebrating its 26th anniversary this year - again is sponsoring National Nursing Home Week, May 11 through May 18. It is also why Hollywood celebrity Cesar Romero has agreed to be honorary chairman of National Nursing Home Week. Mr. Romero's personal interest in the problems of long term care adds new dimension and conviction to the message that nursing homes are helping to improve the quality of life for everyone regardless of race, belief, or economic status.

Beginning on Mother's Day, May 11th and continuing through May 18th, the public is invited to visit nusing homes in communities across the land.

In Needham, Hamilton Nursing Home is planning a very special week of activities designed to acquaint everyone in the area with the compassionate and competent approach to quality care that it provides. On Mother's Day, May 11, the public is invited to attend a Tea and Open House celebration sponsored by the residents.

The Ellis Nursing Home, a skilled care center

NEEDHAM - The Ellis Nursing Home, located on Ellis Avenue, at Route No. 1 in Norwood, takes pride in meeting the needs of the community as a Medicare, skilled, and supportive nursing home.

The individual needs of each patient are administered by a thoroughly professional staff, in a supportive and gracious atmosphere.

The comprehensive rehabilitation staff includes a full-time Physical Therapist, formerly Chief of Therapy in a large rehabilitation hospital, as well as Speech Therapy and Occupational Therapy, for individual patient's needs. In addition, the Social Service Department is available to assist patients and families with adjustment and future planning.

Activities play an important role in the socialization and adjustment of each resident. A full-time Activities Director coordinates a wide variety of programs which range from field trips, movies, crafts, writing of a resident newspaper, and religious services.

Under the administration of Mark W. Tobin, President-elect of the Massachusetts Chapter of The American College of Nursing Home Administrators, individualized concepts of nursing home care are constantly being implemented. The facility retains membership in the Massachusetts Federation of Nursing Homes, and the American Health Care Association.

The superior dietary facilities of The Ellis have been selected by Norwood Meals on Wheels, Inc., a non-profit community organization, for daily preparation of their food program. Commencing in mid-May, these meals will be available to those persons living at home, who are unable to adequately prepare nutritional meals for themselves.

The Ellis maintains a commitment to integrate, as much as possible, the residents and the total community. Their belief is that the well being of the residents is enriched by community involvement. Monthly parties are sponsored by the Norwood Kiwanis. A yearly vegetable garden is prepared by the Norwood Jaycees, and is maintained and enjoyed by the residents.

Teenage volunteer Kandy Stripers, carefully supervised by the Activities Director, assist and brighten the days of many of the residents.

Finding the right nursing home to meet the individual needs of each patient is often a difficult course. The Ellis welcomes the opportunity of assisting with these arrangements. Inspection of their facilities is invited by the staff.

WE CARE

How to select the right nursing home.
We Americans are not just living longer, we're living more useful, productive lives.
But an increasing number of the chronically ill, the old, the convalescent, need some place other than the hospital and their home where they can receive personal health care, round-the-clock attention and the opportunity to continue to live their lives with meaning.
As your community extended health care facility we want to help you make the right decision. Here are some guidelines: see your family physician to determine the kind of care needed; feel free to visit our facility; ask us for our costs in writing and financial advice about Medicare and Medicaid; examine all of our facilities; check our food quality; verify our safety features; and finally, observe how our residents spend their time.
There's a lot more to selecting the right nursing home. We want to help. If you have any questions, please call or visit us.

North nine drop int second place

By RON MACLEAN
Sports Correspondent

The Newton North High baseball team dropped to second place, losing two of three games.

Newton is ½ game behind Waltham and Brockton as a result of 3-2 losses to North Quincy and Rindge Tech. The Tigers salvaged the week by thrashing Quincy 14-2.

Jack Ryan broke out of his slump with a two-run homer and Steve Dibenedetto had three rbi's to lead North over Quincy. The game was played at Lincoln Park on May 9.

Ryan lashed the first Tiger home run of the year to cap a six-run fourth inning. The Tigers had to play catch-up as the Presidents jumped off to a 2-0 lead.

With one out in the second inning, Mike MacKenzie ripped a triple to left center off Newton pitcher Ed Aucoin. Preston Carroll followed with a blast to left field that ended up in somebody's yard for a two run homer.

Newton picked up a run in the second on a Bob Kinsella double, a sacrifice, and a passed ball. The fourth inning put Quincy away for good with six runs on four hits.

Kinsella led off with a long fly which Mackenzie made a nice catch on. Two singles and a walk loaded the bases for Steve Dibenedetto who was hit by a pitch for a run.

Two balks brought in two runs for a 4-2 lead. Mike Tocci reached on an error for the fifth run.

Ryan came up next, 0-10 in the last two plus games, and hit a shot down the right field line. Before anyone could move the ball was in the woods for a 7-2 lead.

The barrage continued with five runs in the fifth and two in the sixth off Lou Fishman and Raftree. Ryan doubled in two more runs and Aucoin helped himself to two hits.

Kinsella led the attack with three hits, including a double and a triple. Dibenidetto had two hits and three rbi's in the lead-off spot.

Ryan came in with two hits, a double and a homer, two runs and four rbi's, and Bob Cunningham had his best game of the year. Cunningham went two for three, scored two runs, and had a triple.

Aucoin boosted his record to 3-1, yeilding only four hits and raising his strikeouts to 29 in 32 innings.

Rindge Tech 3,
Newton North 2

The Tigers had 13 walks but left 14 men on base as they succumbed to Rindge 3-2 May 7 at Russell Field.

Rudy Williams led the Technicians in the eight inning squeaker. The sophomore pitched the whole game, giving only three singles.

Newton got a 2-0 lead with runs in the second and third innings. Bob Vona drew a walk to lead off the second.

Vona went to second on a wild pitch, and scored on consecutive sacrifice bunts by Rich Hunt and Bob Cunningham.

The Tigers scored again in the third on two walks and a single, but Rindge came on in the fourth.

Leftfielder Bob Kenneally walked and came around on a single and an error. Ray Young drove in the tying run in the fifth when he doubled home Jim Albert.

The Technicians won it in the eighth when Peter Zilonis walked and Williams moved him to third on a two-base error. Zilonis scored when a fly to left dropped in.

North Quincy 3,
Newton North 2

North Quincy managed only two hits, but got them at the right time to squeak out a 3-2 victory on May 5.

Control problems hurt starter Steve Cononico as he gave up two runs on five walks. Steve DiBenedetto pitched the last four innings, yielding two hits and one run.

The Tigers came up with two runs, as Mike Tocci singled home Bob Cunningham and Don Morrell knocked in Bob Vona.

Newton had a good chance to ite it with the bases loaded and two outs in the seventh. Jim Visakis came up and fanned on a 3-2 pitch to end the threat.

Steve DiBenidetto led the nine hit attack with three. Rich Hunt had two hits to keep his average over .300.

Ryan leads the team in hitting with a .435 average. Bob Vona is at .357, Steve Dibebidetto at .351, Bob Kinsella at .342, and Rich Hunt is at .333.

Ryan also leads in runs with 10 and rbi's with 12. Jim Visakis and Debenedetto are tied with Ryan with 10 runs scored and Bob Vona has second place with nine RBI's.

Mites conclude tremendous year

The Newton Mites All-Star Hockey Team has just concluded a most phenomenal season. This team of 7 and 8 year olds representing all areas of the city finished the year with a record of 51 victories and only 4 defeats - outscoring their opposition 335-94. This would qppear to be the best record ever compiled by any Newton athletic team. Among its many achievements the team won the Middlesex League Division Championship, the Middlesex League League Championship, the Souhegan, N.H. Christmas Invitational Tournament and the recently completed Natick Invitational Mites Tournament.

In the Natick Invitational Tournament in which 19 teams competed, the Newton Mites outscored its opposition 46-15 in eight games and beat such fine teams as East Providence, R.I., Hudson, Fairview, Hingham, South Boston and Wakefield. In the final game against Wakefield which Newton won 6-4, Tom Ryan scored the hat trick with John Butterworth, David Buckley and Jonathan Cohen each adding one goal.

Spearheading the teams success throughout the tournament were John Butterworth with 15 goals and 11 assists, David Buckley with 9 goals and 10 assists, Tom Ryan with 8 goals and 6 assists and Mike Mullowney with 6 goals and 7 assists.

The other members of the team who also contributed significantly to this fine effort and to the team's top performance all year were Dan Arons, Jonathan Cohen, John Connors, Tony Yoffe, John Foley, J. R. Golden, Spike Frechette, Jamie Rice, Jimmy Wrye, John Mullowney and Chris Watson. Outstanding in this tournament as well as throughout the season were the team's two goaltenders - Mark Buckley and Doug Stocklan.

Much of the team's success was due to the very competent coaching of Jerry Butterworth and Paul Buckley.

Upsets mark lacrosse action this week

Comparative score followers will have a tough time making sense out of the topsy-turvy South. After beating preseason pick for runner-up (Framingham North) powerful Needham was then turned on by a vastly improved Newton South and edged 2-1. (Ray MacKinney made 36 saves!) Framingham South handled Newton South easily early in the season and then threshed Needham 11-5 only to be ambushed in the traditional cross-town classic with Framingham North by an astounding 13-3 (Jamie Egasti had six goals for the Green and Gold).

Newton North now begins facing the tough ones so in the division that last year produced a three-way tie for the runner-up spot it looks like five teams still have real tournament shots with only Medford and Weymouth North, both winless in the division, out of the running.

Newton North	2-0
Framingham North	3-1
Framingham South	3-1
Newton South	2-1
Needham	2-2
Medford	0-4
Weymouth North	0-4

North Has Inter-Divisional Edge

The leaders of both sides of the draw have met in several games recently and the North Division teams have gained a clear edge. Concord-Carlisle twisted the tail of Newton's tiger to the tune of 7-3, Lincoln-Sudbury has bested Newton too as well as Framingham South (11-4), North (6-2) and Needham (11-6). Brookline nipped Framingham North 6-5 largely due to the goal-tending of Pat Berube (22 saves) and the clutch shooting of attackman Dietrich Blumer.

Preakness

Saturday. Singh, whose injury kept him out of the Derby, was given the same tentative odds as Master Derby, who finished fourth in the Derby.

Media, the fifth-place Derby finisher, and Just The Time, who are entered as a pair in the Preakness, were given a day to recover from their Monday trip from New York to Baltimore before they are to run the track today.

"Both of them will blow out for about a half mile," said trainer Johnny Campo, "just to keep their edge."

Trainer LeRoy Jolley said a similar "blow out"—a gallop at less than top speed—is planned for Derby winner and Preakness favorite Foolish Pleasure on Thursday.

Bobby Frankel, the trainer of Native Guest, said he didn't care about the 15-1 odds tentatively set for his unbeaten 3-year-old.

"It doesn't make any difference to me because I'm not a betting man," he said. "But on the West Coast he was never more than 6-5 and he was the odds-on choice in two of his four races."

Trainer Lou Rondinello said the final decision will be made Thursday on whether to run Prince Thou Art. The horse is still in New York and the only member of the probable 10-horse Preakness field not at Pimlico, but Pimlico officials said the horse's regular jockey, Braulio Baeza, had already had his agent call up about room reservations for the weekend.

Green Mountain Boys on the march again

By SAM FOGG
United Press International

American military forces claimed their first surrender by an enemy 200 years ago this May "in the name of the Great Jehovah and the Continental Congress" from the wrong British officer without his pants on.

Fort Ticonderoga, located at the hinge of Lake Champlain and Lake George fell to a small force of Green Mountain Boys on May 10, 1775, without an American shot being fired. The capture of the antiquated, undermanned redoubt provided the rebellious colonists with badly needed cannon for the siege of Boston—and for the men who took Ticonderoga, 90 gallons of rum.

It also brought to stage center two figures of an emerging American history—Ethan Allen and Benedict Arnold.

Allen was a strapping backwoodsman, a heavy drinker and brawler with a hotspur temperament. Arnold was a New Haven apothecary, bookseller and merchant trader flawed with a fatally ambitious vanity.

Both were men of unquestioned personal courage. Both unhesitatingly took up arms and led units to the aid of the American cause when word of Lexington and Concord spread through the colonies.

Allen received a rather vague commisson from the Connecticut Assembly to proceed against Ticonderoga and Crown Point, another British military post on Lake Champlain. Not long before he had set himself up as the ruler of the Green Mountain Boys, an outlawed band of Vermonters who raided settlers from New York in the New Hampshire Grants, claiming ownership of the disputed wilderness lands.

With no difficulty, Allen mustered a force of 150 Green Mountain Boys and collected another 60 or 70 Connecticut and western Massachusetts men for the expedition.

Arnold was almost as quick off the mark. Three days after Lexington and Concord, he marched 65 New Haven volunteers of the Governor's Second Company of Guards to take part in the siege of Boston.

On arrival in Cambridge, he told the Massachusetts Committee of Safety about the neglected condition of the British outpost and the cannon available there. He was commissioned a colonel and authorized to raise a force of 400 men in western Massachusetts to take Ticonderoga.

Upon arrival in Stockbridge, he discovered that Allen had already embarked on the mission. Giving up any thoughts of recruiting, he set off to catch up with his rival.

Arnold overtook Allen's expedition late in the afternoon of May 9 at Hand's Cove in Shoreham where boats were being assembled for the surprise assault on the fort.

A drowsy British sentry tried to shoot but his musket misfired. As he took to his heels, Allen, Arnold and the homespun-clad Americans poured through the entryway sounding Indian warhoops.

Another Redcoat emerged from a barracks bearing a bayonet and was wounded by Allen's swinging sword, the only casualty of the fray.

Allen raced upstairs to the commandant's quarters and came upon a British officer wearing coat and waistcoat, carrying his trousers in his hand.

Allen thundered he was there "in the name of the Great Jehovah and the Continental Congress."

The bombast was addressed to the wrong person. The half-clad Britisher was Lt. Jocelyn Feltham, Ticonderoga's second in command.

But Allen's shouted words were enough to bring the commandant, Capt. William Delaplace of His Majesty's 27th Foot Soldiers, from his inner quarters. He quickly handed over his sword and instructed his men to lay down their arms.

The capture was complete in a matter of minutes. The Americans had taken 50 prisoners, about 100 cannon and a number of lesser artillery.

Also surrendered were 90 gallons of Delaplace's rum supply which Allen gave to his men for a spirited celebration known in those days as "tossing about the flowing bowl." An enthusiastic Green Mountain Boy fired off a 13-inch mortar dubbed "The Old Sow." As his men liquored up, Allen gave Delaplace a receipt for the rum which was later honored by Connecticut authorities.

Despite the day's celebration, Allen quickly sent a contingent of late arrivals to take Crown Point and the Americans had 13 more prisoners and 100 more cannon. He also sent off dispatches on the exploit that completely omitted any role played by Arnold.

The latter, whose own Connecticut guard unit had taken a pledge against drunkenness, gaming, profanity and "every vice of that nature," was infuriated at the behavior of the backwoods Vermonters and their jubilant commander.

In his report on Ticonderoga, Arnold wrote sulkily: "Colonel Allen is a proper man to head his own wild people, but entirely unacquainted with military service."

He spent the historic day exchanging courtesies with the British officers at the fort.

Nixon tapes stay secret until 1977

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former President Richard M. Nixon's Watergate tapes and documents probably will not be made public until 1977, the chief of the General Services Administration testified today.

Arthur F. Sampson also told a Senate Government Operations subcommittee that "our plans contemplate that virtually all information relating to the abuse of governmental power will be fully processed by 1980."

Under legislation approved last year, the GSA was given custody of all of Nixon's presidential tapes, documents, papers and other materials with instructions that they be made public.

Sampson said the GSA is still under court order not to begin working on the Nixon materials or releasing them to the public.

The court acted after the constitutionality of the law was challenged. Sampson said there may be other court actions which would delay the processing.

He estimated that once fullscale processing begins — probably in 1976 —"it will take an additional three years to review and release that body of materials defined in the statute as related to abuse of governmental power.

Fobrous food diet would improve Western health

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI) — A number of the painful and disturbing diseases of man can be helped by simple changes in the diet prevalent in Western countries, according to papers read at the annual Congress of the Royal Society of Health.

Prof. D. P. Burkitt said appendicitis, tumors of the large intestine, hemorrhoids, varicose veins and hiatus hernia were found less frequently in rural communities in Africa and India where a coarse diet was the norm. And more frequently in more advanced societies.

He told the congress that these diseases were associated with constipation and with the slow transit of food through the body. Since Africans and Indians who move to Western diet areas begin to get the same incidence of the maladies as anyone else, Burkitt said it became essential to study that diet.

"The main dietary changes accompanying economic development," he said, "are an increase of protein, fat and particularly of sugar and a change in the nature of the carbohydrate foods eaten. This change is the result of the removal of the starch and sugar from its fibrous matrix as in the refining of flour and extraction of sugar. This reduction in the fiber content of the food is the major dietary change accompanying westernization."

Burkitt, who is famous for describing the African cancer known as Burkitt's Lymphoma, recommended adding fiber to the western diet while research continues into the specific causes of the diseases he mentioned.

"Relative to cost and ease of consumption, cereal fiber seems to be the most effective," he said. "Unless white bread can be replaced by whole meal bread and eaten liberally, probably the best solution would be the addition of fiber to food in the form of wheat bran, about two or four heaped dessert spoonfuls (soup spoons in U.S.) a day. Fiber-rich proprietary breakfast cereals are effective but more expensive. Large amounts of potatoes, about a pound a day, are also effective but much more difficult to consume.

Krusack, a dentist, will spend about $20,000 on the boat and equipment and will take about $9000 with him on the trip. UPI

Battling for energy

LITTLE ROCK (UPI) — Public school teachers once described Arkansas as the only state capable of surviving on its own natural resources — including energy needs — should someone construct a giant fence around its borders.

The thinking was Arkansas had oil, natural gas, coal, diamonds, bauxite and was a big agricultural producer.

For the present at least, those resources remain available. The battle now is to insure a plentiful energy supply for the future.

Arkansas Power & Light Co. is working to get five more electric generating units into operation to meet projected demands of the 1980s.

The utility, a subsidiary of Middle South Utilities, cranked unit one of its $576 million nuclear-fueled electric generating station into operation last December with a net capability of 831 megawatts. Unit two, with a capability of 912 megawatts, is about 43 per cent complete and is scheduled for commercial operation in 1977.

AP&L also is working on two units of a coal-fired generating plant with the first unit planned for operation in 1978 and the second unit the following year. The company is seeking sites for two other proposed coal-fired units, which are scheduled for completion in 1982 and 1983. Each will have a net capability of 700 megawatts.

With the capability of 4,543 more megawatts by 1983, Arkansas appears to be in good shape for electrical power. Reeves Ritchie, president of AP&L, said, however, completion of the current construction program would maintain the company's reserve of 16 per cent and only stay even with projected demands.

"Maybe for six months we might be a little above the (reserve) requirement," Ritchie said, but Arkansas will be in better condition than many states.

Frank Zarb, the nation's energy administrator, said last month the nation may run short of electricity within five years. He said the "expanding crisis in the supply of oil and natural gas" may cause consumers to switch to electricity, creating a new surge in consumption

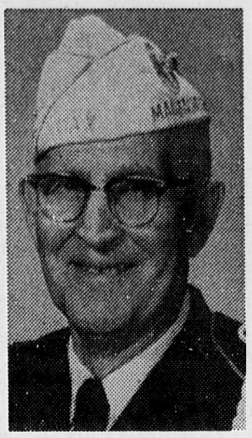
J. Edward Theriault, 219 Pearl St., Newton, a Silver Star recipient with cluster for gallantry in action with the 101st Field Artillery Battalion during World War I, has been named honorary marshal for the annual Memorial Day Parade announced Henry Lever, Adjutant Genral, this week.

The parade will be in Newton on Sunday afternoon, May 25, starting at 1 p.m.

The appointment of Theriault, by the Newton Memorial Day Parade Committe, made up of representatives of all of Newton's veterans organizations, follows a practice established three years avo to honor a senior veteran in Newton who has, over the years, actively participated in those programs of service to the disabled veteran and to the dependents of deceased veterans.

Previous veterans honored by the Newton Memorial Day Parade Committee were Edward Edmunds, Jr. in 1973 and Rosario Guzzi in 1974.

Theriault, a former building inspector in Newton was born in Newton in 1894 and was educated at Our Lady's School, Newton Technical High School, Allen-Chalmers Prep School, and Northeastern University.



J. Edward Theriault

During World War I Theriault was recruited by former Mayor Sinclair Weeks as "one of the Frenc boys at the Nonantum Boys Club."

National Guard Battery B was activated for service in May 1917 and became a part of the 101st Field Artillery, 26th "Yankee" Division.

As a French ethnic recruit, Theriault was assigned to Special Services, and upon his arrival at Camp Coetguidan, France, he became the clerk-interperter for the officers as well as business manager for the 120 man officers regimental mess.

In February 1918 his unit was assigned to Chemin des Dames as part of the allied defense of Verdun. It was during the Verdun campaign that medic Theriault, was gassed by chlorine and mustard gas.

Following a period of two months hospitalization, he was assigned to a unit to aid the 1st Division at Belleau Wood.

While participating in the Belleau Wood campaign, Theriault again suffered under a heavy German mustard gas shellingl and was transferred to a hospital center in south central Frnce.

After months of treatment, he was sent to Boston and received his honorable discharge.

Upon his arrival home Theriault learned thathe had been awarded the Silver Star Medal and citation, signed by Maj. General Edwards of the 26th "Yankee" Division, and a second Silver Star citation by General of the Army Pershing.

Theriault is a charter member of Newton Post, 48, American Legion and Chaplin William Farrell Chapter No. 23 Disabled American Veterans.

Once State Commander of the Disabled Amrican Veterans, he presently holds ife membership in the Franco-American War Veterans, Post 440 American Legion, and Newton Council No. 167 Knights of Columbus.

Since his retirement as a building inspector, due to a serious heart condition, Theriault has spent much of his time visiting and working with the hsopitalized veterans at he various Veterans Administration hospitals within ghe greater Boston area.

J. Edward and Alice Theriault, who have been married for 52 years, have six children, 27 grandchildren and six great-granchildren.

Twin bill comedy opens this week

"Who did this and why?" asks drama critic Moon (kneeling), after discovering his colleague Birdboot murdered in the Newton Country Players production of "The Real Inspector Hound," opening Saturday at the Pomroy House in Newton Corner. Looking on with horror are the stunned occupants of Muldoon Manor (from left): Mrs. Trudgu, Magnus Muldoon and Lady Cynthia Muldoon.

The Newton Country Players will open the curtain on their final production of the season this weekend, when they present "An Evening of Outrageious Comedy," featuring two one-act plays, Murray Schisgal's hilarious romp, "Dr. Fish," and Tom Stoppard's zany farce, "The Real Inspector Hound."

Performances are alted for Saturday and Sunday, May 17-18, and Friday and Saturday, May 23-24, at the Pomroy Playhouse, 84 Eldredge St., Newton. Curtain is 8 ;15 p.m., with an early 7:30 p.m. opening on Sunday. The production will be staged cabaret-style, with tables and chairs.

The curtain-raiser, "Dr. Fish," is directed by F. Abbott Baker of South Natick and features the foursome of George Alland, Ellen Colton, Skip Portney and Betty King.

Highlighting the cast of the "The Real Inspector Hound," directed by Danny Kosow of Chestnut Hill, is a veteran, talent-laden crew of six, with a composite of over 60 roles played under the aegis of the Players.

As Lady Cynthia Muldoon, Pat Pellows of Chestnut Hill essays her 15th role with the group. Last fall, she was featured in the lead role of Vera in the musical "Pal Joey."

Essaying her ninth stage role under the Palyers' hallmark as Mrs. Drudge, the Help, Mikki Krassin of Newton Centre executed the parts of Narrator and Titania in last spring's offering of "Eve's Complaint," performing both at Newton Springfest '74 and the NETC Drama Festival.

Cast in the role of Moon, a drama critic, Danny Kosow has appeared on stage with the Players as Hinezie, the time-study man in "Pajama Game," Richard Pawling in "The Shock of Recognition" from "You Know I Can't Hear You," and the Envoy in "The Balcony," a role he repeated both as an entry and finalist in the NETC Drama Festival.

Returning to the Players' stage after a lapse of five years, Arnold Felton of Newton Highlands is cast in the role of drama critic, Birdboot. In his last previous outing, he portrayed the Chief of Police in "The Balcony," repeating his portrayal at the NETC Drama Festival.

Donation is $2.50, with a special student discount price of $1.50 on Friday and Sunday only, upon presentation of identification. Tickets may be purchased at the door. For additional information, phone Jim Sloane at 969-2665 or write P. O. Box 9, Newton Centre, 02159.

Review

'My Fair Lady' stunning

By FRANK FASTOV

Last week, in surroundings seemingly inadequate to contain the hundreds who came to be entertained, a truly remarkable theatrical event occurred.

With evident careful preparation, extraordinary hard work, and a clever arrangement of talent, there was cast upon the audience a spell which transported them from this humble theater to total emotional involvement in the drama and musical entertainment which unfolded before them as the Temple Beth Avodah Players presented, "My Fair Lady."

Richard Phillips as Henry Higgins, suave handsome, ions into his welldelightfully irritated by bothersome intrus -ordered life, offers us a fine acting ability and appropriate voice and mannerisms to convey a memorable Professor Higgins.

Colonel Pickering, played by Earl Singer, is utterly believable through voice and gesture as a worthy acting companion to his associate. He does a fine job.

When we come to review the performance of Sybil Michelson as Eliza Doolittle, we realize how inadequate mere words can be.

She has brought to Eliza a new and sparkling dimension for those of us who have enjoyed previous efforts. Combining an enormous talent for serious drama with perfection and clarity of voice, grace of movement and a true flair for acting, we can only conjure up inadequate adjectives such as, "marvelous," "exciting," and "absolutely splendid."

Another truly remarkable performance was given by Marvin Fox as Alfred P. Doolittle. Fox appears to have given a great deal of thought to his character and captures the essence of the Cockney lifestyle.

Evelyn Radler as Mrs. Higgins perfectly charicatures an aristocratic English lady and a no-nonsense professor's mother.

Sets by Brenda Gitlin and Elaine Ligums were impressively done and professionally handled by Chet Elman's stage crew. Lighting and sound was flawlessly executed by Julian Eaton and his crew.

The chorus, directed by Ruth Boynick, admirably supported the principals with fine singing and well-timed entrances.

Never in our recollection of amateur productions have we seen such splendid costumes. The credit goes to Esta Blacker and Ruth Shapiro. The day at the races at Ascot with the entire cast done in black and white formal wear was outstanding.

Bouqets for Loretta Michaels for her direction of the cast of 100.

The entire production was under the expert guidance of producers Sybil and Jay Tonkonogy.

The public speaks on revaluation

By CYNTHIA BLACK
of the Graphic staff

A bleak portrait of Newton as a one-class city that only the wealthy can afford to live in was painted by outraged citizens at the revaluation public hearing Tuesday night.

Angry taxpayers overflowed the second floor aldermanic chambers, spilling out into the hallways, down the stairs and all the out way out the front door.

An estimated 1500 people showed up to protest revaluation and at least 600 of them were sandwiched into the hot, humid main chamber of the Board.

Some came armed with facts and backed by citizens groups; others just simply warned that the proposed increases were too much of a burden to bear.

Members of the Board of Aldermen were booed as they picked their ways through the crowd into the chamber. Later, they were forced to leave their seats after a request to allow some of the "older people" to sit down.

Citizens began arriving for the 8 p.m. hearing shortly after 6 p.m. Loudspeakers were set up so that those who could not get into the chamber could hear what was going on.

The city solicitor had a court stenographer present to record the proceedings; the clerk of the board recorded it on tape.

The business of the public hearing was to establish sufficient evidence to build a case for asking the court to delay implementation of revaluation for at least one year.

Actually, the city made its initial overture to the court Monday, before the hearing was held.

City Solicitor Howard Levine filed motions in Superior Court Monday for an extension of time and to make Cole-Layer-Trumble, the firm that revalued Newton, the defendant in the action.

Levine said Tuesday that Judge Henry Chmielinski wants to hear the case next week.

Chmielinski, ruling on the suit for revaluation brought by taxpayers in Newton in 1972, ordered revaluation and set July 1, 1975, as the date it would take effect.

Cole-Layer-Trumble has set June 30 as the date they will turn over all material to the city assessors.

This in effect leaves the assessors with no time to evaluate the revaluation or complete investigations on the 7200 protests from taxpayers over their assessments.

State Rep. Peter F. Harrington spoke first at Tuesday's hearing, outlining four reasons why a delay should be granted and presenting four speakers that would elaborate on the reasons.

He said:

—there has not been enough time for the Board of Aldermen to review and accept the work of Cole-Layer-Trumble under the contract;

—no adequate appeal procedure has been established and information concerning the assessment is not available;

—there is an apparent discrepancy between the method of assessment of commercial and rental properties which have a disproporti adverse effect upon the private, residential onate taxpayer.

—there are many, many complaints and apparent inequities and time is needed to determine if there is a pattern that would cause the proposed assessment to be rejected.

Harrington said a survey of actual sales made recently showed that of 103 sales 25 percent sold for less than the new evaluation and 43 percent sold for more than the new value.

He added that the revaluation would tend to depress the values of moderate income people, people he described as with incomes between $10,000 and $18,000 per year.

Harrington said the Speaker of the House of Representatives would be asked Wednesday to permit Harrington to late file legislation "to mandate a delay until such time as the entire state is required to go to 100 percent valuation."

The Supreme Judicial Court, in a decision on Sudbury in December, 1974, upheld the originial 1963 lower court mandate of "full and fair market value" and ordered every community in the state to revalue at 100 percent.

To date, between 40 and 60 percent of the Commonwealth has been revalued.

Fink defends recent staff growth

Superintendent of Schools Aaron Fink defended growth in the School Department of more than 30 percent in two staff divisions in the four years from 1970 to 1974.

Fink distributed personnel data for the years 1961, 1970, and 1974 at the last School Committee meeting, May 12. He said it was in response to misinformation that had been circulating in the city regarding staffing in years of comparable enrollments.

He chose these years, when enrollment was 17,884, 17,812, and 16,152, respectively, because data was already available.

The enrollment figures include Metco students for these years, which totaled 127 in 1970 and 200 in 1974.

The five categories of personnel, the definition of the categories, the number of staff, and the changes from the first year, 1961, to 1970, and from 1970 to 1974 follow:

Teachers, 745 in 1961, 930 in 1970, plus 25 percent, 862 in 1974, minus 7 percent.

Support staff, which includes elementary art, music, teachers, librarians, counselors, psychologists, coordinators, and special education workers, was 111 in 1961, 211 in 1970, plus 90 per cent, 221 in 1974, plus 5 per cent.

Administrative staff, which includes the superintendent and his staff of assistants and directors, principals, assistant principals, department heads, and housemasters, was 70 in 1961, 73 in 1970, plus 4 percent, and 73 in 1974.

Auxiliary staff, which includes secretaries, teacher aides, emotionally disturbed and learning disability tutors, and other personnel for special education, was 153 in 1961, 246 in 1970, plus 93 percent, 321 in 1974, plus 31 precent.

Nonclassified staff, which includes custodians, cafeteria workers, data processing personnel, and other personnel, was 155 in 1961, 187 in 1970, plus 21 percent, 246 in 1974, plus 32 percent.

The superintendent explained the increase in nonclassified personnel due to the state mandated elementary school lunch program, which added 31 workers from 1970 to 1974, and an additional 19 custodians to reduce custodial overtime.

The additional auxiliary staff for the four years when enrollment decreased by 1,660 students, was in the area of tutors and aides for special education1, early childhood, and bilingual programs.

In the area of support personnel, the areas that increased in the four year span were music teachers, librarians, special education, social workers, and bilingual.

Fink explained that these areas are the ones parents request extra personnel in.

He said, "I get constant demands that there should be one librarian and one music teacher per school."

In response to criticism from some aldermen and others in the past, Fink asked, "Should we go back to the staffing of a previous era? I don't know who wants to go back to one art teacher" in the elementary schools like there was in 1961. In 1974 there were 12 art teachers.

He said the problem is one of what is appropriate for children, and what the community wants and what it is willing to pay for.

The superintendent had previously stated during the budget hearings in January that the area of "central services exclusive of special education" has declined proportionately to the decline in enrollment.

This week he said this holds true for the years 1974-75 and 1975-76, which are not included in the above figures.

During the two years, central services will decrease by about nine positions from a total of about 100.

He classified central services as all personnel not working in the schools, with the exception of special education workers in the Division of Programs.

The breakdown by location of staff was not presented at the School Committee meeting, but Superintendent Fink said it has been published and is available.

Fink pointed out the decline in the number of teachers since he was superintendent in 1970, but noted that further teachers cuts would be difficult because the enrollment is dropping off in the elementary schools where teachers are needed for each classroom.

Unless grades are mixed or schools are consolidated, it would be difficult to reduce teachers further.

The superintendent also said his staff is preparing an analysis of the clerical and secretarial staff which he hopes will be ready in October.

Newton Corner bridge repair will cost Pike $300,000

By RICHARD WILLIAMS
of the Graphic staff

The repair of the Washington Street Bridge over the Massachusetts Turnpike will cost more than $300,000.

The Massachusetts Turnpike Authority, owners of the structure, sent out bids Tuesday morning for repairing damage caused by a huge fire when an 8,000 gallon gasoline tanker overturned after being cut off by an unknown driver.

At the time of the May 3 fire there were no lane lines painted on the bridge to help control traffic flow.

Mel Crain, chief engineer for the authority, said the MTA is responsible for the upkee p of the structure , but the city is responsible for the traffic flow on top of the the upkeep of the structure, but the city is bridge where the accident occurred.

Street Commissioner Edmund C. Bolduc said this was news to him.

Bolduc said the line painting usually stops at the steel which is the start of the bridge.

"If it's our responsibility, I'll check it out," he said Wednesday.

Bolduc also said he has fewer men this year than last year to paint lines on the streets. The priorities are the crosswalks near elementary schools, then business districts, then lines in the other streets.

Last year there were two crews to paint lines, but this year there is only one, the commissioner said.

On the work needed to be done to repair the bridge, Crain said he hopes to have it started shortly after the bids are opened June 3, and completed in October.

During the five months, Crain said he will keep at least two lanes of traffic open on Washington Street, although traffic on the Pike may be reduced to one lane eastbound on weekends.

The estimated cost of $300,000 is low, according to the authority, because this does not include the manpower of the consulting engineers or damage done to utilities.

There was no one seriously injured in the explosion three weeks ago, and traffic over the bridge since then has been limited to two or three lanes.

NRA advertises for developer to build 60 units of housing

By ELEANOR SIEGEL
of the Graphic staff

The Newton Redevelopment Authority has begun advertising for a developer to build 60 units of housing on a parcel of land just under four acres. Fifteen of the units are for low income housing subsidized by the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency. The remainder of the housing will be for elderly, moderate and market priced units.

Although it was originally hoped that more units of low income housing could be placed in the Lower Falls redevelopment area, it was at the direction of the community that only 15 be reserved for this purpose. Developers interested in the project must submit their proposals with renderings by July 8.

In addition to submitting a plan for the housing, the developer may submit an alternative design for the housing and a small market. Many people in the area have expressed a desire for such a market. The existing market, the Wayside, went out of business.

Along with the Wayside, Mary's Cafe will go out of business. According to the law, each business will receive a "dislocation" payment of from $2500 to $10,000 based on the net income of the business. This payment is in lieu of moving expenses.

On the commerical site, the developer Spaulding and Slye received permission from the authority to subdivide the site into three parcels. Each of the parcels will hold an office building. The division was done for the purposes of financing.

However, the developer will still be held responsible for building on the entire 616,000 square foot site. The financing plan is due to be submitted to the authority by June 1. If the developer does not submit a plan, then they will be considered in "default" and the plans may revert to the authority. The projected date for completion of the project is 1978.

In the first building, Robert Lurie, project director for Spaulding and Slye, says that "a major insurance company" is negotiating for a lease on the top floor. He noted that construction on the three story building was due to begin in August.

On the south side of Washington St., plans are nearing completion for the $2.5 million office building for Gregorian and Shipley. This is a joint project and both firms have used one architect "to insure that the development blends in" with the area.

North high bond held

Approval of a $1.2 million bond for finishing the Newton North High School site has been held up in the Finance Committee.

Aldermen learned Monday night that the anticipated 65 percent state reimbursement for the completion would not materialize.

They were informed that the most to be expected from the State Buildings Assistance Bureau (SBAB) would be 40 percent, because this was the percentage of reimbursement established for North High School as a whole.

Board members were prepared to approve the bond contingent upon 65 percent reimbursement, reserving the right to call the site plan back if the money did not come from the SBAB.

The approval for the bond issue voted by the Public Buildings Committee stands. Finance will take the matter up at its regular meeting tonight (May 22).

There will be no Public Buildings meeting tonight.

Bid for mayoral midterm raise loses

A bid to allow aldermen to raise the mayor's salary in midterm failed by a vote of 16-4 Monday.

The Board of Aldermen, meeting on proposed changes in the City Charter, voted against giving themselves the power to raise the mayor's salary and also voted against three proposed changes relating to the Planning Department and Planning Board that were proposed by Ald. Terry Morris.

For the first time in the city's history, the mayor of Newton has a four-year term. Mandated by the Charter, the four-year mayoral term went into effect with the 1974 inauguration.

Despite the lengthening of the term, the Charter retained the language that the mayor's salary could not be raised during his term.

It was proposed that this be changed so that the Board of Aldermen could vote a raise for the mayor that would not exceed 10 percent and would go into effect during the second two years of the term.

Ald. Louis Egelson, favoring the change, argued Monday that the four-year frozen salary did not take inflation into account. He also noted that the mayor's salary affected salaries of all and raises of all of the city department heads since it provides, in effect, a ceiling.

Ald. Joseph McDonnell maintained that the original Charter Commission instituted the 4 four-year term but did not see fit to change the way the salary was set.

He said he has not "heard any good reason" to change it now.

McDonnell suggested appointing a committee to evaluate the situation and propose a salary change that would go into effect in 1978, the next new term for a mayor.

Ald. Edward Richmond suggested a blue ribbon committee be appointed at the end of the current term to discuss the mayor's salary; a committee similiar to the one the mayor appointed to discuss the aldermanic salary.

Morris wanted to delete specific reference to the Planning Department in the section of the Charter that charged it with being the department responsible zoning, urban renewal, land use and other similar "to plan functions."

His motion lost 11-10.

He wanted to delete specific reference to the planning director.

This lost on a voice vote.

His final suggested change was in reference to the Planning Board.

Morris pointed out the Planning Board is established by state law, which recommends seven to nine members while the City Charter specifies five members for Newton. He said he also did not like the City Charter specification that Planning Board members could serve dual roles as park commissioners.

His motion to change this section was defeated by a vote of 13-8.

In all Charter changes, a two-thirds vote of aldermen present and voting was required.

Aldermen also discussed how to put the Charter changes on the ballot in November.

Election Commissioner Alan Licarie has informed the Board that if there are many questions, or if the questions are lengthy, they might not fit on the machines and paper ballots will be needed.

Drink up - water OK

If the water from your faucet tastes as if it came right out of the river, maybe it did.

But don't worry about — it's perfectly safe.

Water Commissioner Willard Pratt said this week that his office has received several complaints about the taste of the water from various locations in the city, including City Hall.

When he checked with the Metropolitan District Commission, the MDC could not immediately tell him what the problem is. said sometimes when the demand for water is exceptionally Pratt high, the Sudbury River water is used to supply the communities in the MDC water district, which may account for the taste.

The Water Department tests Newton's water once a week, Pratt said' at several locations. The drinking water is completely safe, he said.

Drinan introduces legislation to reform electricity rates

Congressman Robert F. Drinan (D-Newton) announces this week that he has introduced legislation which would reform the retail electricity rate structure.

"The existing rate structure benefits those who use the most electricity," Drinan declared, "hurting the small consumer and businessman who pay a disproportionate share of the actual cost."

Drinan has filed the Electric Utilities Rate Reform Act of 1975. The major premise of the bill is that state regulatory authorities must establish rate schedules which distribute costs to classes of consumers according to the actual cost incurred by the utilities.

The rate schedules may provide for the sale of electricity to different classes of consumers at different prices only when the cost of the service can be shown to justify such a difference.

"The average consumer of electricity has subsidized the large users of energy over the years," the congressman stated. "While such a practice did not arouse the ire of the consuming public when energy was plentiful and inexpensive, electricity bills have become outrageiously high in the last year and one-half. Wtth the extraordinarily high fuel adjustment charges which have been assessed recently, it is common for a family to pay well over $100 for a two-month period.

"Clearly, the public should no longer be responsible for subsidizing the energy use of large industries and office buildings."

The Rate Reform Act also requires the state regulatory commissions to provide for the sale of electricity at higher prices during peak periods of the day.

"By minimizing the use of electricity during the peak load periods, generally 4 to 7 p.m., consumers could significantly reduce their energy bills even more," Drinan said.

"The reason for this is the utility companies must employ highly inefficient and costly peak loading equipment to meet the electricity demand during these hours.

"If the rate schedules made electricity more costly between 4 and 7 p.m., we could provide a large incentive to even off our energy consumption patterns. The utilities could make greater use of efficient generating equipment and the savings would be passed on to the consumer," Drinan said.

"In view of the abuse of the fuel adjustment charge, the Reform Act specifies standards for its use in the future," Drinan went on to say. "A utility company would be prohibited from automatically passing on its added fuel costs to the consumer without prior notice and a public hearing.

"The utilities would have to show that they are using their fuel and generating facilities efficiently and that the adjustment charges are fairly distributed according to actual cost."

Information service for state agencies

State Secretary Paul Guzzi has announced the opening of a new Citizen Information Service to be operated by his office. The new service will handle citizens' questions and problems related to state agencies through a statewide toll-free telephone number

The new service is designed to "make state government more accessible to people" according to Secretary Guzzi who is optimistic that this "much needed centralized information service will help end the red tape usually associated with governmental agencies.

"There is a great deal of public information in my office and throughout the state government that should be easy for people to obtain. The Citizen Information Service is intended to provide a quick link to state government for people throughout the Commonwealth.

The Citizen Information Service can be reached toll–free by calling: 727-7030 (metropolitan Boston area) and 1-800-392-6090 (outside Boston area); or by writing: Citizen Information Service, Office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth1, State House, Boston, MA 02133.

Revaluation committee established

A special submcommittee on revaluation was appointed Monday night by Aldermanic President Eliot K. Cohen.

By a vote of 18-1, the Board of Aldermen Monday approved a resolution sumbmitted by Ald. Joseph McDonnell that the Board act as a Committee of the Whole "to begin actively investigating theequity of the Cole-Layer-Trumble assessments."

McDonnell's resolution asked for the subommittee and $3,000 so the Board could hire its own consultant.

Cohen appointed the following aldermen to the committee: Eliot Cohen, Richard J. Bullwinkle, Joseph McDonnell, Sidney Small, Richard J. McGrath, Michael Lipof, Thomas Concannon and Mark White.

Factfinder decides city offer to firemen is fair

The City of Newton came out smelling like a rose after a state-appointed factfinder looked at the arguments the city was having with the firefighters over their contract.

According Micha to el Lebner, administrative assistant to Mayor Theodore Mann, the factfinder agreed that the city's salary offer was fair.

The factfinder recommended the firefighters receive an 8.06 percent raise for the current fiscal year which ends June 30, 1975, and 10 percent raise for the next fiscal year.

The firefighter's union is asking for a raise equal to the cost of living increase from January, 1973, to April, 1974, plus 6 percent for the current fiscal year and 10 percent for next year.

Lebner said this is one of the most favorable reports returned to any municipality since the state law of binding arbitration for police and fire departments went into effect about a year ago.

The only point on which the factfinder ruled in favor of the firefighters, according to Lebner, was on the day-to-day staffing of the fire department.

The city had wanted to leave it to Chief Frederick A. Perkins, Jr., to decide how many employees are needed accroding to the chances of fire each day, but Factfinder Craig Overton recommended that the department be manned by no less that 11 men less than the maximum number of men needed to run all the equipment the city owns.

Neither the city or firefighters have to accept but if a settlement all of the recommendations of Overton, is not reached by June 30, binding arbitration will begin.

Then both sides agree on a third arbitrator, who must pick either the final package of the city or the firefighters. That decision is binding.

Lebner indicated that the firefighters have already asked to meet again with the city.

Other points in the factfinders recommendations were a $75 laundering allowance, a minimum of 7 cents per hour additional for working the night shift, reimbursements for books and other expen ses at accredited colleges, and longevity benefits of up to $200 per year for 20 years or more of service.

Educational benefits will include an extra percentage of a firefighter's base pay of 10 percent for an associate's degree, 20 percent for a bachelor's degree, and 30 percent for a master's degree.

City solicitor files response to taxpayers' suit

By RICHARD WILLIAMS
of the Graphic staff

The City of Newton has filed a complicated defense on behalf of the Board of Aldermen's cut of $500,000 from the School Committee's proposed budget for 1975-76.

Fifteen taxpayers, led by former School Committeewo man Grace C. Whitmore, filed suit in Superior Court April 25 to maintain the fiscal autonomy of the School Committee and have the amount restored, with a 25 percent penalty that the School Committee could use.

City Solicitor Howard Levine filed his response in Middlesex Superior Court in Cambridge last Friday.

The response claims that the $31.9 million budget that the School Committee passed and asked the Board to appropriate in full is not an amount "exclusively for the support of public schools in Newton as required by General Laws, Chapter 71 ."

The suit of the 15 taxpayers alleges that the Board made a $500,000 "across-the-board reduction in the budget submitted by the School Committee."

The city asks the court to decide whether the School Committee has the right to submit only a single figure budget, or whether the city can demand more breakdowns in the budget.

Levine said this is a very complex issue, and contends that the Board's cut was from specified areas and the entrie single line budget itself.

In other points in the suit, Levine asks for the 15 taxpayers to prove they are citizens of Newton, since there are no addresses listed beside the 15 names.

As a defense, Levine claims that the state law requiring public financing of schools i illegal s because it relies on the property tax, which discriminates against poor communitites.

n

He also claims that the state law parts of for education are discriminatory undre the under the 14th Amendment to the Constitution because the law allows Boston to be treated differently in the way it runs its schools.

Levine's eight pointed defense also claims that the School Committee "failed to act in goood faith" when it decided its budget, that the budget "requested appropriations for items and services not reasonably and rationally related to furtherence of the educational purposes" under Cahpter 71.

Also, the defense claims that the 25 percent penalty on top of the $500,000 that Chapter 71 allows if the court rules in favor of the taxpayers and the School Committee is "unduly burdensome. "

Finally, the city claims that the the 25 percent penalty is unconstitutional because it denies the citizens legislative voice in items not required for the schools.

Levine had hoped earlier that the case would be heard by October.

Jeffrey Freedman, attorney for the 15 taxpayers, . said he has heard all of the city's arguments before

Although some of Levine's points have not been tried in court, Freedman said, "I don't think his points will be sustained" by the judge.

Freedman strongly stressed that Board of Aldermen did have the entire School Commi budget before them ttee when they voted, and said they could have voted each part of it separately.

As background Freedman pointed out that Medford tried to appeal a case in which the elected officials cut the School Committeee budget to Federal District Court, but Judge W. Arthur Garritty returned it to the state courts, claiming he had no jurisdiction.

Mann meets with mayors to discuss 'cherry sheet'

Mayor Theodore D. Mann of Newton recently met with top officials of Greater Boston area municipalities in Malden to discuss the adverse affects of the "cherry sheet" on many cities and towns. In attendance at the meeting were the mayors and city managers of Malden, Waltham, Everett, Revere, New Bedford, Cambridge, Melrose.

The cherry sheet, issued by the state, tells communities how much they can expect to pay or receive from the state.

Mann, who was accompanied by Comptroller Lawrence Marino, Chief Budget Officer Michael Lebner, and Chief Administrative Assistant James Salter, stated, "This emergency meeting of mayors was to determine what action should be taken regarding equalized valuations." The mayors in attendance overwhelming supported legislation which would cure some of the inequities of the most recent cherry sheet disbursements.

The mayors will continue their deliberations in an attempt to bring about further changes in. the formulas regarding distribution of state tax money for purposes of Chapter 70 education.

The mayors generally agreed that the property tax should no longer be burdened with paying for public education and, as a matter of fact, several of the cities have developed legislation and are in the process of hiring legal counsel in furtherance of this objective.

Back-yard frontier

My friend Norma had the engine drop out of her car the other day — the bottom of the car rusted out and Boom, there was the engine sitting on the road.

The result is that she's been doing a lot of walking. She lives in Nahant, and yesterday she walked to the hairdresser's in Lynn, a hike of a mile and a half across the long, sandy causeway which connects the island of Nahant with the mainland. The causeway is a public beach maintained by the Metropolitan District Commission (MDC).

"That's the most beautiful walk in the world," she told me. "But when you go slowly, walking, you see every singlz bottle and can. The beach is covered with them. It's a shame. If only there were a law banning nonreturnable bottles and beverage cans, that beach wouldn't be such a mess."

Woman assaulted, shot in Newton Corner

A Watertown woman who was shot and beaten in her car parked in Newton Corner Thursday afternoon.

As of Tuesday, her assailant was still at large.

Lois E. Nihen, 42, of 42 Duff St., Watertown has been discharged from Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

The victim had completed a transaction at the Mutual Bank for Savings at 303 Washington St., went down the street to her car parked in the Burton's Liquor Mart, 355 Washington St.

At 12:31 p.m. police received an anonymous call reporting a woman shot.

Witnesses at the scene report the woman went out of the bank and entered her car when the man assailant slid in beside her through the other door.

A couple witnessed the act and reported that they heard sounds o f a "scuffle," police said, and later hearsd a "pop" when a .22 caliber gun was fired,.

The bullet entered the woman's head about three inches above the temple and exited about four inches later in the back of her head.

Police report that the man entered the car' the woman started screaming, and the man told her to "shut up."

He struck her several times in the face, possibiy using the nickel plated handgun he had.

After the gunshot , the assailant ran toward Peabody Street, and was followed to that point by the husband of the couple that had witnessed the scene after stopping to ask for directions.

A third witness said the man had blood on his arm when he fled.

Police suspect he may have had a car parked on Peabody Street or in the vicinity.

Police have established no definite motive for the assault, although there was a $10 bill sticking out of her purse that was in her handbag when she left the bank.

One witness had seen the assailant in front of 377 Washington St., next to Burton's before the assault.

The assailant was described as being about 48, 5 feet 8 or 9 inches, dark complexion, thin build, and medium cut brown hair.

Investigating the case were Police Chief William F. Quinn, Lts. James V. Cox, Charles E. Feeley, Sgts. James J. McCarthy, Meal R. Dwyer, Det. William M. Fitzsimmons, and others.

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — Widespread interest in edible wild plants launched a research project by undergraduates at Purdue University here. Jerry McLaughlin, project director and a professor, said almost half of about 70 plants examined so far were toxic in some degree.

The project, which began last summer, will be continued this year.

Newtonville woman killed in car crash

A Newtonville woman was killed in a single car crash on the Massachussetts Turnpike near Newton Corner Sunday.

The car was driven by a Boston man who was also reported dead on arrival at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Brighton.

State police did not know if either were wearing seat belts or had alcohol in their bodies.

Dead are Candace L. Carson, 22, of 3 Walnut Ter., Newtonville, and Lawrence Stokes, 27, of 270 Ruggles St., Boston.

At about 9 p.m. police report the vehicle, traveling at a high rate of speed, hit the left side guardrail and skidded accross three lanes and hit a sign pole.

The Pontiac sedan ski dded 280 feet before coming to a stop, state police said.

Both victims had to removed from the vehicle by Newton Fire Department equipment.

Newton Police also assisted.

The number to call is . . .

With seven flips of a finger Massachusetts residents are now able to get some answers to their question and problems relating to state agencies. The new citizen information telephone service can be reached by dialing 727-7030.

The information service is credited to Paul Guzzi of Newton who is now Secretary of State. You can well imagine that such a service was the brainchild of a man who often received out-of-order signals when he himself sought some answers from the state. And that surely happened to Mr. Guzzi before his sound victory in the last election.

Try the number. If you don't get the promised answers or a fast call-back let the Secretary of the State know about it. And the number you can surely get through to the Secretary is 727-2800. That's his office phone and either Guzzi or the Secretary's secretary will help you out.

The new phone number was put into service so that callers could call one source for information relating to all state agencies, including public health education, unemployment and taxation.

The service is part of Guzzi's commitment to make public information easier to obtain. It's a commendable plan. At the start the service will be open Mondays through Fridays from nine in the morning until 5 p.m.

Through our 'Letters to the editor' column we would be glad to hear how you find the service.

Raps McGovern Visits To Arafat and Castro

After Senator George McGovern visited Yasser Arafat and Fidel Castro, Boston Attorney Hirsh Freed fired off a sarcastic letter to McGovern declaring that it's too bad Adolph Hitler isn't still alive so McGovern could visit him, too.

Here's the letter Freed sent to McGovern:

Dear Sir:

Having in mind your visit to that great humanitarian, Arafat, and your most recent expedition to Fidel Castro, great champion of human freedom, it seems a pity that Adolph Hitler is dead. Otherwise, you could visit him, too.

Very truly yours,

Hirsh Freed

P.S. Isn't it a remarkable coincidence that your presidential campaign manager, Frank Mankiewicz, and your former press secretary, Kirby Jones, (who, in fact, accompanied you to Cuba), are currently peddling their personal influence with Castro to any and all American takers who have the money, according to the current issue of New York Magazine.

Dukakis Fought For Bag of Worms

Whenever a change occurs in the political party controlling the Massachusetts Governorship, it is fashionable for the incoming new Governor to proclaim that his predecessor did a poor job and left a sorry mess which had to be cleaned up.

It is generally conceded now that former Governor Francis W. Sargent's management of the state's financial affairs left much to be desired and that Governor Michael S. Dukakis didn't realize how bad a mess he was inheriting when he declared in last autumn's campaign that Sarent was bequeathing him a $100 million deficit.

A Dukakis aide said privately the other day that if Michael knew how bad the state's financial problems really were, he might have folded up his campaign and remained at the practice of law.

Dukakis should not be criticized too sharply for not knowing the amount of the state's deficit. That wasn't his job at the time. A political columnist who suggested recently that Dukakis deliberately misled the people and was covering up Sargent's true deficit, was being absurd.

Dukakis was battling Sargent for the Governorship and obviously used the deficit figures he believed were correct.

But Francis Sargent should have known the amount of the state's deficit. He was Governor. It was his responsibility to know. He either didn't know, or he put on an act of being indignant when Dukakis claimed that Sarge had rolled up a $100 Million deficit. That seemed staggering at the time.

In retrospect, it appears now that the only one who had any idea how deeply the state was in the red was Democratic State Senator James A. Kelly, Jr., of Oxford, the highly competent chairman of the Senate Ways and Means Committee. Kelly's estimates of the deficit, which proved to be conservative, were considered inflated when he made them.

Governor Dukakis placed himself in a weak position and lost the respect of many people when he atrributed some of his problems to what he termed "a legacy of corruption" he inherited from former Governor Sargent.

Subsequently, Dukakis backed away from his allegation that he inherited "a legacy of corruption." He made the lame explanation that he was trying to establish the integrity of his administration before Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti went before a Grand Jury in quest of criminal indictments against some state officials.

Dukakis conceded he had no evidence of widespread corruption in the state government. What Dukakis said meant to this listener that the Governor had taken a cheap shot at Francis Sargent in order to prevent anyone from assuming that he was responsible for the wrongdoing which led to indictments.

Governor Dukakis later stressed that he didn't intend his remarks at a Cabinet meeting to be interpreted as "a personal attack" on ex-Governor Sargent. Well, if he didn't mean he inherited the alleged "legacy of corruption" from Sargent, whom did he mean he inherited it from?

Dukakis did not say but might have that he has created some problems for himself by poor appointments he has made.

Francis Sargent certainly was not a great Governor. Disclosures since he left office about the state's dire financial straits indicate that he may not have been even a good Governor. He obviously ignored the clear need for nex taxes in order to improve his reelection chances.

But it is unlikely that anyone would question the statement that ex-Governor Sargent was honest and a man of integrity.

Corruption may have occurred in more than one state department while Francis Sargent was Governor, as Michael Dukakis implied. But, in all fairness, it should be pointed out that the investigations made by Attorney Genewral Bellotti were originally instigated by Mr. Sargent not Governor Dukakis.

No one who knows Francis Sargent would try to link him with any corruption or dishonesty in state agencies or even claim that he would knowingly condone it. To put it most charitably, Governor Dukakis' original statement about inheriting "a legacy of corruption" was unfortunate and ill-advised.

The rush of Bicentennial 'debunkers'

By Virginia Payette, syndicated columnist

Celebrating a 200th birthday is something to be proud of, and most Americans say they are. But we do have funny ways of showing it.

I'm not talking about the tacky souvenirs and the commercial gimmicks that are beginning to crop up. These are inevitable and part of our inalienable right to make fools of ourselves any time it will bring in a buck.

What bothers me is the sudden rush of "debunkers." Overnight, seems like, everything we learned in history class is turning out to be the other way around.

Especially when it comes to the reason for the Bicentennial: the Revolution itself.

Now we are told (by Ivy League scholars, no less) that Nathan Hale never did regret that he had "but one life to lose" for his country...that Paul Revere's "one if by land and two if by sea" was nothing but poetic license...and that George Washington was really a lousy general who almost lost the war.

Is this any way to celebrate the birth of our country? By putting the knock on all our cherished beliefs and hallowed legends? Next thing you know they'll be telling us what Patrick Henry really said was: "Give me liberty or I'll join a Canadian commune."

Well, give me the old "historic" history. And a pox on that Yale professor who claims his research proves that what Hale actually said as he stepped up to the gallows in 1776 was: "It is the duty of every good officer to obey any orders given him by his commander-in-chief."

Now, I ask you. Is that a sentiment to stir our souls...to inspire a schoolboy to loyalty and sacrifice...to be carved in marble? Sounds more like the alibis of the Watergate culprits.

They're debunking Paul Revere, too. Turns out now his famous lantern bit was only the imagination of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, whose epic poem immortalized the silversmith. The fact is, say historians, the British came both ways — by land AND by sea.

Not only that, Paul never did finish his midnight ride. He was they tell us, captured before he got to Concord, the main target of the British. And then he had the nerve to send the Colonists a bill for his services. Talk about taking the shine off a legend!

They're after Old George, too. Over the years we've come to accept the fact that he never did chop down that cherry tree...that he padded his army expense accounts...even that he married Martha for her money. There was always Valley Forge.

Now the word is out that he botched more campaigns than he won...that he never would have captured Yorktown without help from the French fleet...and that his fumbling tactics cost the lives of many soldiers who might have made it through under a better officer.

We've also been bombarded with proof that Thomas Jefferson fathered not only a country but a flock of little illegitimate Jeffersons by a beautiful household slave.

And that when Benjamin Franklin was Ambassador to the French court he chased the willing ladies as hard as he pursued the king's help in defeating the British Psychiatrists today would put him in the dirty-old-man class.

Well, thanks for nothing. I liked my history the way it was before the scholars took over. And fie upon them all.

Cartoonists' pens bad-rap the refugees

By John D. Lofton, Jr.

WASHINGTON — A few more words about our nuwest citizens.

Whenever a definition of the Yiddish word for brashness — "chutzpah" — is attempted, a frequently cited example is the young man who urders his parents then throws himself on the mercy of the court, begging for leniency on the grounds that he is an orphan.

But I would like to suggest a new example of chutzpah, and that is: a person who is himself an immigrant now criticizing the tens of thousands of Vietnamese immigrants who fled Communisn. The person I have in mind is the Pulitzer Prize-winning editorial cartoonyst for The Washington Star, Pat Oliphant.

According to the promotional ads run by The Star praising Mr. Oliphant — who immigrated to the United States from Arstralia in 1964 — the paper's new cartoonist was brought to the Nation's capita o that his "penetrating eye" and "idol-piercing pen" could give readers "a fresh and witty look" at the people and politics in Washington.

So, the other day, Mr. Oliphant unloaded on the Vietnamese refugees. Clever fellow that he is, his cartoon showed an embarrassed Statue of Liberty surrounded by a group of sleazy-looking Orientals. The caption read: "Send me your tired and huddled masses, your gennrals, your wealthy and privileged classes, your crooks and pimps and bar girls yearning to breathe free ..."

Then I called Mr. Oliphant and asked him if there wasn't something anomalous about an immigrant like himself being so harsh on the new Vietnames immigrants, he said yes there was. But, he explained, he resented the fact that he had to fill in all kinds of forms and go through all kinds of programs yet "these people don't."

Well, there are a lot of things to be said in rebuttal to Mr. Olipkant and his cartoon.

First, the Vietnamese immigrants will have to fill out all those forms and go through all those programs Mr. Oliphuant had to endure. He should know that it is one thing to escape communism, but quite another to elude the federal bureaucracy.

Secondly, there are 26 categories of undesirable aliens that are not allowed admission to this country. These include such people as convicted criminals, drug dealers, alcoholics, polygamists or disease carriers. It has not yet, however, been deemed criminal activity to have been a general, a wealthy person, a pimp, a bar n editorial cartoonist.

"When I said 'save Vietnam for democracy,' I didn't mean this democracy!"

Thirdly, it is a bad rap to represent all the Vietnamese refugees as being the types por trayed by Mr. Oliphant in his cartoon. He himself admits that he has no idea what percentage of the total number of, refugees fall into these groups. But it is obvious that a majority couldn't, since an estimated 60 per cent are children.

L. Dean Brown, head of the government's interaogency task force to handle humanitarian assistance and refugee problems, tells me that "practically none" or "a very small number" fall into the categories drawn by Mr. Oliphant.

For the most part, he says, the "great mass" are relatives of the United States, people believed to be American government employes, employes of American firms, labor people, voluntary agency people, and church people, a lot of priests and ministers.

ses," says Brown, "because they have a very good memory of what happens when a country is taken over by Communists. Many are from North Vietnam themselves and the people from Da Nang remember what happened in that country in 1955, when the forced land-reform program was decreed and it was laber announced that 55,000 recalcitrant peasants had been executed. Many knew they would be the first to be knocked off."

Pat Oliphant says he came to America because "I like this country better, I like the people and I like working here." And so it is with the Vietnamese refugees.

But the difficult task of these people starting their lives all over again will be made even more difficult with cheap shots like Oliphant's picturing them as the scum of the earth.

The Washington Star says its new edytorial cartoonist is one more name that's "adding to the stature" of the paper. But iv his poison-pen portrayal of the Vietnam refugees is a taste of things to come, this would seem to be a false promise. And the last thing The Star needs is less stature.

'Strange. It not look same as in pictures.'

New era

To The Editor:

Led by a statue and a bell, Garden City citizens celebrated 200 years of liberty as they marched from yesterday, the Jackson Homestead, to today, City Hall.

All who participated created a bit of ongoing history and provided a unique memory: May 11, 1975. Quilted banners, silver batons, remarkable vehicles, reminiscent costumes enlivened a glorious day. Tri-cronered hats were everywhere.

Youngsters from virtually all our schools paraded to familiar tunes . . . "they've only just begun." Some of the marchers are young enough so that being a part of our Bicentennial Celebration includes adding a new word to their vocabulary. All of our young people are fortunate to be living and learning about freedom and responsibility in a place which played a truly vital part in building our country.

A new flag floats over Newton. Let us catch the sense of community which inspired the parade. It has to be an essence of the spirit of 1975, and we must find new ways to carry it forward.

100 percent

To the Editor:

Is no one else aware of the fact that the "fair" City of Newton is going through the throes of 100 percent evaluation?

A highly reputable firm has recently reassessed our city so that many Newton taxpayers are now in the process of applying for "tax hearings" as our $40,000 houses are said to be selling for $75,000!

It's a shame that one of the neighbors sold her house for $63,000—the assessors thought she should have received $74,000.

At a recent tax hearing my relatives were told that the house next door had recently sold for $80,000' a startling revelation as it has been occupied by the same residents for the past eight years!

How many new found "facts" and typographical errors have favored the assessors and left the homeowners speechless? God only knows...

At any rate, (pardon the pun), 100 percent evaluation, if done fairly and properly, is a necessary evil.

Newton is not being assessed fairly as is evident by the packed meetings with the aldermen and by the increasing numbers of people applying for tax hearings.

Are we going to continue to have four columns of Newton real estate in the papers, or are we going to fight this out?

At $1.20 a square foot, I'd rather fight for fair assessment!

Cecilla McVey,
Newton Centre

P.S. I could move to Oak Hill—I understand its only 30 cents a foot.

Detailed analysis on revaluation

To the Editor:

The recent revaluation of Newton properties has been much disuceed, but little in the way of hard facts and informed interpretation has appeared in print. I hope, therefore, that the following analysis will be of some interest to your readers.

The analysis is based primarily on a list of 957 properties sold in Newton in 1974. This list is published by Ads Inc. and contains, among other items, the address and sale price of each property. The old and new assessements of most of these properties were obtained from City Hall records.

Relation of New Assessment to Sale Price. This relation was evaluated for 589 of the 957 properties on the list (the omitted items either were given with inadequate address, or the assessment and sales price differed by a factor of two or more, indicating some gross error either in the list or in the assessment). Specifically, the ratio of assessment to sales price for each property was calculated on a percentage basis (for instance, if a house sold at $50,000 was assessed at $45,000, the ratio is 90 percent. The average, median, etc, of all these ratios were computed. The following conclusions were reached:

1. Average and median assessment to price ratio were both 94 percent.

2. 10 percent of all properties were assessed at less than 80 percent of their sale price 20 percent at less than 85 percent; 20 percent at more than 103 percent of sale price; 10 percent at more than 108 percentj.

3. The standard deviation of the assessment to price ratio was 16 percent.

Thus, properties were, on the average, underassessed by about 6 percent, but there was a great deal of scatter and a large number of assessments deviated significantly from this average. These deviations did not show any obvious correlations with factors such as age and type of property, and no explanation for them has been found as yet.

Relation of Old to New Tax Bill. The old and new tax bills (before allowance for possibly increased city budget) were compared for 526 of the properties (the remaining 63 could not be easily found in the old assessment books), rereaing the following facts:

1. For 36 percent of the properties the tax bill decreased by an average amount of 12 percent.

2. For 64 percent of the properties the tax bill increased by an average amount of 22 percent.

Thus, almost twice as many properties have suffered as have benefited, and the tax reductions were, on the average, about half the amount of the increases (on a percentage basis).

If we consider a tax change of less than 10 percent to be insignificant, then we get the following breakdwon:

Tax decrease (by more than 10 percent for 16 percent of properties; .

No change (less than 10 percent for 40 percent of properties;

Tax increase (by more than 10 percent for 4 percent of properties.

The often repeated claim that "one third of the properties has tax decreases, one third stays the same, and one third increases" has, clearly, no validity in this case.

Comparison of Commercial to Residential Properties. This analysis is based on a random sample of 49 commercial properties (this time not necessarily sold in 1974) whose new assessments ranged from $100,000 to $1.7 million. The total tax bill of all these properties decreased from $942,000 to $809,000 (before allowance for increased budget) representing an average tax loss of $2,700 per property. If our sample is representative, then, since there are somewhat more than ten residential properties for each commercial property in Newton, this loss has been made up by an average tax increase of about $250 for each residential property.

It should be noted however, that there was also considerable variation among commercial properties: while some properties' taxes almost doubled, others were halved.

I shall be glad to make the details of these analyses available to interested parties, and to cooperate in further research into the nature of the revaluation. I wish to acknowledge the assistance of Bernice Cohen and Max Berman of Newton in gathering some of the data for this study.

Concert etiquette

To the Editor:

George Napoli has been teaching music in Newton a long time. Last Wednesday night at the Mason-Rice orchestra and chorus concert, he asked two of the musicians to stand and he said to the audience, "I started these girls on flute in the third grade. We've been together four years. I'd like you to hear them play."

He is proud of his orchestras; he loves kids.

With music, a child has the chance to cross the lines drawn for "academic achievement." Ironically, this grouping process can sometimes inhibit learning opportunities instead of enhancing them.

It is so important that music and the other arts be approached in an appealing manner, yet with serious intent.

The Mason-Rice chorus, directed by Anne Umana, is also a meaningful and musical experience for its members because Anne and George have a positive involvement with their students.

Having children in the elementary, junior and senior high school musical organizations, we have become regular Newton concert goers. While we listen with pleasure to the young musicians, we are often forced to hear some adult performances in the audience as well.

There are some classic examples: The singing along with the orchestra routine (in particular, helping the percussion section with a rollicking "boom, boom"); the tripping over people's feet routine (since there appears to be no one on stage but one's own child whose purpose there is to have his picture taken at close range); the letting the siblings who've come along amuse themselves routine (gum popping, seat squeaking, etc., until another parent nearby asks the little noisemaker to be quiet); and the just plain taking routine (nct whispering, not commenting, but talking).

There are some schools in which the principals always welcome8 the audience and creates a comfortable and attentive atmposphere.

I wonder what would happen in other schools if a program opened with a student welcoming the audience, reminding it of the time, effort and enjoyment that has gone into the preparation, and asking if the audience would please keep that in mind during the performance.

Adults don't hesitate for a moment to ask children to pay attention. Maybe it's worth a try the other way around.

The kids who join and stay with these orchestras and choruses are willing to rehearse. Many thrive on the dedication to their musical activities. The effort that their conductors put into performances is beyond measure.

George Napoli wants us to listen. He knows what he's talking about.

Newton Junior College

To the Editor:

I am responding herewith to a prominetly displayed, frontpage article on the fate of Newton Junior College which appeared in the May 15 issue of The Newton Graphic.

It is not my purpose now to quibble with details of the article nor to question the accuracy with which your reporter, Richard Williams, recorded my impressions. In point of fact, I am persuaded that he produced a splendid reportorial account, given the circumstances of our conversation.

In all candor, I am always wary of the hazards of conducting an interview by telephone. The potential for misunderstanding and misinterpretation is considerable. There is also something disarming about the insulation of distance that dissolves inhibitions and causes one to be more open and perhaps less circumspect in what is said. Yet there is a basic honesty about the process which produces true feelings not likely in more guarded moments.

What was authentically revealed in the conversation, and subsequently in the newspaper account, is a profile of a deeply disappointed and completely frustrated human being reacting with entirely human impulse to unwelcome news, all the more exacerbated by the manner in which the news was received.

Mr. Williams himself was the unwitting bearer of bad tidings; he provided me with first notice of the unhappy outcome of long and agonizing months of negotiations with the Commonwealth directed toward a satisfactory solution of the future of Newton Junior College. Obviously I would have preferred official and direct communication from the source of decision before information was made available for public dissenination. Such, unfortunately, was not the case, and was the cause of my sincere, though perhaps indiscreet, expression of pique about dealings with "politicians and bureaucracies."

In the aftermath of shocking news there are several omissions which I should like to address. In my attribution of credit for support of our efforts I failed to mention, perhaps because it was so obvious, the continuing and unflagging support of the Newton School Committee.

I am deeply indebted to members of this body past and present for sympathetic understanding and consummate tolerance in dealing with a problem which to each of them brought the wrenching agony of decision. I do not now nor have I ever questioned their motives, nor do I construe their final action in withdrawing financial support as indicative of diminishing confidence in the worthiness of this excellent educational institution. On the contrary, I surmise that the School Committee is as saddened and disillusioned as we over the outcome of inexorable events.

I would also be callously remiss if I did not in profound sincerity express my feelings of admiration and gratitude for the incalculable contributions made by the entire faculty and staff to the vitality and efficacy of this institution. Always devoted to their mission, they have proved themselves to be particularly worthy in the searing crucible of adversity. Without their patience, understanding, and professional devotion to duty the burden of administration would have been unbearable.

In concluding this response, permit me a brief but important postcript. If it be inevitable fate that Newton Junior College close its doors, as now seems likely, one will have witnessed the enactment of an educational tragedy. It is an exquisite and depressing irony that the oldest (circa 1946) public two-year college in New England may no longer have the opportunity of doing what it does so well . . . serving the unique educational needs of the uncounted numbers who might not otherwise have the chance for pursuing higher learning.

If it transpires that the college has no future, there is solace in a not ignoble past. Its history has been committed to a constructive educational ideal relentlessly pursued with a commendable amount of wisdom, dedication' and compassion. The instances of awakened motivation, of salvaged lives, and of dreams fulfilled are legion and conspicuous. They stand as remarkable and impermeable testimony to what Newton Junior College has truly meant to the Newton community. Its loss will be the loss of all of us.

Fiscal autonomy

To the Editor:

Controversy between the Newton Board of Aldermen and the School Committee is nothing new. It has been an annual occurence. Perhaps a few observations from my 14 years on the Board might be pertinent.

Every year at budget time the School Committee would be invited to sit down with the Finance Committee. Annually our Chairman would ask of their Chairman if anything could be cut from the School budget. Their annual answer was "no". They claimed it a very tight budget that could not allow any reduction. This was, and is, a ridiculous posture' because there is no such thing as a perfect budget. I never saw a budget that did not have some "fat" in it.

We would spend countless hours reviewing departmental budgets, paring a little here and there with an ultimate substantial savings to the City. It was always an acceptable practice to allow a department head to come in for a supplemental appropriation during the year if the needs were reasonable and justified.

In 1959 Finance cut $1100 from out-of-state travel in the School budget. Incensed at our brash move the Committee instituted a taxpayers' suit which of course they won.

The School Committee in 1967 requested approximately $15 million dollars. In 1975 they came up with about a thirty million dollar figure despite a declining school population and in view of the increase in the regional cost of living index of 1.45 percent over eight years it seems unreasonable that they need to spend as much as the total City budget of 1967.

Back in those days the Board had control of spending for school maintenance, painting, boilers, partitions, etc. This was later changed in the charter revision some years ago so that it is now part of the School Budget.

This year on recommendation by Finance the Board cut over $2.8 million from the proposed City budget of $70 million. It would appear that the School Committee had not done its homework very thoroughly.

I am in favor of fiscal autonomy for schools. Our founding fathers wisely feared that politics might enter into decisions affecting the education of children.

However a dual responsibility goes with autonomy. The first, of course, to provide the best education possible, but secondly to temper this aim with what the community can afford. In their "father knows best" attitude a former chairman of the School once told our committee "the Newton taxpayer will spend whatever is necessary to provide the best school system for their children."

There are other aspects of school tht trouble the taxpayer, both parent and non-parent. Many deplore the exhorbitant building program, the lack of discipline, and many questions whether the system is as good as advertised.

If the attitudes of the majority of the School Committee cannot be changed at least the faces can be. There is an election this Fall.

Air Nat'l Guard offers special training for men and women

Training in a wide variety of technical fields is now being offered to men and women between the ages of 17 and 35 by the Air National Guard according to Sergeant Dave Woodford the local Air Guard Recruiter.

According to the Sergeant, the Air Guard uses many Air Force technical schools to train airmen to perform the varied tasks required to support Air Guard missions. While in a training status Air Guardsmen are paid a starting salary of $344.10 per month and all expenses for training are paid by the Air National Guard. Job specialties are chosen prior to enlistment and those who qualify are guaranteed training in the specialty they have chosen.

Most of the technical training schools, which are essential in training airmen for their Air Guard jobs, are also useful in acquiring employment in civilian life. Many graduates are constantly sought by industry and business for closely related civilian positions.

Schooling is available in electronics, medical specialties, auto mechanics, electro-mechanical fields, communications operations and electrical power production.

Complete information on how to apply for Air Guard training programs may be obtained by phoning Sergeant Woodford at his Wellesley office. The phone number is 235-7109. Or, they may write to him at the Recruiting Office, Wellesley Air National Guard Station, Wellesley, MA 02181.

Come let us reason together

"If you're going to love someone"

Everyone wants to be loved. We're not usually loved by someone very long unless we love in return. So it's essential that we learn how to love. Many a husband and wife are living together . . . without loving each other. Perhaps neither understands why they continue together. They both know they do not love each other. A woman doing maid service . . . a man providing the money . . . that's the traditional pattern . . . it's a trade-off . . . but hardly love.

"If you're going to love someone" you'll have feelings of wanting to share your joys and sorrows ... wanting to touch him-her ... thoroughly enjoying sexual relationship with this partner you love. Sex usually is not as good without love.

Love provides magnetic vibrations which result in the "oneness" that the marriage service indicates. Who you love is important to the way you love.

Edward and Ruth loved each other deeply. After nine years of marriage, Ruth died. Edward wanted to remarry. He wanted a woman who had eyes ... hair ... body like Ruth. He measured each new relationship with a woman by Ruth. Of course ... he waa disappointed because no two people are alike. After a couple of years of fruitless search for another Ruth, Edward drew up for himself a criteria for loving again.

First ... "if I'm going to love someone I must be able to five and receive love. Some people can only give love ... Others can only receive love. He did not want to be linked to another person who was only a taker ... not to one who could only give. The former is selfish ... spoiled ... insensitive to the desires and feelings of the partner. The latter feels unworthy and therefore depreciates herself-himself to the level of a servant. Edward concluded that "If I'm going to love someone" I must be able to give and receive love ... and so must she.

Secondly ... "I'm going to love someone" I must be willing to take time with that person ... to have some concentration upon the relationship ... not merely take him-her for granted.

Some men are too busy to be married. They really haven't time for a wife ... their concentration is so much upon business ... or golf ... that a wife is excess baggage in their lives. Fewer ... but some women are so busy with children ... or job ... that they really haven't time for a husband. It takes time "IF YOU'RE GOING TO LOVE SOMEONE."

Thirdly ... "if I'm going to love someone" ... the relationship must provide for freedom within the relationship. Love cannot be bound. Lovers are not prisoners to each other. Lovers must feel comfortable with each other. In love it is not freedom from the lover ... but freedom to be with and please the lover.

Edward studied out carefully his criteria ... now he's trying to find someone with whom he can feel free and comfortable.

Let's wish him luck ... because that's about what every eligible lover wants.

LOUISE M. MILLER, R.N., of Auburndale was honored recently by the Dept. of the Army for work her work at the Army Materials and Mechanics Research Center in Watertown. She was commended "for outstanding performance of duty as occupational health nurse in Watertown during the past year."

Death by fire annually claims close to 12,000 victims

There is only one way in which death by fire can compete for national attention as did once-feared polio.

Statistic.

Death by fire is a national epidemic that annually claims close to 12,000 victims. Yet in 1954, the peak year of the polio epidemic, there were 3,145 deaths. Polio alarmed the nation because it struck so hard at children. Yet so does fire.

Children — and persons over 68 — are the chief victims of fire and most of these die in dwelling fires which could be prevented if every American would only "Learn Not To Burn!"

So many home-fire accidents are caused by:

—Children playing with matches.

—Children wearing loose-fitting flammable sleepwear while they are near stoves.

—Children falling against a heater.

That cupboard located directly over the stove is the most dangerous cupboard in your home. Nothing should be stored in it except items which are rarely used. A child — or a parent — trying to get something from the "danger cupboard" while the stove is turned on or even hot, could become a flaming torch.

Matches and cigarette lighters should be kept where youngsters cannot find them. You should teach your children that fire is danger, that air feeds a fire, that gasoline fumes explode near flame and heat.

All family members should know that if clothing catches fire the quickets way to kill the flames is to roll. Panic causes people to run, giving the flames all the air needed to seriously burn the victim.

Pan fires can become house fires unless they are extinguished quickly. Do this by placing a cover over the pan. The fire will die immediately for lack of air. An oven fire is controlled by turning off the source of heat and closing the oven door.

But if in doubt, call your fire department.

Too many persons die trying to fight a small fire that becomes a big fire in seconds. Learn Not To Burn!

Predict food/ population crisis

With its population expected to double, from four billion to eight billion, in the next 35 years, the world is headed for a food-and-population crisis in which millions of people will die of starvation.

That is the grim prediction of a veteran foreign correspondent and environmental writer in the current (May-June) issue of "International Wildlife" magazine, published by the nation's largest conservation organization, the National Wildlife Federation.

In "the toughest story I've ever had to write." John Strohm, who has written on food and agriculture from 85 contries, reports that, "despite exciting new agricultural breakthroughs, the feeders are falling behind the breeders. Man has not yet learned to produce as hast as he can reproduce. Yet reluctant government leaders continue to drage their feet on birth control."

Because the earth's population jumped from two to four billion in the past 45 years, a "doubling" that once took thousands of years, the food situation is already far more desperate than most people realize, says Strohm in his article on "the No. 1 Question facing mankind today."

"Millions of children go to bed hungry each night, and many of them, even if they live, will have their brains permanently stunted because of lack of protein," Strohm says after describing a "routine morning of corpse collection" in famine-ravaged Bengal.

While this is happening, "the poor are getting poorer. The people of Africa, Asia, and Latin America, least able to cope with widespread malnutrition, are having the most babies, and the unchecked birthrate is accelerating." And, Strohm reports, "to make matters worse, a worldwide shortage of chemical fertilizers is depressing food production."

Looking ahead to the "nightmare of supplying eight billion people" by the year 2010, Strohm sees tensions between the "have" and "have-not" nations becoming increasingly dangerous, with the possibility of a starving underdeveloped country using "the threat of atomic warfare to blackmail nations for food."

As evidence the "world's priorities are sadly out of whack," Strohm, the editor of "International Wildlife," cites India, which spent $2 billion to develop an atomic bomb, "100 times more than it spends a year on family planning; 200 times more than it spends annually on agricultural research."

RICHARD V. McCANN, deputy regional commissioner of education, has received the Superior0Service Medal, the highest award given by the U.S., Office of Education. McCann, of 9 Billings Pk., Newton, got the award for his work on behalf of the American Indians.

According to Robert A. Danziger, President of Northland Investment Corporation of Newtonville' sponsor of the seminar, the past several months have shown a favorable trend in the investment climate in Northern New England. Northland has organized this symposium in order to update investors on the changes that have taken place recently, the impact of certain developer foreclosures, and the present opportunities for mortgage financing of undeveloped property.

Reservations for the seminar may be made by calling Northland at (617) 965-3100.

Scout news

By JOHN CARROLL

Webelos! Webelos to be! The first annual Webelos Camporee ever to be held by Norumbega Council will take place at Nobscot Reservation on the weekend of May 31-June 1.

Over the past two years, the Council has recognized the need for more involvement for the Webelos Scout. The 1974 Spring Camporee was the first step in attaining this goal. Never before had Cub Scouts been allowed an overnight camping session.

The reaction and attendance at that Spring Camporee served as a spring board and the Webelos were on their way.

The Webelos Activity Committee, chaired by Tony Gentile, was formed and soon, the Webelos found themselves very, very busy young boys. Now, the ultimate participation, a Camporee devoted entirely and exclusively to the Webelos Scouts.

All present Webelos and those Cubs who will become Webelos in September are invited to attend with their families, join in the fun and games, take part in the Webelos Olympics, see demonstrations and skits, sit in on our own campfire at which time the highlight of the weekend, a spectacular "Arrow Of Light Ceremony" will take place.

This will be an overnight Camporee and it is hoped that all attending will be in tents.

For more information, please contact Tony Gentile at 527-0973 or get in touch with your own Webelos leader or Cub Master.

Tantamous Course number 29 was completed on the weekend of May 10-11 at Nobscot Reservation.

The seven members of the (chicken) Patrol who will be presented with their red neckerchieves May 20 by Scout Master Jim West are: Donald Bibbo - Troop 331, Jack Mullen - Pack 348, Frank McCarthy - Pack 348, John Carroll - Troop 315, Phil Richmond - Pack 316, Bob Cheney - Troop 331 and Gerry Linette - Pack 331.

We of the Chicken Patrol would like to extend our profound thanks to the following members of the Leadership Development Committee who helped us over our rough edges, fed us a wealth of knowledge and treated us with a respect that today is quite unusual: Jim West, a very articulate and knowledgable woodsman, Art Alexander, who answered all our dumb questions happily, Bob Cotell, who pleased himself, as well as us, by lighting a Swedish chimeny fire, Chuck Hurwitz, a veritable fountain of Scouting know-how and Fred Berman, without his lessons on compass andmap reading, we might still be out there.

I would highly recommend the Tantamous training for anyone seriously interested in Scouting, be he beginner or veteran. One little item learned is one big item to be passed on to a Scout without that knowledge.

TRAIL TIP—Don Bibbo of Troop 331, Our Lady's Church in Newton says - soaping the exterior surface of camp cooking pots prior to cooking on an open fire makes clean up much easier after meals.

Theodore Gross-

Guzzi as secretary of state, Dick McGrath as state representative and Mike Dukakis as governor, as well as the reelection of other candidates. Also, he was the Newton coordinator for Ted Harrington for Attorney General, who even thought he won in Newton, was unsuccessful statewide.

When commenting on his views of the issues, Gross stated, "One of the ways that many people would be able to save xsome money would be to have the water rates put on one scale where everybody pays for water on the same rate, not the two-tier system where the industrial user has a cheaper rate than the home user, which I believe is highly discriminatory. Some communities have gone to the straight-rate system on electricity, which have saved the consumer money. Why not do this with the water rate?"

Concerning other issues, Gross had the following statement:

"Open Spaces: As alderman, I would vote a municipal open-space land-management program. Large parcels that should be preserved for ecological, recreational or open-space purposes should be rezoned as such. This would allow these parcels to be permanently removed from the development market and compensate the owner with a read-justed tax valuation.

"Solid Waste: The disposal of solid waste is one of our most pressing problems. Our present disposal district of just Newton and Waltham is inadequate. I believe we have to expand to a larger district including Needham, Weston, Wellesley, Watertown and Brookline to have an economical process of recycling. On all phases of the process of building the plant or recycle, there should be competitive bidding. According to a study done for the state, this size district would be able to sustain itself economically. If the communities will not do it by themselves, then the state legislators will do it for them.

"Transportation: A convenient and easily accessible public transportation system is fessential in our large metropolitan suburb. I have and will continue to urge the MBTA to increase the frequency of bus trips between Oak Hill, Newton Centre and Newton Corner, also the frequency of the bus through Newton Highlands and other areas. Present scheduling practices should be revised to allow commuters to make connections with other lines so that there is not a 30-minute wait. Also, I would ask for a dime-time program in Newton to encourage commuter shopping in the business centers of our city. Use of public transportation must be encouraged because federal pollution standards will become restricted. Therefore, if the MBTA will not increase coverage then the city should attempt to supplement this service.

"Street Lighting: The sodium-vapor bulb, which uses only half the amount of energy as our present lights, should be installed in our business area and on the major arteries. Funds to install these lights might be obtained from the Safe Streets Act. That's if it's not too late and there's any funds left.

"Recreation: Newton should expand the use of its outdoor recreation facilities. Sodium-vapor bulbs should be used to light as many playgrounds as possible. This would allow the youth of our city recreational usage rather than congregating in front of stores in the business areas. It would also help with better usage of our recreational land."

In conclusion, Gross added, "These are just some of the issues we will have to work on. I will be walking through the ward to listen and meet with the people of the district. Any person who wishes to talk to me may call 244-2899."

Revaluation-

Harrington's approach would mean Newton's revaluation would not take effect until all remaining communities in Massachusetts had completed their revaluations.

Joseph Rizzo, a member of the newly formed Save our Homes group, described the revaluation as "an 11th hour tax trauma."

He said Newton faces this "trauma" today because "the assessors did not keep assessments up to date and now increases have hit the taxpayers all at once."

"It is unfair to expect people to absorb the increases just because the assessors haven't done their jobs," Rizzo said.

Rev. Herbert Davis of the Newton Corner Neighborhood Association described the revaluation as "cruel" and "inhuman."

"Revaluation has reduced the incomes of some people by 50 percent," he said. "These are people who have lived here all their lives."

"We hope you feel the pain and anguish here tonight," he told the aldermen.

Josephine Bishop of Newton Corner continued Davis' theme. She spoke about renters in that area, pointing out that any tax increase is passed on to tenants "and they can't aford 30 to 60 percent increases."

"It will only be a matter of time before the buildings will be vacant," she said. "Newton will become a one-class city; a city only the wealthy can live in."

The crowd at the hearing gradually began to thin out at about 9 p.m. By 10 p.m., it was reduced to a group that could almost be seated in the chamber.

However, about 150 people had remained outside on the front steps. They began chanting under the mayor's window, demanding he come out and talk to them.

Mayor Theodore D. Mann did confront the group on the City Hall steps and answered some of their angry inquiries. At the request of an alderman, he went back inside to address the hearing.

The crowd came with him.

He began by telling the audience that he had remained in his office all evening listening to the progress of the hearing.

He reminded them that the revaluation was done under a court order.

"Several weeks ago, I asked the assessors to evaluate Cole-Layer-Trumble's performance and give their evaluation to the city solicitor. The assessors have said that they need more time.

"The city solicitor went to court Monday to file a motion for an extension of the court order. The assessors contend that it is impossible to make an in-depth review prior to the July 1 deadline."

The mayor "on a personal note" went on to say that he deplored activities on the part of anyone in Newton that worried or upset citizens.

"You've come here tonight and presented your case," . "You are helping the city solicitor. he told the audience

"Newton will continue to press to achieve equity for all its citizens," the mayor concluded.

Volunteers given awards for 425 years' service to hospital

Seventy-three men and women were officially honored by Newton-Wellesley Hospital for contributing 425 years' worth of service to the hospital.

The awards ceremony, held during National Hospital Week, recognized volunteers who work in various hospital departments and those who donate time to Aid Association projects such as the Coffee and Gift Shops and puppet program.

The hospital also honored volunteers who received 100-hour pins. There were 39 people who had each given 100 hours.

In an introduction to the awards ceremony, Marguerite Roggeveen, hospital director of volunteers noted that in-hospital volunteers and Aid Association members had donated 48,470 hours to Newton-Wellesley.

The volunteers perform a wide variety of duties in the hospital, some working directly with patients and others giving time to support services in the library or dietary office.

When volunteers work on patient floors' they do errands for the patients, wheel them out to their cars when discharged, take care of flowers, deliver mail and even feed patients unable to do it themselves.

They also work in the reception area of the admitting office, take patients for tests and to their rooms and answer questions at the information desk. Other groups of volunteers sell newspapers from the newspaper cart on the floors, participate in the sewing group, work as administrative aides in visitor control and register out-patients for cancer screenings.

Those volunteers who are members of the Aid Association contribut their time to help customers in the Gift Shop, serving food in the Coffee Shop and making puppets for the pediatrics floor. They also sponsor the newborn photo service and are responsible for taking the gift cart around to the patients.

Of the volunteers honored at the ceremony, one local resident was recognized for 30 years of service, another for 25 years, and two for 20 years of service. The remainder were recognized for 15, 10, 5 and 3 years.

The Budweiser Champion Clydesdale horses ar coming to Newton on Wednesday, May 28, 1975. Announcement of the appearance was made by Vincent DeMattia, who made it possible for the Clydesdales to visit our city. So that everyone alike may get the chance to see these beautiful animals, they have been scheduled to appear at Newton Centre Playground from 3 to 7 p.m. in cooperation with the Newton Recreation Department. However, further details will be forthcoming.

Newton is one of the stops the Clydesdales will make this year as they travel the country. The Clydesdales are probably the most widely traveled horses in the United States, covering some 40,000 miles a year as they appear in parades, state fairs, horse shows, and other special events.

Although Clydesdales are of pure Scotch ancestry, they are now raised in the United States and Canada as well as Scotland. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. established its own breeding operation severa years ago to assure the continuity of the company's famous eight-horse hitch with Clydesdales that meet regid standards for proper color, size, weight and conformation

Allergic salutes and shiners

According to the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association, the allergic salute and rabbit nose sound a lot like Alice in Wonderland. But they can be clues to detecting allergies in children.

If a child has a habit of wiping his or her nose with an upward sweep of the finger, it may be a symptom of an allergy, according to pediatric allergist Dr. Irving Bailit, of Needham. The "allergic salute" is different from the way most kids wipe their noses, with a horizontal motion of the finger or hand. "Rabbit nose," constant wiggling and wrinkling of the nose, is another suspicious sign.

There are other give-aways, says Dr. Bailit, who is currently working with the Lung Association on their Conditioning Program for Asthmatic Children. Paleness and "allergic shiners," dark circles under the eyes, can mean allergic distress, too.

Often a child who has an allergy as an infant will have eczema as a toddler and eventually asthma, an abnormal reaction of the air passages of the lungs to specific substances. This "allergic march" could be stopped if parents recognized the first signs of allergy and sought treatment from the child's physician.

Frequent croup can be another indication of allergy, says Dr. Bailit. The symptoms of croup are a harsh, barking cry which sounds something like a puppy's cry. There's funny high-pitched sound when the baby inhales. More trouble-signs in an allergic child are itchy or watery eyes as well as frequent clearing of the throat because of postnasal drip.

It's important to check out suspicious signs with a physician and begin treatment early in the agame. To find out more about breathing problems of all kinds, contact your Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association, the "Christmas Seal" people. It's a Matter of Life and Breath.

Plant and garden sale

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society's annual plant sale and garden party will be held on Thursday, May 29 from 3 to 6 p.m. at the Lyman Estate, The Vale, in Waltham.

A choice selection of indoor and outdoor plants will be sold to benefit the Kathryn S. Taylor Greenhouse, maintained by the society as a teaching site.

Visitors will also be able to tour the Ancient Greenhouse, the oldest greenhouse in America, which has been restored for the occasion, and the historic 180-year-old Lyman Estate.

A special feature of the garden party will be the presentation of the society's 1974 garden awards at 5 p.m., honoring outstanding gardens and gardeners in the state.

Advance registration tickets are available at the Mass. Horticultural Society, 300 Mass. avenue, Boston.

The Vale is located on Lyman street, Waltham, off Route 20 and maps are available from the Horticultural Society.

Mrs. Henry S. Stone, Dover, is chairman of the event, and Miss Eleanor Thatcher is Horticulturist with the greenhouse.

Nature's ways

By WAYNE HANLEY
Mass. Audubon Society

The great antshrike may have been introduced to science by a bird collector who fired a shotgun at rustling jungle leaves and then searched the jungle floor to learn what he had hit.

The event could have happened in Chiapas, deep in southern Mexico. For the great antshrike, although seldom seen, lives a secluded existence in Chiapas, shielded from curious eyes by many layers of jungle leaves. The bird is so secretive, in fact, that many old hands at Mexican birding never have seen it.

Electronic birding, however, has begun breaking these sight barriers. For instance, even I as a casual visitor, viewed the great antshrike on a recent tour of Mexican back country. Victor Emanuel, the Houston bird guide, made it possible. Emanuel carries a tape recorder which is sophisticated as well as portable. He played the territorial song of the great antshrike to lure the reluctant bird from protective cover.

The first time the antshrike emerged from jungle vegetation, the oriole-sized bird flew across an open path and was visible about one second. It had responded after about five minutes of tape-reproduced song. A full view of the perched bird, if one can call hopping from branch to branch "perching," required another 30 minutes of recorded song.

A tape recorder is particularly valuable in a jungle since the scene consists of green walls from which bird songs and sounds emanate. Jungle birds are excessively shy. But even those which are comparatively brazen are shielded by many layers of leaves. With a hatful of cassettes containing bird songs and a high-fidelity reproducer, one may reduce to predictability what has been a most haphazard chance - almost accidental - of seeing an elusive species.

Since the recorder can record as well as play back bird songs, one may use a bird's own song to entice it into the open. Along a brushy stream, a simple song which was suspected of being an owl's call was recorded. With repeated playbacks, the song brought out of hiding a striped cuckoo. Why the bird was reluctant to appear became evident immediately. As it flew across an open space, a boat-billed flycatcher charged it, seized its tail and almost pulled it down out of the air. The striped cuckoo, it seems, is one of the parasitic cuckoos which lays eggs in other birds' nests. Its secretiveness is a form of selfdefense.

If one can master a few dozen hummingbirds, flycatchers, parrots and doves, one should do surprisingly well at separating the birds of southern Mexico. Those are the most obvious species encountered in open areas. Rare birds in southern Mexico are the house sparrow, just now spreading into the region, and the starling, which may not have immigrated that far yet.

The most improbable Mexican bird must be the keel-billed toucan. Indeed, this large toucan must be one of the more improbable birds in the world. Its colors must be seen to be appreciated. But how it manages to balance a huge banana-shaped bill that seems as large as its body - well, it's unbelievable.

Make Your Meat Purchase Count

Prepare meats according to the quality of the cut. Low-priced cuts are less tender than the higher-priced cuts and require long, slow cooking times

Avoid waste. Meats cooked slowly at low temperatures have less waste as pan juices. Save trimmings and bones from meats to make stock for soups, gravies, casseroles.

Make use of leftovers. Store them in clear containers at the front of the refrigerator so that you remember to use them PROMPTLY.

Back-yard frontier

By POLLY BRADLEY
Mass. Audubon Society

My friend Norma had the engine drop out of her car the other day — the bottom of the car rusted out and Boom, there was the engine sitting on the road.

The result is that she's been doing a lot of walking. She lives in Nahant, and yesterday she walked to the hairdresser's in Lynn, a hike of a mile and a half across the long, sandy causeway which connects the island of Nahant with the mainland. The causeway is a public beach maintained by the Metropolitan District Commission (MDC).

"That's the most beautiful walk in the world," she told me. "But when you go slowly, walking, you see every singlz bottle and can. The beach is covered with them. It's a shame. If only there were a law banning nonreturnable bottles and beverage cans, that beach wouldn't be such a mess."

"The Vermont and Oregon laws that require a deposit on beverage cans and bottles have certainly cut down on litter in those states," I said. "Senator Mark Hatfield of Oregon is proposing a nationwide law, but the politicos say it doesn't have much of a chance."

"That's too bad, because we'd see a big difference right here on the beach in Nahant," Norma said. "But I hope the state legislatures will pass the laws being considered in Massachusetts and Maine this year. When I was a kid in Revere, we used to get our spending money picking up bottles on the beach and returning them for the two cents.

"With the economy the way it is, you'd find plenty of people who'd be glad to get a little money that way. Instead of having people walkyng along the beach with metal detectors looking for coins, you'd have them walking along with bags picking up"bottlesso they could get a deposit."

The litter on Nahant beach isn't any worse than on any other popular beach or park. It isn't that the area isn't properly taken care of. I got a ride along the beach maintenance road in an MDC truck one day this spring with Mike Bulger, who supervises the crew that maintains the beach. Three men were out picking up litter that morning. Behind them, the beach was beautiful. In front of them, there were literally thousands of cans and bottles. "You can pick up every bottle on this beach on Friday morning, and it will look like this again on Monday morning," Bulger told me.

According to the Metropolitan District Commission, about four million people use Nahant beach every year. No matter how much you educate people, with four million you're going to have a certain percentage who toss bottles around with no concern for the beauty of the beach or the happiness of other people — and a small percentage of four million can quickly wreck a beach of incredible beauty.

Pleas for appreciation of beauty just don't work with some people. However, if these litterbugs were touched in their pocketbooks (the closest things they have to their hearts), there might be some results on the litter scene. Banning nonreturnable bottles and cans would be a highly effective way of reaching them, and those who were still unreachable would be paying a few cents a bottle to whomever came along to pick up after them, instead of the taxpayer picking up the bill.

Sale of student works

The Massachusetts College of Art is sponsoring a sale of student work on the grounds, at the corner of Longwood and Brookline avenues in Boston, during the last week in May.

The art presented is a full year's work of the student-artists in glass, weaving, jewelry, silver and ceramics and will include everything from sculpture to hanging pots.

The sale will be from Monday through Wednesday, May 19, 20 and 21. The hours are 12 noon to 8 p.m. Monday and 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday.

The Massachusetts College of Art, founded in 1873, was the first public institution dedicated exclusively to the visual arts. It is presently the only public supported professional art school in the nation.

Exhibit drawings of science book illustrators at Museum of Science

The drawings of two science book illustrators, now on exhibition at Boston's Museum of Science, provide a view of nature's intricacy not often seen with the naked eye.

Work in natural history by Sarah Landry and in anatomy by Gale Cooper will be on view through August 17 in the Washburn Gallery. Both artists have illustrated textbooks being published this year by the Harvard University Press, co-sponsor of the exhibition.

Although their techniques and subjects differ, both illustrators attain an accuracy and breadth of information not possible even though such a medium as photography. Their drawings encompass material that the camera could not convey in a single photograph; yet their approach is realistic, based on direct observation or study of preserved specimens and models.

The pen and ink drawings by Sarah Landry of Cambridge portray the social interaction and charistic activities of a number of wild animals, including baboons, lions and wildebeests, all seen in their natural habitats.

The minute detail of her work is accomplished by drawing under a magnifying glass with a fine-point Rapidograph pen.

In one drawing, every strand in a tangle of grass on which wild bees have made their honeycomb appears to be included. In another, the stubby growths on a flat African plain are as carefully delineated as the troupe of chimpanzees that forms the subject. Her stippling, or dotting method, is so tightly employed that even when the drawings are enlarged as a few have been in this exhibition, they lose none of their effectiveness.

This year Landry taught in a scientific illustration at Harvard University's Museum of Comparative Zoology. She illustrated "Sociobiology" by Edward O. Wilson, to be published June 25. Her drawings appeared in "The Insect Societies" by the same author and in "Scientific American.

Anatomy and physiology are the interests of Dr. Cooper, currently a psychiatry resident at the Massachusetts Health Center. Her newest book with Allen Schiller, M.D., will be "Anatomy of the Guinea Pig." Considered to be the most complete study to date of rodent anatomy, it will be issued this summer.

Drawings for this book constitute Dr. Cooper's exhibition. Several are grouped together to show how she has depicted successively deeper layers of a single part of the body: connective tissue, inner and outer muscles, and bone. The taut relationships are strengthened by the shades of black she used, rendered by brushing carbon particles of varying densidies on a special paper and adding detail aith ink, pencil, and scratching technique.

In "Anatomu of the Guinea Pig" as in "A Laboratory Study of the Frog," for which she prepared both text and illustrations, and in her contributions to a number of other books, Dr. Cooper combines in one picture information from a variety of specimens of the same animal.

Bicentennial Series E savings bond on sale

WASHINGTON—Secretary of the Treasury William E. Simon has announced that a special Bicentennial-design Series E Savings Bond went on sale beginning May 1, the 34th birthday of the E Bond. The design will be used through 1976. Terms and conditions applying to the Series E Savings Bond remain unchanged; interest is six percent, compounded semiannually, when held to a five-year maturity.

The Bicentennial-design Series E Bond differs from the regular E Bond in the following respects—the tint is in blue ink, rather than green, and all of the face printing in black ink is changed to blue; the "Minute Man" replaces the eagle in the center tint design; the presidential portraits are replaced by commemorative vignettes; the Bicentennial logo is printed in red immediately to the left of the legent in the lower part of the Bond; "1776 Bicentennial 1976" is printed in red immediately above the vignette. The design changes have no effect whatever on interest rate, maturity and other terms and conditions of sale.

Speaking of the change, Secretary Simon said—"The Bicentennial-design Series E Savings Bond plays a leading role in the Treasury's Bicentennial effort. We feel that this Bond, combining all the familiar advantages of the popular E Bond with a patriotic motif, will become a perfect souvenir of our nation's 200th birthday for all Americans. Further, they will find it to be a souvenir with a very big difference—that is, the longer it is held, the more it will grow in value."

Mrs. Francine I. Neff, national director, U.S. Savings Bonds Division, and treasurer of the United States, pointed out that the new Bonds are easily obtained. "These Bonds, like the original E Bond, will be on sale at thousands of banks and other issuing agencies throughout the country. And, of course, they will also be available through the Payroll Savings and Bond-A-Month Plans.

Each denomination carries attraftive art that harks back to the American Revolutionary period. Examples include 'Independence Hall' on the $25, 'Liberty Bell' on the $50, 'Spirit of '76' on the $75, and 'Valley Forge' on the $100. We hope all Americans join us in making the Bicentennial year a 'Buy-Bonds' year as well."

Indian summer camp at PlimothPlantation

The Indian Summer Camp exhibit of the Native American Studies Program at Plimouth Plantation opened for the season on Thursday, May 15 and will remain open daily through October 15.

In the 17th century, coastal Algonquian people moved to seaside sites each May to farm and fish, returning inland to more protected areas in October.

The Camp, re-created full scale, is typical of that summer period and is directed and staffed by native Americans who demonstrate and explain to visitors many aspects of their early culture. A supplementary slide program in a nearby building presents the processes of Algonquian crafts such as weaving bullrush mats, constructing a wigwam and building a fish weir.

Contemplates Change

Q. I was born on July 25, 1943 at 5:33 a.m. in Boston. My husband was born on December 13, 1942 at 6:00 a.m. also in Boston. Could you tell me what the future holds for us both? My husband is contemplating a change, would it be a wise move at this time? J.A.

A. There are indications your husband may have felt an inner urge to make a change since late in 1973. If so and if he does not, the feeling for change is apt to persist for some time to come. Chances of success depend considerably upon how thoroughly practical details and financial matters are worked out in advance.

Your husband's chart indicates all through life he is apt to have ideas and ideals that may not always find expression in practical ways. He appears to have been born with a keen insight into generalities. Intellectually he grasps the broad view but may be inclined to overlook details.

If 6 a.m. is very close to being the exact time of his birth he has considerable magnetism that makes quite an impression on others. He can make himself felt wherever he happens to be.

His feelings and instincts are strong as are his desires and driving power. He is in need of an should benefit from ample sleep to give his nerves a chance to recuperate. He is a self starter and needs no stimulants. Such may have an adverse effect on his ability to function as well as irritate him, cause quarrels and affect his moods.

Again based on a 6 a.m. birth, he is inclined to try to control people and conditions in his environment and resent any effort on the part of others to dominate him. He can be quite determined, rather impatient to achieve his ambitions and self-reliant. His desire nature is strong and he is not likely to forget being refused anything he wants.

To improve first class mail service

First class mail would receive service equal to or better than that currently provided for airmail, under a program announced by the U.S. Postal Service.

The Postal Service has asked the Postal Rate Commission for an advisory opinion on the plan to upgrade first class mail service. Implementation is scheduled for August 1, 1975. It will require a short period of time after that date to effect the changeover and complete the shakedown of the adjusted mail processing systems.

"We have now reached the point where we have the capability of providing service to first class mail which, on a national basis, will regularly squal or exceed airmail service performance," the Postal Service said.

Through changes in operating and dispatch procedures, most first class mail presently programmed for second and third day service would receive overnight and second day service under the first class improvement plan.

The Postal Service said the first class improvement plan was a result of three principal developments:

1) Airmail volume has steadily decreased over the past 20 years, while first class volume has risen. During the period 1969-74, airmail volume declined 19.4 per cent while first class increased 11.1 per cent.

As a result, first class mail is often sent in more direct dispatches than airmail, because the greater volume makes it feasible.

2) Before the service began airlifting first class mail on a regular basis, airmail had a definite transportation advantage over first class, although airmail received preferential handling at the post office. But airmail and first class now have the same transportation priority. First class mail traveling significant distances now travels by air.

3) The service is now in a position where adjustments in collection services and more extensive use of letter sorting machines can lead to an improved first class service providing, overall, the same speed of delivery as airmail.

The upgraded first class service will be available for letters, small parcels (up to 12 ounces) and flats (mail in large envelopes). Priority mail, an air parcel service, and international airmail will continue in their present form.

When the upgraded service takes effect, airmail stamps will still be sold, for use on priority and international airmail. They may also be used, for example, in combinations with other stamps as postage for first class mail.

Airmail collection boxes and post office airmail lobby drops will be discontinued when the upgraded service takes effect.

Prize showing of irises at the Walpole Mall

WALPOLE, Mass.—The first annual New England Median Iris Show will be held at The Walpole Mall on Saturday, May 24 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Shoppers at The Walpole Mall will have an opportunity to see some of the latest and best of the smaller irises at this Early Iris Show. The development of the smaller irises, according to Barbara Whitehouse, editor of the society's publication, The Medianite, began only about 25 years ago when the largest (tall-bearded) irises were crossed with the tiniest (Iris pumila) producing a new class of irises named Standard Dwarfs. These new little irises grow only 10 to 15 inches tall and come in all colors of the raibow. They were bred back to the tall-bearded irises, producing still another new class, The Intermediates, which are 15 to 18 inches tall. Now it is possible to have bearded irises in bloom from late April through June.

Because these two classes of irises are so new, many people are not aware of their existence. The show is being staged to acquaint the general public with the advances which have been made in irises during the past two decades.

The show will be conducted under American Iris Society rules and will be judged by accredited judges of the society. Each section will be judged deparately. The Queen of the Show, the best iris specimen entered, will be selected from the winners in each section.

The artistic classes are open to any flower arranger who wishes to enter. Flowers for arranging will be available to those who do not grow any irises. The theme of the Show is New England Bicentennial, and four artistic classes are given: "Down to the Sea in Ships," "The Rockbound Coast," "The Shot Heard 'Round the World," and "Two If by Sea." In addition, the committee invites young people under 18 to enter the fifth class, "The Declaration of Independence," where their independent imaginations can soar.

A special horticultural class for amateurs will be a feature of this show. People who are not members of the American Iris Society are invited to enter irises from their gardens. First prize is a membership in the American Iris Society and Median Iris Society. 2nd and 3rd prizes will be awards of recently introduced median irises.

Of special interest is the seedling class where growers and breeders may enter a specimen stalk of an uninroduced iris. The show judges will select the one which is, in their opinion the outstanding stalk, and all visiting judges are asked to vote on any irises in this class whcch they believe are worthy of introduction.

It is hoped that there will also be some educational exhibits entered as well as entries in both horticultural and artistic classes by young people under 8.

Hosts and hostesses will be available throughout the day to answer questions.

The Walpole Mall is located at Route 1 and Coney street in Walpole.

Each students was asked to prepare a or poster about some environmental poem topp topic entries from each class. More than 7,000 entries were reviewed by a citizens' judging panel.

Clinic offers tubal ligation

Preterm, a licensed nonprofit outpatient clinic for reproductive health care, recently opened its laparoscopic sterlization service. Women who wish tubal ligation and who meet clinic guidelines may have the procedure performed under local anesthesia. Tow visits to the clinic are required. The first visit includes a physical examination, lab work and counseling. The procedure is performed during the second visit, with an average stay of two hours.

This is a new and exciting concept in health care delivery which enables a woman to elect a method of permanent birth control without an expensive hospital stay and without leaving her family overnight.

OUR POLICY
PAINT IS NOT A SIDELINE

We were here 25 years ago and we plan to be here 25 years from now. To do that we have to give honest values and good service. We have side-lines but paint and wallpaper and art supplies are not among them. These are our mainlines and we are knowledgeable in them. Do you have a problem with your house paint? Come on in and talk about it. We can even have a factory trained expert come out to your house, look it over and recommend a procedure to solve the problem. No obligation on your part. We admit that he will probably recommend some product that we carry but why not? We're paint experts and have the widest selection around. If we don't have the right product who does?

PITTSBURG'S REZ LATEX STAIN

Pittsburgh's Rez Solid or Semi-transparent latex stains are easy to apply latex finishes for all exterior wood except brushed or abraded plywood. They exhibit excellent color retention while retaining and accentuating the natural beauty and texture of the wood. Interior wood surfaces may also be stained with Pittsburgh's Rez Latex Stains.

No paint job will last if water can get in behind the siding. We recommend that all houses be caulked before painting. It doesn't take long and it may well save repainting in a few years. You'll also save energy if there are fewer cracks for cold air to get in in the winter. Anyway you look at this you save if you caulk at this low, low, price.

Council for Children urges people to protest welfare cuts

Newton-Wellesley-Weston Council for Children urges all people concerned about the human impact of Governor Dukakis' proposed welfare cuts to attend a Human Service Day Rally sponsored by the Alliance for Economic Justice May 28 28, 1975, 12 noon at the State House.

Other steps concerned people should take, the council says, are to attend public hearings on the administrative changes involved in welfare cuts May 30, 1975, at 10 a.m. at Gardner Auditorium in the State House, and write letters to local legislators and Gov. Michael Dukakis; the executive secretary, David Liederman, State House, Boston 02133; Secretary of Human Services Lucy Benson, 100 Cambridge St., Boston 02202; and Commissioner of Public Welfare Jerald Stevens, 600 Washington St., Boston.

The proposed cuts affect preventive services such as counseling, early intervention in crises, homemaker services, and day care for working families on a sliding scale. These programs enable people in economic or emotional distress to keep functioning and providing for their own needs. When such a service is eliminated the likelihood of family disruption is increased. Other potential increases are in the need for welfare, foster or institutional care for children, malfunctioning or disruptive school behavior, vandalism, demands for mental health facilities, drug and alcohol abuse, criminal behavior, court appearances and ultimately the violence of desperation - suicide and homocide.

The proposed cuts in general relief will:

1. Deny welfare to employable persons under 40 (who are unlikely to find employment to current unemployment levels).
2. Prohibit general relief during the 30-day waiting period to determine eligibility for the unemployed father's program under AFDC (Assistance to Families with Dependent Children).
3. Deny General Relief to those awiating unemployment compensation (generally taking six weeks).

cut emergency assistance for fuel, rent, utilities, furniture replacement (fires strike the poor in substandard housing the most).

5. Limit medical and dental services to emergency needs for general-relief recipients.

Underground Railroad passed through Newton

Newton's role in the Underground Railroad will be featured in an exhibit in the glass cases at the Newton Free Library, 414 Centre St., Newton Corner, now through June 3.

Newton's role in the activities of the Underground Railroad centered around the Jackson Homestead, which was a station for the Negro slaves escaping on the route to freedom in Canada.

On view will be an exhibit by Angier school students who have interpreted "The Secret Place," at the Jackson Homestead' as well as maps depicting the course of the "Railroad" over the whole country, and a booklet, "Escape to Freedom."

The Underground Railroad was neither underground nor a railroad. It was a very loosely organized group of people, abolutionists, who secretly carried black slaves from one "station" to the next until Canada was reached.

Library hours are Monday through Friday, 9-9; Saturdays, 9-5:30 and Sundays, 1-4. The Library will be closed on Monday, May 26, Memorial Day.

Newton men to advise governor on crime

Governor Michael Dukakis has reappointed three Newton men to the Committee on Criminal Justice (CCJ).

Police Chief Willian F. Quinn of West Newton, MIT Professor of Urban Studies Hubert E. Jones of Newton Centre, and Court Administrator Joseph S. Romanow of Newton Highlands.

The CCJ, charged with advising the governor on all phases of law enforcement and criminal justice systems, is best known as the dispenser of federal Law Enforcement Administration Assistance (LEAA) grants to court and corrections programs and police departments. In 1975 alone the CCJ will dispense over $15 million in LEAA funds.

The CCJ consists of 41 members, 18 of whom serve ex officio, 3 of whom are designees and 20 of whom are appointed directly by the governor.

The Governor said, "We are trying to improve the quality of justice by ridding the judicial selection process of politics, and by eliminating part-time and special judges. And we hopefully will continue to improve our correctional process so criminal offenders, particularly young offenders, will be given an opportunity to become productive members of society.

"In many of these areas the CCJ and LEAA funds can play a very useful role," Dukakis said.

Chief William Quinn serves as chairman of the Greater Boston Police Council, sixth vice-president of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, chairman of the New England Association of Chiefs of Police Committee on Training and Law Enforcement, chairman of the New England Institute on Community and Police, member of the Technical Advisory Panel of the Governor's Committee on Law Enforcement and Administration of Criminal Justice and the Subcommittee on Standards and Goals of the CCJ.

Quinn is also a lecturer at the New England Institute of Law Enforcement Management at Babson College. Quinn attended Newton Junior College, Northeastern University, and Boston College.

Hubert Jones is presently an Associate Professor of Urban Studies and Planning at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He was a candidate for Congress from the Ninth Congressional district in 1972.

Prior to that he was the executive director for the Roxbury Multi-Service Center, the interim executive director for the Ecumenical Center of Roxbury, Inc., an instructor in social welfare at the Boston University School of Social Work, an assistant clinical professor of psychiatry at the Boston University School of Medicine, and other positions in the community deliquincy sector.

Jones is currently chairman of the Welfare Coalition and the boards of directors of the Massachusetts Center for Political Studies and the Massachusetts Advocacy Center. He is also a director of the Boston Children's Service Association.

He was formerly president of the National Association of Social Workers and was honored as the Social Worker of the Year in 1973.

Joseph Romanow is an administrator on the staff of Chief Justice Walter H. McLaughlin of the State Superior Court. Previous to that he was employed as a research engineer in the field of data processing with Sylvania in Needham.

Romanow graduated from Tufts University with a B.A. in Applied Mathematics. He attended the Massachusetts Institute of Technology graduate school and graduated from Suffolk University Law School in 1968.

Romanow a designee of Justice McLaughlin, is also graduated from the Institute of Court Management.

Hospital receives an award

Newton-Wellesley Hospital has received the Spurgeon Award fromthe Norumbega Council which oversees boy scouting in the Newton-Wellesley-Weston area.

Received by Assistant Administrator Tim Harrington, the award is given nationwide by BSA councils to local institutions that have made a substantial contribution to the community through the young men and women active in Exporing.

There are four "posts" at the hospital through which Explorers learn about career possibilities: medical, nursing, dentistry, and medical technology. Hundreds of man-hours have been volunteered by hospital staff, and hundreds of young people have passed through the program since its inception over three years ago.

Bank introduces 'business moneyline'

The Newton-Waltham Bank and Trust Company, has recently introduced a new service to help solve small business financing problems.

Called Business Moneyline, the new service is a revolving line of credit which gives smaller businessmen and professional people the borrowing advantages that large corporations have enjoyed for years. The customer applies only once for Business Moneyline and, once approved, can get money for any business purpose simply by presenting an advance document at the bank. The funds are then deposited to the customer's business checking account for immediate use.

"We feel this service is long overdue in our market area, and our research indicates that it will be welcomed by many area firms," Giles Mosher said. "We have always been committed to serving the small businessman, and we are always looking for new ways to accomodate his particular needs. Business Moneyline is one result of that philosophy."

Mosher said that the new service is available now through any of Newton-Waltham's 24 branch offices.

Protection of state records urged

Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti, Privacy Commission Chairman Rep. DAvid J. Mofenson (D-Newton) and other privacy advocates testified before the Judiciary Committee last week on behalf of House Bill No. 5417, a bill to ensure the right of informational privacy in state agency records.

The bill is sponsored by the Legislative Commission on Privacy, and in a statement presented to the Committee by Mofenson and Privacy Commission Director James H. Barron, they explained the problem and the goal of the legislation:

"The Watergate scandals, incidents of Army and CIA civilian syping, improper IRS audits and other revelations regarding questionable information gathering pracitces have crystallized many generalized public fears and concerns that government and private businesses collect and use too much data on private individuals. Furthermore, many of us feel these institutions are insufficiently concerned about the accuracy and relevance of the information used, and make that personal data too easily available to unauthorized others.

"The more notroious abuses have received much popular attention but in far more subtle ways information about individuals is gathered and disseminated without adequate safeguards to the privacy of the individual, resulting in a far more serious and steady erosion of personal liberties.

"Case studies are but the tip of a more insidious iceberg. Rare are the cases which come to public attention. Most persons whose rights are violated, are too afraid of compounding the problem by challenging the abuse. Others who do challenge, are frustrated in their efforts to inspect their records, find out their accussers, or correct the misinformation. There are countless Americans who do not even know what information is being stored on them or for what purposes.

"It is undeniable that the success of government in the large-scale delivery of goods and services to its citizens has been due in large part to the development of automated information systems. Improvements in health care' welfare, and educational programs have been dependent greatly on achievements in automated data processing systems. But at the same time, the benefits conferred by government have exacted fundamental prices. Increasingly, it appears that in exchange for certain benefits received from government, individuals are assumed to waive any and all interest and control over the information collected about or surrendered by them.

"This is especially true for the relatively powerless persons who tend to be in greatest need of government services.

"The right of informational privacy is most in jeopardy with those groups in the population least likely to fight to preserve it.

"To the unemployed father trying to secure work, to the mother on welfare whose primary concern is ensure fair information practices in agencies of the Commonwealth."

The Mofenson-Barron statement set forth the purposes of the Act.

"It is the sense of the Commission that the very existence of state information systems should not be kept secret. We believe that the public should be notified as to what kinds of record state agencies maintain, and individuals should have the right and opportunity to ascertain if they are in fact data subjects in a particular state information system.

"We believe that individuals should have access to the contents of their files and be able to find out how their personal information is being used. Furthermore, they should be provided with a procedure to challenge, correct or amend inaccurate, incomplete and irrelevant information, and to stop its unauthorized dissemination.

"Accordingly, agencies have a responsibility to take all reasonable precautions to maintain the contextual integrity and validity of the personal information it gathers' maintains and disseminates, or face certain penalties.

"What the Fair Information Practices Act does is set forth the responsibility of government agencies and the rights ov individuals regarding the use of personally-identifiable data. Its purpose is to provide safeguards for the selection and use of personal information, provide reasonable access by individuals to their records, provide a system of registration and identification of state-operated personal data systems and provide civil remedies for violations of its provisions."

Bellotti said the bill was the best of all the fair information practices acts now pending in the different states. Harvard Professor Arthur Miller, Ernest Winsor of the Massachusetts Civil Liberties Union, and representatives of state agencies all testified in support of the legislation. No one spoke in opposition.

The Green Thumb

Foliage feeding: Many home gardeners like to use liquid plant foods on their flowers, vegetables and shrubs, using what is called a "hose-end" sprayer. One of the soluble plant foods applied in this manner is Rapid-Gro which has a formula of 23-19-17. There are others on the market which are also safe, fast and efficient, and easy to apply. A reader who uses the 23-19-17 formula writes: "We usually use it at the rate of 1 teaspoon per quart of water for foliage feeding, but since the sprayers dilute the solution 24 to 1, or 60 to 1, depending on their setting, should we start with a more concentrated solution to make up for this dilution?"

Ans: since this involves some arithmetic (and I'm the world's worse mathematician) I'll try to answer this in every day backyard language. First, take one teaspoon of the soluble plant food, and mix it with two teaspoons of water. Or, you can use any one measure of the fertilizer and add it to two similar measures of water, and mix them together. In other words, it doesn't make any difference which measure you use, teaspoons, tablespoons, pints, quarts, etc. as long as they are the same for each.

Now that you have the base solution mixed together, set the nozzle 60:1 and this will give you a mix of about 180 to 1 (based on the fact that a teaspoon of 23-19-17 per quart of water gives you a 200 to 1 mix) We're assuming that a teaspoon of the plant food weighs about one-sixth of an ounce.

Sounds complicated, doesn't it. What would help a lot if the manufacturers of the sprayers worked out a table for the various plant foods found on the market. We hope that readers who use the hose-end sprayers will write and tell us how you calculate the dilution rate.

Fancy leaved crotons: These flashy plants make an ideal decoration in the living room since they take little care, will thrive on low light, and only regular amounts of watering. Unfortunately, crotons are in the news a lot these days because a German discovery that the plants contain a substance which can function as "tumor promoters." People are worried about getting sick because of an active principle (phorbol esters).

Don't worry about getting cancer from handling the plants or having them around. If you ate the plant or smoked the leaves, it would be a different story. The Cancer Institute tells us that "the magnitude of exposure of people to carcinogens derived from tobacco is vastly greater than the exposure that may result from occasional contacts with ornamental plants."

Green Thumb Clinic: "We have lots of pine needles and wonder if they can be used as a mulch in the garden?"

Ans: Yes, they are fine. Put them around fruit trees, shrubs, evergeens, and in the flower and vegetable garden.

Child health conferences preserve family health

In this time of spiraling costs, it is encouraging to know that one service to the public has reminded the same since it came under the supervision of the Newton Health Department in 1966. A child health conference is provided in three areas encompassing the entire city, held one afternoon a month in each area from September through July.

The child health conferences are located at Post 440 in Nonantum, Second Church in West Newton, and Emerson School in Newton Upper Falls. They are organized and conducted by Newton's public health nurses, two of whom attend each conference. Health supervision is provided from age four weeks until the child enters kindergarten. A donation of $1 for each child each session is acceptable for the service.

Services offered by the child health conference include a physical examination and discussion with the mother on all aspects of the child's health by a qualified pediatrician; immunizations following the recommendations of the Academy of Pediatrics and the Massachusetts Department of Public Health; and tuberculin tests. When laboratory studies or further diagnostic procedures are necessary, the child is referred to the Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

When appropriate or desired, referral to other professional community agencies outside the Health Department may be made, such as a family physician who may refer to medical specialists, family service agencies, special clinics, nursery schools and-or Head Start.

Each mother also has an opportunity to discuss the dietary requirements of her child with the nutritionist employed by the Newton Health Department.

The aim of the child health conference is to teach and assist parents to achieve the optimum level of health and prevention of disease for their child and family.

Provision for follow-up home visits by the public health nurse in the families' district may be made to provide additional advice or supervision.

For information regarding the child health conference in your area, please call the Newton Health Department at 244-4700, ext. 241. A public health nurse will be happy to arrange an appointment with you and answer any questions you may have about the service.

Backman wants citizen group to observe prison reform moves

Sen. Jack H. Backman will speak on "Citizen Involvement in the Criminal Justice System" at the Conference on Criminal Justice at the Unitarian Society of Wellesley Hills on Saturday, May 24.

Backman notes, "It is unfortunate that after 100 years of prison 'reform' we are still where we began." Backman said he will stress the need for an independent committee of citizens, including clergymen, lawyers, and newsmen to go into Walpole and report accurately on the conditions within that institution.

According to the Brookline lawmaker who represents Newton, the committee should be given complete access to the prisoners, the so-called reclaffification procedures, and the administrative practices used at Walpole. The public would then be able to learn the real story of what has been happening.

Backman noted that he doubts that the governor, the Secretary of Human Services, past or present, or the Commissioner of Correction know what is happening.

The Chairman of the Joint Committee on HMUMAN Services and Elderly Affairs believes that unless the government is willing to operate in the open, the people of the Commonwealth cannot hope to have any progress take place within correctional institutions, or any other department of the state.

Backman emphasizes the need for meaningful programs of education and work opportunities within our prisons.

Backman cites a young, deaf housewife who taught sign language at Walpole prison. About 30 inmates with normal hearing signed up for the course, the housewife told Backman, "Because they were hungry for knowledge and were not being offered anything else within the system."

"In order to protect our neighbors on the street, we must change our prisons from human warehouses winto places of rehabilitation. Rehabilitation and attempts to reverse the outrageous percentages of repeat crimes is not 'being soft' on criminals. This is an absolute necessity so that walking the streets is not to be a major risk. We must realize that if we fail, we become the victims," notes Sen. Backman.

It's Love that counts!

By RUTH LENSON

It's how you play that counts. It's how you look that helps.

In tennis, that is, and there's no denying that your dazzling looks on the court boosts your morale which, in turn boosts your game.

Tennis apparel is a powerful business today because of the tennis fever sweeping the country. What's new on the courts can be summed up in one word...color. The old concept of traditional white tennis uniforms has broken down and using different colors as trim has now expanded into the use of bigger splashes of color.

Separates are scoring points by the deuce...such as polyester separates in white with midriff pastel stripe trim, with accompanying buttoned down the front mini-skirt, warmup jacket and cap.

While many women still seem to prefer synthetic fabrics, there has been a strong trend towards cotton knit and cotton blends. Particularly popular because of its comfort, are the new terry tennis dresses, some with spots of bright color to liven up the white.

Here is a scattering of new tennis fashions

Soft supercomfortable cotton blends that breathe and move with the body—these tank-topped miniskirts are great not only for tennis buffs but for golfers, gymnasts and for just walking along the seashore. Available in a spectrum of colors as well as traditional white, they belong in the Danskin tennis collection.

The two-piece dress in cotton terry with striping at the waist and sleeves allows for easy body movement.

New on the court is the overall dress in white polyester gabardine with bright red and green ribbon suspender straps and shiny overall clips.

The halter dress with a deep V-neck and A-line silhouette is slimming for the gal with "hips"—all in white and brightened with a streak of color at the neck and hem, it's bound to be a winner.

To dazzle your opponent, think of wearing a Dacron polyester and cotton dotted swiss, flower-patterned dress with a softly gathered skirt, natural waist and ruffled underpants.

If you're anxious to do some homework on this sport, there's a most interesting book on the market, Doubleday's Tennis For Women, written by ten of the best professional players on the Women's Tour. They reveal (with more than 400 photographs and informative text) how they have lifted the quality of their play to higher levels of efficiency.

Being physically fit is a necessity if you're going to become a tennis enthusiast. Kerry Harris of Melbourne, Australia offers a word of caution: "I worked outdoors—jogging, sprinting, and so forth—as well as in the gymnasium, where I did exercises such as skipping rope, lifting weights, doing sit-ups and push-ups. I also watched my diet—this is especially important. For the beginner, or for the weekend player who is starting in after a layoff, the important thing is to begin slowly.

"For the first week or two, don't try to hit the ball with all your force. Tennis coaches the world over give this advice, but people still tend to ignore it.

"Before going to bed at night, or just after you get up in the morning, if you prefer, do a few sit-ups. The number you do depends on your age, weight, and general condition. Usually it's a good idea to do one or two more than you feel comfortable doing. Once you have strengthened your stomach, try adding a few leg lifts to your routine. One of the best all-around exercises for tennis is skipping rope. Skipping rope is good for toning muscles, building stamina, and developing coordination. Again, you'll have to use your own discretion as to how many to do, but you might start off with, say, 50 skips. Try to increase the number by 10 or 20 every day."

As for tips on the selection of proper tennis shoes, Kerry is most emphatic.

"Find the shoes that fit your feet. There are a lot of quick stops and starts in tennis, and it is quite easy to injure an ankle. I wear elastic ankle supports for added protection—they not only help keep me from turning an ankle, they also keep my legs from tiring as quickly as they normally would.

"Also," she adds, "weekend players can get by with a lighter shoe than that worn by most players who play daily. . . it's a matter of shopping around until you find the brand that best suits your feet. When I first started to play, my father advised me to wear two pairs of socks. I am still following his advice, and I think it has helped me avoid problems with my feet. A lot of players have lost matches because they have developed blisters halfway through. When you make a sudden stop, as you do all the time in tennis, the two pairs of socks have a cushioning effect . . . they also help prevent blisters by eliminating movement in your shoe."

Any outdoor activity, especially tennis, calls for the skin protection—such as a good moisturizer and sunscreen. Add to that a special creme-type lipstick and you're all set for the game.

Across the kitchen counter

By RUTH LENSON

For most New Englanders, the Memorial Day weekend signals the "official" time for hauling out the barbecue and digging through the recipe file for favorite barbecue sauces. It also gives the family an opportunity to work and play, come closer to nature enjoying outdoor feasting.

Though steak, sizzling on the coals, is the ultimate in grilling, there are few budgets that will allow this luxury. Take heart . . . ground beef provides the same important protein, vitamins and minerals as more costly cuts of beef, is hearty and delicious, so take advantage of the many versatile ways of combining various seasonings with ground beef. In our recipe for Chiliburgers, the combination of chili powder, catsup, onion and chopped green pepper produces big, thick, juicy patties that go well with baked beans, salad and sweet pickles. (If you don't care for chili, omit the ingredient from the recipe.)

Some grills become too crowded to allow for cooking of vegetables; try preparing your home fries in the kitchen, and come a'running with them at the proper moment.

There are those who prefer to do all their cooking and eating indoors . . . for you, we offer Crunchy Baked Chicken made extra special with the addition of ground dry roasted peanuts.

For everyone, dessert is a high and handsome cake topped with miniature American flags.

Question: I would appreciate your recipe for ruska — the tiny crisp cracker that is so delicious when spread with cheese or eaten as is. Thank you. — Mrs. Bea Rosenthal, Waltham

Answer: It's a very good, economical cracker to make, and don't let the use of yeast deter you. When baking, the crackers puff up like little balloons; you then remove them from the oven, slice them in half and return them to the oven to crisp. Enjoy!

RUSKS

1½ teaspoons dry active yeast
½ cup warm water (110 degrees)
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 tablespoon sugar
One-third cup warm milk (110 degrees)
1 egg, lightly beaten
3 to 4 cups unbleached flour

Dissolve the yeast in the warm water. Melt the butter (or margarine) in the warm milk — add the dissolved yeast, egg and enough flour to make a dough that can be kneaded. (The method is to keep adding flour until the dough pulls easily away from the bottom and sides of the bowl.) Knead the dough on a lightly floured board until smooth and satiny. Place in a lightly oiled bowl, turning dough once to oil top, cover and let rise in a warm place until doubled in bulk . . . about one hour. Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Roll the dough (one-half at a time) on a lightly floured board to ¼-inch thickness, cut into 2-inch rounds and place on a lightly greased baking sheet. Bake for 15 minutes or until lightly browned. Cut in half, horizontally; decrease oven heat to 300 degrees and bake the halves until crisp, about 20 minutes. Cool on a rack and store in a tin. Yield: about 30 pieces.

Every now and then, Helen Shapiro of Brighton shares with us her favorite recipes. This time it's a cookie she describes as one of the best she's ever tasted; here are Helen's Crunchy Cookies·

CRUNCHY COOKIES

½ cup margarine, softened
1 cup sugar
1 egg
1 teaspoon vanilla
1¼ cups all purpose flour
½ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
2 cups rice crispies
1 pkg. (6 oz.) semi-sweet chocolate morsels
1 cup raisins or nuts (optional)

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Combine margarine with sugar and beat well. Add egg, vanilla, mixing until well blended. Combine flour, baking soda and salt and blend into mixture; fold in rice crispies, semi-sweet morsels and raisins or nuts. Drop by level tablespoons on lightly greased cookie sheet and bake approximately 12 minutes until golden. Remove to wire rack to cool.

Question: Have you ever heard of the Rumanian dish called Ghivetch? It's made with vegetables and I've heard it's quite delicious — if you could locate the recipe I would be most grateful. — Mrs. F. M., Norwood Answer: Ghivetch is, as you say, a Rumanian classic dish similar to the French ratatouille, a wonderful tasty stew. "Vetch" is the Rumanian term for "root" and potatoes, carrots and onions go into the dish and what most gives the dish its character is the seasoning. The vegetables are baked with beef bouillon rather than water — it's a great dish to serve at a buffet.

RUMANIAN GHIVETCH

1 potato, pared and diced

Question: In our home, breakfast on Sunday is the most important meal of the day. We often times sit for two hours as a family get-together and the favorite dish is pancakes. However, this past Sunday, I thought that our regular pancakes were rather boring, even though I serve various toppings, and I am, therefore, requesting more interesting methods of serving pancakes. — C.W., Sharon

Answer: Actually, morning, noon and night, pancakes are a delight! For breakfast, how about combining them with sausages, simmered apple slices and a velvety honey sauce, and for a brunch an unusual Pancake Casserole.

AVERY ISLAND BREAKFAST PANCAKES

1 cup honey
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
1 apple, cored and sliced
8 breakfast sausages, cooked
12 hot pancakes

In large saucepan or skillet, combine honey, butter, salt, cinnamon, and apple slices; simmer until apple slices become almost transparent. Stack pancakes; garnish with apple slices and pour honey sauce over all. Serve with sausage. Yield: 4 servings.

PANCAKE CASSEROLE

1 can condensed cream of celery soup
1 pkg. (10) oz.) frozen mixed vegetables, partially thawed
1 tablespoon chopped green pepper
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon Tabasco pepper sauce
1 cup (4 oz.) shredded Cheddar cheese
8 hot pancakes

In small saucepan, combine undiluted celery soup, mixed vegetables, green pepper, salt and Tabasco sauce. Simmer, covered, until vegetables are tender. Stir in cheese. Stack pancakes in small casserole, alternating with layers of cheese-vegetable sauce. Bake in 400 degree oven for 15 minutes. Serves 4.

New front door at First Church of Christ, Scientists, Boston

The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston—often called The Mother Church—is opening a new front door. In fact, it's the first time the historic edifice has had a front door or main entrance, and the familiar Back Bay landmark is suddenly drawing fresh attention.

When the Church Extension was completed in 1906, the design called for a formal entrance which would give proper balance and grace to the structure, but this was never carried out. When, in 1968, plans were drawn up for the Christian Science Center, it was decided to complete the building as originally conceived.

The new front doors will open for the first time May 18, thus completing both the edifice and the Center, and offering to visitors a "proper" front door.

"Proper," in this instance, means columns and carvings and examples of old-world stonework craftsmanship not often called for by buildres these days. In fact, the search for artisans trained to do the delicate work was one of the unique challenges of the project.

The new portico front marks the completion of a process that began at the turn of the century. The original First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, a modest stone Romanesque building, was completed in 1894. But it wasn't big enough for the growing congregations attracted by Christian Science. A huge, domed extension was completed in 1906. Today the original is still tucked beside the Byzantine shoulders of the extension, and is still cherished by church members because of the pioneering effort it represents.

The new entryway is approached from Massachusetts Avenue, just down and across the street from Symphony Hall. Its steps are broad and terraced and open onto brick-paved walkways, and landscaped spaces that flow to other parts of the Church Center.

The Christian Science Publishing Society is on one side, The Mother Church Sunday School on the other.

Ten, 42-foot limestone columns form the portico's classic half-rotunda. Just beyond the columns are revolving doors set in a glass wall reinforced by bronze bands. These doors lead to a ground floor lobby where two elevators take church-goers and visitors to the auditorium and its balconies.

Passersby will have a clear line of sight to the tiers of organ pipes that fill an archway behind the main platform from which two Readers conduct church services.

The columns were turned and carved from Indiana limestone. On top are six-ton Corinthian capitals, hand carved to match the intricate detail of the older parts of the building. The capitals are the largest the limestone contractor can ever remember carving. They are five feet high and nine feet across diagonally at the top and four feet in diameter at the bottom.

Cut from 30-ton blocks of stone and carved by the last known carving team in Indiana, the capitals took more than a year to finish. Each averaged from 500 to 700 man-hours of carving time.

A sunburst rose window, set in a circular parapet beneath a gabled roof, has 12 petals and is 10 feet in diameter. Its stained glass will be illuminated from the inside.

North nine victorious in three straight

By RON MACLEAN
Sports Correspondent

The Newton North High baseball team moved a half game ahead of Brockton but stayed a half-game behind Waltham. Newton swept the week beating Brookline 9-6 on May 14, Brockton 3-2 on May 15, and Weymouth South 11-6 on May 17.

The Tigers got only five hits against Weymouth South, but 15 walks aided the 11-6 victory.

Newton got a 4-0 lead with one run in the first and three in the second. Jack Ryan sparked the second-inning rally with a two-run single.

Starting pitcher Grep Pappas lost the lead in the second inning, yielding five runs. Pappas gave up two singles and two walks before giving way to Steve Dibenedetto. Dibenedetto gave up two walks and a gingle, then retired the side.

Steve Cononico pitched the final five innings, giving up only one run and two hits. He struck out eight and walked three.

Newton came up with the winning rally in the third, scoring seven runs. A three run single by Bob Vona was the key to the inning.

Vona singled to left, and went around to third when leftfielder Bob Mullin missed the ball.

Dibenedetto had two hits and two rbi's to lead the attack. Ryan and Vona had three rbi's, and Mike Tocci had one.

Weymouth used four pitchers in the game, walking 15 and striking out only six. Cononico picked up the win to move his record to 3-1.

Ryan had a good game defensively, making five putputs. Hall led Weymouth with two hits.

Newton North 3, Brockton 2

Bob Vona and Mike Tocci paced the attack with two hits apiece, and Steve Dibenedetto threw a five hitter at Lincoln Park.

Dibenedetto pitched his frist complete game of the season. He struck out four and walked two moving his record to 2-1. The Tiger offense helped out with single runs in the first, fourth and fifth.

In the first, Tocci walked off of starter Bob Coolin. Vona singled him to third, and Bob Kinsella singled him home.

Newton moved ahead by two in the fourth without a hit. Bob Cunningham reached on a fielders choice.

Cunningham broke to steal second, and Brockton catcher Paul Spillane threw the ball into centerfield. Cunningham tried for third, and centerfielder Art Sullivan threw the ball away to allow the run.

Tocci came home with the eventual winning run in the fifth. He singled and Bob Vona hit a ground rule double, moving him to third.

Bob Kinsella walked, and Rich Hunt grounded out on a questionable call, but Tocci scored on the out for the 3-0 lead.

The Boxers picked up two unearned runs in the seventh to close the gap. With two men on, Bob Tanzi hit a grounder to Bob Vona at third.

Vona made the force out at third, and threw to first. Sullivan got in Vona's way on the throw, and it went wild.

Nick Palantas came home on the error, and Tanzi moved to third. Paul Duford bunted down third, an excellent bunt.

Newton decided to let it go foul, and it did, but it rolled back fair for a single and the second run.

Dibeneditto got out of the jam, getting Pete Columbo on a fly to center.

Newton North 9, Brookline 6

The Tigers had a five run second inning to spur them to victory over the Wealthy Towners at Elliot Park, Brookline.

Jim Visakis and Mike Tocci each had two rbi's for Newton. Vigakis singled home a pair of runs in the second, and scored on a Dibenedetto single. Tocci squeezed a run home with a bunt to the pitcher. Ed Aucoin scored on an error by centerfielder Steve Ewanouski for the 5-0 lead.

Brookline came back with three runs in the bottom of the second, on three hits and two walks.

Newton moved ahead 7-3 in the third. Bob Kinsella and Rich Hunt walked, and Bob Cunningham singled home Kinsella.

Hunt moved to third on a flyout and scored when Brookline pitcher Ricchiutti balked.

Bob Mahon and Corcoran had back to back doubles for the Wealthy Towners to make the score 7-4. Newton tallied in the fourth and fifth and Brookline in the sixth and seventh for the 9-6 final.

Six doubles and a triple spruced up the game. In addition to Mahon and Corcoran, Wynn and Ewanouski doubled and Percy Cook tripled.

Mike Tocci and Bob Cunningham doubled for the Tigers.

Aucoin got the win, going 6 1-3 before Steve Dibebedetto came in for relief. Aucoin fanned six, and walked three and gave up eight hits.

Dibenedetto went three for three and scored two runs, and Bob Kinsella was two for three with two runs scored.

Cunningham was also two for three, with an rbi.

Dibenedetto leads the team in hitting with a .396 average, Ryan is at .384, Vona at .378, Kinsella at .356, Hunt at .322, and Jim Visakis at .300.

Dibenedetto leads with 15 runs scored, Visakis has 13, and Ryan has 11. Ryan leads in RBI's with 15, and Vona has 12.

Dibenedetto has nine stolen bases to lead the team, and 14 walks for second. Visakis has 15. Ryan leads in the extra base hit department with 4, while Kinsella leads with two triples.

Three Newton lacrosse players named to Eastern senior schoolboy all star team

Attempting to make it three in a row for the East in the annual East-West Senior All-Star Lacrosse Game to be played June 1 at Springfield College will be a 26-man unit announced by the Eastern New England coaches last week. The team represents the best senior talent from more than fifty secondary schools fielding lacrosse teams in the four-state Eastern New England region.

New Hampshire's Dick Bley was chosen to coach the All-Stars. His Pinkerton Academy teams have dominated the Northern region and recently notched wins over perennial prep power Phillips Andover and high school titlist Concord-Carlisle on the way to an 11-1 record so far in 1975. Jim McClelland, the Concord coach (with only the loss to Pinkerton blemishing his record this year) will assist Bley as will Robby Robinson from Brookline. Robinson's team finished second to unbeaten Lincoln-Sudbury in the high school North last season and is in title contention again this year.

The six prolific scorers who were chosen to the All-Star attack should give the coaches plenty of offense. Harold Burnett is a standout on St. Mark's fine (7-1) squad while Ben Young spearheads Gov. Dummer, the only team to beat St. Marks so far. Derek Van Slyck has broken all scoring records at Noble and Greenough and is a one-man secret ingredient for that school's recent lacrosse success (13-0 in '74). Pat Collins has sparked St. George's (Newport, R.I.) with his fine shooting and teammates Mike Downing and Brad Mitchell have provided over half the more than 150 points amassed by Lincoln-Sudbury's awesome offensive machine so far this spring.

The "heart and legs" of the team will be a fine group of midfielders. Six of them come from Eastern Mass. high schools. Dyke Hoy (Brookline) is noted for face-offs; Dan Bertocchi (Concord-Carlisle) was a high scorer in hockey as well as lacrosse; Dave Reed (Lincoln-Sudbury) was a three-year star and clutch goal-getter on last year's Eastern Mass. champions; Jamie Egasti (Framingham North) won fame as an All-State wrestler and is better at lacrosse; Bussy Adam (Newton North) has been cited as "the best who ever played here" by his coach, Tom De Peter; and Peter Frangillo is a powerful face-off man for Winchester.

The remaining six come from all over the Eastern New England map. Bob Metts has garnered as many as five goals in crucial games for Pinkerton; Tim Cameron is the best from Phillips Andover; Jeff Buxton is the heart of an undefeated Providence Country Day outfit; finely-drilled Rivers is represented by Rick Miller, and Donovan Farwell of the Hyde School in Bath was the consensus choice of the coaches as the best lacrosse player in Maine.

At defense Kevin Feragan and Dough Systrom have been immense for Concord-Carlisle, Craig Beling is the captain of Framingham North's tournament-bound squad, Kevin O'Dowd is a tiger on defense at Newton North, Pinkerton's Bill Harvey specializes in shutting off previously high-scoring attackmen while Ed Beardsley wins praise from Herb Evans, his coach at Gov. Dummer as being "very smart and very, very tough." Net-minders Ray McKinney (Newton South), Steve Murphy (Winchester), and Bill Chadwick (Providence Country Day) all bring outstanding goals-against averages into the game and should provide excellent work in that crucial area.

Face-off time is 1 p.m. against a West squad that appears very strong on attack and in goal and should provide the stiffest test yet for the best in the East.

Mass Bay nine finish best year

The Mass Bay Tritons finished their regular baseball season with a 20-2 won-lost ledger and then a third place finish in the New England Region Playoff tournament of the National Junior College Athletic Association.

The final two wins of the regular season came over the Bentley College J.V.'s 14-1 and the Harvard Freshmen 8-2. Mike Donais of Swansea was the winning pitcher over Bentley and then Steve Hartery of No. Reading was the winner against Harvard with the aid of two three-run homers by Mark Dwyer of Quincy and Vern Khederian of Watertown.

The Tritons carried their 20-2 mark into the regional tournament as the No. 1 seed and quickly disposed of Rhode Island Junior College 5-1 as Steve Hartley again was the winner. Steve Morgan of Braintree had 3 hits in that game as the Tritons exploded for four runs in one inning and advanced to the second round to meet Housatonic C.C.

George Brazil of Cambridge started against Housatonic but his appearance was shortlived as he was literally knocked from the box. Housatonic's first batter lined a shot that struck Brazil's pitching hand and although George didn't appear to be in pain he simply could not overpower the batters and left losing 3-0 with men on second and third. Joe Bakunas of Dedham came on and wild pitched two runs home and before Mass Bay came to the plate it was 5-0 Housatonic.

The Tritons first run came on a home run by Bobby Caldwell of Holliston but before Mass Bay scored again Housatonic had added 3 more runs and a four run Mass Bay rally in the ninth fell short. Housatonic brought on their No. 1 pitcher and he squelched the Triton rally by striking out the side. Kenny Gomes of Stoneham had 2 hits for the losers and Caldwell had a total of 3 hits that game but the Tritons could not recover from the big first inning deficit.

In the consolation game Tommy Poto of Randolph handcuffed Leicester J.C. and heid them to only 2 hits and did not allow a run. Everyone on the Mass Bay squad saw action and a total of five Leicester pitchers made appearances but all were ineffective as the Tritons scored 11 runs on their way to a third place finish in the tournament.

This Saturday Mass Bay enters the Massachusetts Community College Baseball Tournament and the team is scheduled to face Quinsigamond (the eventual winner of the New England tournament) at Quinsigamond in Worcester at 11 a.m. The other semi-final game will have Eastern representative Cape Cod C.C. facing the other Western team, Berkshire C.C. at Assumption College also at 11 a.m. The championship game will be played at Quinsigamond that afternoon at 3 p.m.

Mini One-on-One

John Leavitt, (right) shooter, and Gregory Larson, goalie from the Newton PeeWee Youth Hockey team were recently awarded the first annual McDonald's Mini One-On-One Hockey Cup during Stanley Cup hockey playoff games by Rick Friend, owner of McDonald's of Newton (right) and Tom Larson, Channel 38 sports commentator. Teams composed of a shooter and a goalie from all over New England participated in competition that was televised on Channel 38 throughout the Bruins season. Each shooter had three chances to score against the opposing goalie, with the winning team being the one with the most goals at the end of the period.

Senior Lion grapplers are all headed for college

By HOWIE APPELSTEIN
Sports Correspondent

NEWTON—Those people who think that the highly successful Newton South wrestling team is just a collection of "dumb jocks" better think twice.

Coach Aredis Kojoyian's squad of thirteen seniors did not just devote all of their time to wrestling. All 13 of them are headed for college in the fall. The seniors were dedicated to wrestling, as the Lions' 14-1 record shows, but they also had a lot of brains and not just a lot of brawn.

Chuck Dippo, who wrestled in the 100 lb. weight class, is headed for Pennsylvania where he will attend Lehigh University.

Bobby Paisner, the Lions' injury-prone 114 pounder, is not going quite so far but he is mighty happy about staying right around here and attending Tufts University.

Bruce Arafe, South's representative in the 128 lb. weight class, will be going to the University of Massachusetts at Amherst next fall.

Co-captain Peter Nathanson, who had a perfect 15-0 record in the 134 lb. weight class, is also enrolled at UMass, Amherst this coming fall.

Howie Appelstein, the Lions' colorful 140 pounder, will be spending the next five years at Northeastern University. Applestein will go on the Co-op program as did assistant coach Chuck Hurwitz.

Craig Sowsy, the Lions' tireless 147 pounder, says he will be watching a lot of wrestling the next four years at Boston University. B.U., without question, is one of the real wrestling powers in Massachusetts.

Barry Horowitz, Sowsy's backup, will be off to Colby College next fall. Horwitz chose Colby over many othe fine schools.

The Lions most dedicated wrestler, Aaron Moynahan, will be attending Mass. Maritime next fall. Moynahan, who wrestled in the very tough 157 lb. weight class, is very anxious to continue his wrestling career.

Ted Hilliard who backed up Moynahan will be going to Boston State. Although Hilliard never wrestled in one varsity match, he always remained loyal to the team and never missed a practice.

Co-captain Peter Maples who was undefeated for two straight years could not be going to too much of a better school next fall. Peter will be attending Yale University. Enough said!

Ah, but the Lions' heavyweight is also going to an Ivy League school. Yes, Scott Groper will be going to Harvard.

Eddie Rubin probably would have started for the Lions this year but a knee injury caused him to miss the entire season. Rubin will be going to Coach Kojoyian's alma mater, George Washington.

I almost forgot a fellow Hukie. Backup heavyweight Paul Tormey will be joining me at Northeastern. Although he was a substitute on the wrestling team, Paul was one of the best linemen on the football squad and is the best attacker on the lacrosse team.

These thirteen seniors will be missed, but as long as the wrestling team has Art Kojoyian at the helm they'll always be in pretty good shape.

Bradley gets 2 goals

Bowdoin JV lacrosse team has 8-1 record

BRUNSWICK, Me. — Coach Jim Lentz's Bowdoin College junior varsity lacrosse team, which fell one goal short of an undefeated season, has wound up its 1975 schedule with a record of eight wins and one loss.

The Polar Cubs outscored their combined opponents 101-29 and their only loss was by a one-goal margin to Governor Dummer Academy. Bowdoin defeated the Hyde School of Bath, Bridgton Academy, University of Maine at Orono, Nasson, Exeter Academy, Colby, Hebron Academy and Bates.

The team's leading scorer was Steve Nelson of Wellesley, Mass., who finished the season with 24 goals.

Tied for second place with 10 goals each were Alfie Himmelrich of Pikesville, Md.; Ben Butcher of Concord, Mass.; and Bill Lynch of Wayne, Pa.

Other goal scorers included Peter Moore of Princeton, N.J., 7; Bob Jones of Coral Gables, Fla., 6; George Chase of Concord, N.H., 5; Dave Reece of Concord, Mass., and Mark Chamberlin of West Hartford, Conn., 4 each; and Eddie Quinlan of Gorham, Me., and John MacLeod of Arlington, Mass., 3 each.

Tied with 2 goals each were Charlie Lamontagne of Woburn, Mass.; Ward Osgood of Marblehead, Mass.; Mike Bradley of Newton, Mass.; Matt Cara of Lincoln, Mass.; and Bill Clark of Glens Falls, N.Y.

Contributing single goals were Jamie Cook of Weston, Mass.; Doug Green of Scarsdale, N.Y.; Jay Pensavalle of North Attleboro, Mass.; Mike Sisitsky of Longmeadow, Mass.; and Bill Collins of Wakefield, Mass.

Richie Miller

Rich Miller named to lacrosse star team

Richie Miller, captain and high scorer for The Rivers Country Day School lacrosse team, was selected to the Eastern All Star team this past week. Richie is Rivers' only three-year starter and played both midfield and attack. In his first game at Rivers as a sophomore he scored three of the team's four goals in the opening game against Governor Dummer, and just last week he came back after an injury had sidelined him for two weeks to score five of the team's nine goals in an overtime victory over Milton Academy.

Richie was also a football captain at Rivers and plans to play both lacrosse and football at Bucknell next year. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Miller of 422 Ward Street in Newton Centre.

Weeks nips Warren

Last Thursday the Weeks Junior High School track team defeated Warren by a narrow 119½-111½ margin. The 7th grade hero for Weeks had to be Dale Lewis who scored 20 points, winning the shot put (over 33'), the long jump (13'3"), the 100 yard dash (12.4), and the 220 yard dash. Other seventh grade point scorers for Weeks were: Nick Alexander who took 2nd place in the shot put, and the 440. Roberts who finished 1st in the high jump, 2nd in the 100, 2nd in the 220, Dan Fitzpatrick and Jeff Baden who took 1st and 2nd in the 880 with times of 2:36 and 2:45.6.

8th grade winners were: Marc Fisher who placed 1st in the high jump and 2nd in the 120 hurdles, Phil Shiman who took first in the 440, John Kane, Jamie Forsyth, and Niel McManus who swept the 880.

In the 9th grade: Chuck Strange won the 440 (58.7) and placed 2nd in the high jump, Andy Kaufman took first in the 880, and Kei Kishimoto and Lee Zalinger took 2nd and 3rd in the mile with times of 5:25 and 5:27.

The hero of the day had to be Chris Freeman of the 8th grade. Freeman took 1st in the 100 and 220 yard dashes, 2nd in the long jump and clinched the meet for Weeks by coming from 10 yards behind and winning the relay.

After the victory in the relay Weeks coach Ray Oglesby said "I anc't believe it. After they took the 7th grade relay I thought they had us, but Chris ran an outstanding race. I hope that the rest of our meets won't be so close' though."

Four Have Shots From South

Tom Steeves' scrappy Newton South club fell from contention when they lost to Framingham North 7-0 but that leaves four clubs still alive in the topsy-turvy Southern race. Newton North bested Framingham South and has the best record but must face Framingham North and Needham in its final two divisional games. The latter two teams plus the Tigers and the Eagles all have tournament hopes. Remember the tie-breaker involves goals for - goals against only in the games between the teams that are tied.

Framingham North	4-1
Framingham South	4-2
Needham	3-2

Grossman's expert offers ideas for homemakers

DEBORAH BROWN

Decorating with paint, creative uses of paneling, ingenious storage ideas, are among dozens of suggestions for home improvement that will be demonstrated through color slides from House & Garden magazine, with merchandising editor Deborah Brown as commentator, Friday and Saturday, May 23 and 24, at Grossman's stores in Quincy, Wellesley and Danvers.

Ms. Brown will be at the Quincy store, 100 Granite Street, Friday afternoon, May 23, from 2:30 to 4 o'clock and from 7 to 8 o'clock that night. She will make a personal appearance Saturday morning at the Danvers store, 161 Andover street, from 10 o'clock 'til noon, and at the Wellesley store, 27 Washington street, from 2:30 to 4 o'clock that afternoon.

How to save time, energy and money when remodeling is the theme of May House & Garden. Experts in architecture and interior design have contributed their ideas to the pages that will come to life on the screen at Grossman's.

Live-in kitchens, bath-dressing rooms, and family rooms will be shown, along with landscaping inspiration for porches, patios, decks and terraces.

"There's room for improvement - everywhere," says Ms. Brown.

Grossman's was selected as one of 10 home centers in the U.S. to be featured in the special annual home improvement issue of the magazine which has a readership of 8 million.

George's Island to be open to visitors

Georges Island in Boston Harbor will be open to visitors starting on Saturday, May 17, the Metropolitan District Commission announced today.

The island may be reached by sightseeing boats based at Rowe's Wharf and Long Wharf in Boston, or by private boats. Docking and mooring facilities are available, as are picnic and playground areas.

Fort Warren, built in 1850, is the major historic feature on Georges Island. It was used in the Civil War by the Union Army as a detention center for prisoners, including Confederate Vice President Alexander Stephens. The fort covers approximately 20 acres on the 40-acre island.

The central position of Georges Island in Boston Harbor and the breathtaking view of the city skyline it offers visitors make the island a 'must' on anyone's list of places to visit, especially during the Bicentennial.

A new addition at Georges Island this year will be the inauguration of an audio-interpretative system involving the use of a portable wireless set that picks up a narration of important events in the history of Fort Warren as the visitor moves from station to station. Icnluded in a rendition of 'Battle Hymn of the Republic', written by Julia Ward Howe, which had its beginning at Fort Warren early in the Civil War.

The audio-interpretative system is operated by ByWord Corporation of New York, which installed a similar system last year at Bunker Hill in Charlestown.

$7.50 for either Complete Flag Kit
Please add $1.00 for postage and handling on mail orders.

The Transcript Newspapers offers at cost as a patriotic public service two magnificent home flag kits . . . either the 50-star Old Glory or our nation's traditional First Flag, the 13-star Betsy Ross — both 3 x 5 foot in size with double sewn stripes. Both kits are complete with a 6-foot baked-on gilt finish 2-piece steel pole and matching 5-inch wing spread Eagle top ornament — 2-way heavy rust resistant stamped steel bracket with screws — full color flag history brochure, mounting instructions — all carefully packed in a 2-piece storage carton. Order either or both kits today — for yourself, for gifts.

Stop by the Transcript Newspapers Office, 420 Washington St., Dedham, Mass. or mail in the coupon to get one or both of these fine flag kits.

"The shot heard 'round the world" was fired April 19th, 1776 as the "Embattled Farmers" defended their beloved country against the British Red Coats at Concord and Lexington. Many of us can say at least part of Longfellow's "Ride of Paul Revere" telling the story of that gallant horseman — who was "ready to ride and spread the alarm to every middlesex, village and farm" the night of April 18th. As we look back over 200 years of history, let all of us dedicate ourselves to the task of solving our great country's problems and continuing its growth and development as the world's greatest success story.

To show our resolve and our firm belief in America, let's all fly the flag — every day, if you will . . . especially during our 200th Birthday — but certainly on every national holiday during this tremendously important event. Transcript Newspapers, as part of its Bicentennial Celebration, will make these fine quality home flag kits available as a patriotic and historical public service right through 1976.

AUCTION
RAMADA INN
50 Dayton St. (Route 1) Danvers, Mass.
SATURDAY, MAY 24 - 2 P.M.

Iranian Rugs today are in big demand and much desired by interior decorators and are getting rarer everyday. There is no doubt these beautiful rugs will be impossible to find later on.

The weavers who created these pieces of beautiful craftsmanship earned the lowest wage in the world, as low as 75 cents a day. With the rapid economic growth, the Iranian government prohibited such low salary scales, and their average income now is unbelievable as compared with the past. If the weavers would make rugs today the cost would be several times higher than 5 years ago.

Note about this Auction: The goods have been stored for a long period for non-payment of the shipment, and under pressure of creditors the entire collection has been offered for disposal at this auction to the highest bidder in single units.

Real Estate Seminar

On Wednesday evening, June 4, at the Marriott Hotel in Newton, (8:00 p.m.) a panel of experts from the real estate, land planning, and legal professions, will be conducting a free seminar on Land Investment opportunities in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

They will be discussing the recession's effect on land values; current prices for small and large tracts; the advantages and pitfalls of real estate investing; what to look for in evaluating raw land; the impact of new environmental regulations; legal, tax and estate planning considerations.

According to Robert A. Danziger, President of Northland Investment Corporation of Newtonville' sponsor of the seminar, the past several months have shown a favorable trend in the investment climate in Northern New England. Northland has organized this symposium in order to update investors on the changes that have taken place recently, the impact of certain developer foreclosures, and the present opportunities for mortgage financing of undeveloped property.

Reservations for the seminar may be made by calling Northland at (617) 965-3100.

New cosmetic creation: '7 Day Car Cologne'

NEW YORK UPI—Fun-loving Daniel Cade came to New York recently to introduce his latest cosmetic if that's the word creation, 7 Day Car Cologne.

Its fragrance is designed to neutralize odors that offend passengers in automobiles, buses, trains or planes and it symbolizes the originality of the 30-year-old Cade's approach to the cosmetic business.

Cade is a black man, originally from Mobile, Ala. He now lives in Chicago. He started LaCade Manufacturing Co. four years ago with $1,500 that his Dad raised by borrowing on his car. Now LaCade has 150 employees, 100 of them full time, and sales of $5 million a year. His father works for him now and is his most trusted adviser.

Dan Cade began his business career at the age of 14 in Mobile, selling shoes house to house. "I made $10 the first day, a fantastic sum for a black boy in Alabama in those days," he recalls. He moved to Chicago in 1965 and got a nite job with a railroad. Like earlier black entrepreneurs, he decided cosmetics are a gold mine if you learn to work the field, so he got all the books he could find on cosmeticss chemistry and studied them. He worked for two cosmetic companies and did well but neither firm would promote him fast enough so he finally decided to form his own company.

He called his first product Utra Mink Hair Conditioner and Dan was the whole company. "I mixed it, I filled the bottles, sold and shipped them, and kept the books," he said.

The business prospered and he steadily expanded the line with innovative products, many for hair care.

His early products were primarily for the black ethnic market but with LaCade 7 Day Car Cologne, he is moving into the general market and he intends to keep on going in that direction.

In spite of his years of hard work, Cade likes the flamboyant style of life and says he is a firm believer in the idea that business and pleasure should be mixed regularly. He thinks new products should be introduced with lots of showmanship and was deeply disappointed when New York's unsympathetic police refused to let him stage a fancy motorcade of celebrity automobiles for the introduction of the car cologne. He had arranged to obtain the use of ex-President Lyndon Johnson's personal limosine and cars belonging to some other celebrities.

Fancy automobiles are a chief part of Cade's zest for living. He maintains a personal fleet of four Cadillacs of which the star vehicle is a restored 1938 classic limosine with the most elegant appointments. Friends say his Lake Shore apartment in Chicago is so lavishly done "it looks like something dreamed up for a series of pictures in Playboy."

Cade still is a bachelor and a lively bachelor even for a young millionaire but he admits that burning the candle at both ends has been getting tougher recently.

"Matter of fact, I've decided it's time for me to settle down," he said, "I guess it's just a matter of finding the right girl."

Newport tourism up

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — This historic waterfront city will witness its busiest tourist season ever in 1975, according to a prediction by the Newport County Chamber of Commerce prediction.

It said the number of persons stopping at the chamber's tourist information center was up 82 per cent through March and mail inquiries were 90 per cent heavier than in 1974.

Gary Lash, public relations director, said the center expected to handle 150,000 tourist inquiries this year compared to 87,000 last year.

The chamber estimated that one in 10 persons visiting Newport's mansions, historic waterfront and other attractions also visits the center. That projects the tourist estimate to 1.5 million for this year.

Gulf chairman says U. S. companies forced to pay foreign governments

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Multinational corporations have been forced to make secret payments to foreign government officials because of a vacuum in U.S. policy, according to Gulf Oil Chairman Bob R. Dorsey.

"It goes back to my lifetime experience of getting very little aid from the government," said Dorsey.

Dorsey said all U.S. corporations with dealings in other countries are faced with the problem of extortion on a regular basis. Sometimes the company is strong enough to resist the pressures. At other times the only recourse is to yield reluctantly to demands for payments of corporate funds.

When a corporation makes its initial investment in an underdeveloped country —often with U.S. encouragement —the ability to withstand pressures is relatively easy. But as the size of the investment grows over the years, he said, the company is placed in a position where it cannot bargain effectively without serious economic consequences.

Dorsey said he has "played both games" —resisted demands for illegal payments to government officials and made the payments. In the past decade, Dorsey said, Gulf has paid $5 million in Bolivia, Italy, Lebanon and South Korea to protect hundreds of millions of dollars in corporate investments.

CARACAS (UPI) — The Venezuelan government has ordered the local automobile assemblers —led by the U.S. Big Three —to reduce the number of models available from 59 to 11.

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The great earthquake and fire of 1906 measured an estimated 8.3 on the Richter scale, destroyed 490 blocks of the city (2,593 acres), left 250,000 persons homeless and killed at least 452 persons.

Energy head pessimistic on conservation

By WILLIAM E. CLAYTON

WASHINGTON UPI—Federal Energy Administrator Frank G. Zarb today said he is "pessimistic" that Congress will adopt a nationwide energy conservation program this year.

Zarb also said that with the United States' increased dependence on imported oil, "the likelihood of another oil embargo is clearly there."

"If we don't the people that are going to pay the price are the people who are paying the price now-the American consumer."

Zarb, who was interviewed on the NBC Today Show, said he was extremely doubtful that Congress would be able to forge a unified energy program in 1975.

He said the only hope is if Congress and the administration cooperate. Congress, he said must enact "some of the long range type programs that are not very controversial and the President having to take some administrative steps to take care of the shorter range efforts to conserve oil."

"I'm rather pessimistic," he said.

Zarb has been pushing President Ford's proposal for removing controls from oil and its products so that the higher prices would discourage Americans from using too much and the higher profits would spur industry to find new energy supplies.

Zarb said Monday that the plan is going ahead because "the nation cannot afford to wait indefinitely for Congress to enact a decontrol plan of its own."

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D—Wash., rebutted some of Zarb's arguements during a Capitol Hill hearing.

Heart, stroke and accident deaths down in 1974

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Death rates for heart disease, stroke and accidents, three of the four leading national killers, declined in 1974, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare said Monday.

Deaths from cancer, the second leading cause of death next to heart disease, increased last year.

The statistics show a 22 per cent drop in the rate of deaths from motor vehicle accidents, said HEW Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

The estimated 45,000 vehicular deaths were 10,000 fewer than in 1973. Weinberger said lower speed limits and less driving because of the energy shortage were accelerating a national trend of reduced traffic deaths.

Weinberger gave no reason for the increaced cancer death rate.

The death rate for heart disease was around 351.6 for each 100,000 persons in 1974, compared to 375.2 in 1963. The death rate for stroke was estimated at 97.1 per 100,000 population in 1974, and for cancer 169.4 per 100,000 up 1.3 per cent from the previous year.

For all accidents the death rate decreased about 13 per cent in 1974 from previous year, most of decline because of the drop in traffic accident deaths.

Toyota's camper is versatile, good for every-day use

TORRANCE, Calif.—Toyota's versatile camper has been redesigned for 1975 to provide additional comfort and living space. It also features a more powerful engine for increased performance and driveability.

"The '75 Toyota-Chinook is primarily a recreational vehicle, but its size, fuel economy and maneuverability also make it suitable for everyday transportation," said Gregory Warner, national vehicle merchandising manager for Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc.

"During the week, it can be easily used for driving to work, running errands or taking the kids to school. On the weekend, it becomes a getaway vehicle for camping, fishing, hunting and family outings."

Warner added that the camper is available only from Toyota dealers.

Mileage figures compiled by the Environmental Protection Agency show that the more powerful '75 camper is still stingy with gasoline, recording 25 mpg in highway-like driving and 18 mpg in simulated city travel when equipped with automatic transmission.

Among the new features on the '75 Toyota-Chinook are power front disc brakes for safer stops and a larger four-cylinder, 2.2-liter engine with transistorized ignition. The specially engineered chassis has a wider rear axle and heavy duty suspension and tires.

The new interior floor plan of the camper features an L-design seating arrangement that provides more living space then last year's model. The cab has additional headroom and legroom and is equipped with a fire extinguisher.

The vehicle's stell-reinforced, walk-through body is completely integrated with the cab and chassis.

Standard features include a fiberglass pop-top to expand headroom to six feet, a two-burner butane stove with hood vent, a five-gallon water tank, a stainless steel sink, more storage space than last year's model, and larger, more comfortable beds designed for two adults and two children. Camper options include a portable tgilet which can be installed by the dealer.

The interior also has color-keyed upholstery, curtains, shag capreting, a 2.5-cubic-foot icebox, and a 21-inch-wide wardrobe closet with door mirror.

New exterior styling features distinctive brown-tone body stripes and rear-step bumper. Among the major vehicle options are air conditioning and automatic transmission.

The vehicle is 202.5 inches long, 80 inches high and 74.5 inches wide. It has a standard four-speed manual transmission, 12.2-gallon fuel tank, interior lighting system and soft-vinyl bucket seats.

The camper body is manufactured and assembled on Toyota's 110 inch-wheelbase truck chassis by Chinook International Inc., La Verne, Calif.

"This is the ideal dual-purpose vehicle for the family that wants a camper and a car, but can afford only one," Warner said.

Homes sought for foreign students

For the second consecutive year, the Foreign Study League, Inc., an educational service of the Reader's Digest, will sponsor a homestay program for 40 foreign students in the Boston area.

The group will arrive from Amsterdam from June 26 to July 21 and will include Dutch, Belgians, and Scandinavians among others. Their ages range between 14 and 24 and include both sexes. Homes are needed for the visiting students whose main goal is to learn about americans at home and share their experiemce with their hosts.

A welcome reception will be held for host families and students on the afternoon of their arrival, June 26, at the INTERNATIONAL Institute of Boston, 287 Commonwealth Ave., Boston 02115. Screened carefully for suitability,these students know some English which they will improve by attending classes during week days at the International Institute. Hospital has blood drive

Newton-Wellesley Hospital's annual spring Blood Donor Day will be Tuesday, May 27 from 10 a.m. to 3:45 p.m. in the hospital's Usen Auditorium.

Advance appointments are helpful to plan staffing for the Red Cross Bloodmobile and should be made through the hospital's Pathology Laboratory, 964-2800, ext. 357.

A good turnout at this time is important because there is always a heightened need over the Memorial Day weekend, due to highway, boating, and other accidents. In addition, a supply must be laid in for the vacation months when the demand for blood remains constant but donors are scarce.

Donors should be between ages 17 and 66 (17-year-olds must have wirtten parental or guardian consent) and should weigh at least 110 pounds. They should eat a balanced meal within four hours prior to donation - avoiding fatty foods - and get a normal night's rest the night before. No one who has had jaundice or hepatitis can be accepted as a donor.

Day care services available at Centers

The Newton Day Care Centers are now taking applications for September.

Serving Newton and surrounding communities with programs located at the United Presbyterian Church in Newton, Sacred Heart Church in Newton Centre and after school care at the Rebecca Pomroy House in Newton, all have fall openings, according to Anthony J. Bibbo, ACSW, executive director of the Newton Community Service Centers, Inc.

Bibbo stated that the Preschool Day Care Centers are also offering a summer program which will begin at the end of June. Full year applications to commence at that time and run through June of 1976 are available as well as the limited enrollment for the summer season of 1975.

The Centers, licensed by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, provide an enriched childhood experience stressing education, social service, health and nutrition, as well as indoor and outdoor play, creative arts, quiet play, field trips, and attention given to individual needs.

A well planned hot lunch, morning and afternoon snacks are a part of each day's routine. This program is open to youngsters 2.6 years old through 6 years of age.

The program runs 7:30 a.m.-5:30 p.m., with half day enrollment accepted if openings allow.

Information brochures and applications for all programs are available by visiting any of the centers or the main office at 429 Cherry St., West Newton. Also, you may phone 969-5906 for brochure information.

Homes wanted for French teenagers visiting this summer

David Phelan of 508 Farm Rd., Marlboro, is looking for homes in Massachusetts for some 150 Franch teenagers this summer and would like at least half to be in the eastern part of Massachusetts between Boston and Worcester.

According to Phelan, Central Mass. Coordinator for AVEL (Association des Vacances Linguistiques et Educatives) a nonprofit French enterprise, "Last year I placed 65 students between Newton and Worcester, and I'll have to double that figure this year, as some 500 students are coming and I'll have the responsibility of placing at least 150."

This year's students will arrive June 29 and again on July 7. Each group will remain 4 weeks. All of the students have had from four to seven years of English and range from 14 to 21 years of age.

AVEL was founded in 1957 by Profs. Bernard Aubert and Julien Ermisse, who still head the organization whose headquarters are in Tours, Fance. AVEL places students in Ireland, Scotland, England and Canada as well as in the United States.

According to Phelan, who lived in France for two years and now teaches French at Newton North High School, "I try to get as many of my own students as possible involved in the program. It's a great way for a student who is taking French to bring the whole experience alive. Although AVEL is not an exchange program as such, during my three years as coordinator, many of the American teenagers have been invited back to France the following summer."

Although each family spends their four weeks as they choose, each year there is an optional weekly outing that takes place in the middle of the week.

It is not necessary that there be a member of the American family the same age as that of the visitor, as long as there are friends, neighbors, or relatives to fill the void. The students are expected to become a part of the family during the four-week stay. They can be expected to participate in all of the family activities including vacation trips and the performance of household chores.

All interested families should contact David Phelan by calling collect 1-481-6516 or by writing to his home address 508 Farm Rd., Marlboro 01752.

New musical premieres Sunday

Contrasting themes of love and exorcism are the key dramatic elements of "Between Two Worlds", a new musical play making its professional premiere in the Brookline High School auditorium May 25.

Additiinal performances will be held May 31 and June 1.

In the production, staged by the West End Music Theater, Kimberly Daniel and Stanley Wexler play young lovers, Leah and Chanon, who look forward to a marriage which was prearranged by their parents before they were born. When Leah's father breaks the pakt and arranges a wealthy marriage for her instead, grief-ridden Chanon dies.

He returns as a spirit and possesses Leah's body. This sets the stage for a dramatic rite of exorcism, presided over by a grand rabbi, played by Irving Shuman. The exorcism succeeds, freeing Leah but leaving her with the obligation of carrying out the sacred pact of marriage to the contracted groom. She dies, defying this fate and joining her true love in the supernatural world.

Ethel Scholnick Potter of Newton Centre adapted "Between Two Worlds" from S. Anski's classic drama, "The Dybbuk." Her husband, S. B. Potter, has written the original musical score. The Potters are the first to produce a version of Anski's masterpiece as a musical play. There are 15 professional performers in the cast, directed by Rafael de Acha of New York. Miss Daniel and de Acha are a husband-wife theatrical team.

The three performances will be presented at 8 p.m. For tickets call 244-3305 or 332-7230. Proceeds will go to the Nantasket Youth Center in Hull.

Exorcism

Kimberly Daniel as the spirit-possessed Leah is exorcised by the Grand Rabbi Azriel, played by Irving Shuman, in the dramatic high point of "Between Two Worlds." The musical will open Sunday in Brookline.

New Metco budget passed

The School Committee approved a Metco budget for 1975-76 asking the state to reimburse the city $675,000 for teaching 350 Boston students bused voluntarily.

At its regular meeting at Bigelow Junior High School Tuesday night the eight members, with Mayor Theodore D. Mann absent, voted 7-0-1 to approve the budget, with Committeeman Herbert Regal abstaining because he thought the city was asking for too much money.

The Metco program was already approved by the School Committee earlier this year when a long-range program was adopted to increase the minority students in Newton to 9.4 percent of the student body, 444, by September, 1978.

The funding request asks for the full cost of transportation, $173,115, the full direct cost of additional and special services, $244,747, and the cost of basic instruction minus the direct cost just listed, which comes to an additional $257,794.

This will be the first year Newton has requested an amount for the basic instruction costs for all Metco students.

In September, 1974, Newton received $165,004 for 200 students, an average of $825 per pupil.

Under the new plan, Newton will receive an average of $1,930 per pupil.

The reimbursements for basic educational costs are based on a state formula used for other students attending the schools.

For elementary students, the state formula allows Newton to charge an estimated $1,315 for 1975-76, $1,842 for junior high students, and $1,956 for high school students.

For 279 elementary students, 28 junior high students, and 43 senior high students, this totals $502,540.

To arrive at the total requested reimbursement, the School Department deducted the direct costs and added the transportation costs.

The direct costs include salaries for a director, social worker, bilingual specialist, basic skills specialist, curriculum specialist, secretary, and two counselors and two psychologists.

Also included are the fringe benefits for five persons, tutorial assistance for an estimated 53 pupils, office supplies and equipment, in-service training for Newton teachers, and an outdoor education program. - -

The basic instruction costs include the costs of books and supplies and regular teacher instruction.

Katherine Jones, Metco coordinator, said she was "amazed at the marvelous adjustment of parents and staff" since 100 more students were added in January, 1975, as the first part of the program to have 9.4 percent minority enrollment.

When School Committeeman Alvin Mandell asked Mrs. Jones about the learning progress of Metco children in the schools, she said 13 of 15 who gradu ated from Newton high schools two years ago went to college, and the other two were planning to go this year.

As for other statistics on progress within the system, she did not know of any and was reluctant to have them compiled because it would lead to possibly biased comparisons with non-Metco children.

Superintendent Aaron Fink agreed with Mrs. Jones, adding that the Metco pupils were a regular part of the school system , and it would be as unfair to compile special statistics on them.

Committeeman Herbert Regal abstained frome the vote on the budget because he felt the city was charging too much.

He said, "I don't feel it should cost the community anything, but what is worse is

Buying Norumbega gets consideration

A resolution asking the mayor to buy the north parcel of the Norumbeqa land was held in the Land Use Committee this week to allow Perini Corp., owners of the land, neighbors, and the city to work further on an acceptable plan for use of the land.

Perini plans for building 224 condominiums on the north parcel and an office building on the small south parcel have been denied by the Board of Aldermen.

Ald. Richard McGrath, one of the aldermen who wanted to withhold action on the resolution, said, "The timing is bad. The neighbors should meet with Peri and work out ni a compromise without having politics get into the situation."

McGrath added that he hopes the mayor will eventually move to acquire the 16-acre piece of land, but that there should be time for negotiation.

In other action, the Land Use Committee held up action on petitions for change of zone and permissive use for a parking lot for the Newton-Waltham bank in Newton Corner .

Also held was a petition from Boston College for permission for off-street bus loading and unloading for students at 140 Commonwealth Ave. Neighbors want the bus depot to be located witihin the B.C. campus.

Approved by the Land Use Committee for action by the full Board of Aldermen June 2 was a petition from Robert Cohen for permission to build four attached townhouses on Madoc Street, over the objections of Newton Community Development Foundation President Gilbert Avery, who wanted from Cohen the same proof that the property would not drain into the adjacent conservation land as Cohen had required about the NCDF housing about to be built nearby.

Cecil Cadwell was approved by the committee for reappointment to the Newton Redevelopment Authority. His term will expire in 1980.

The reappointment of Ernest Siciliano as a park commissioner was held because of the feeling of some members of the committee and conservation groups that the park commissioners should not be the same people as members of the Planning Board but should constitute a separate body.

Ambulances

It started as an assignment . . .

Last week the aldermanic Public Health and Safety Committee voted 5-1 to allot $10,400 to update equipment in the Newton wagon ambulances. This step was taken to keep the ambulance service in the city "in business" by complying with the rules and regulations set by the State Public Health Department under the 1973 act of the legislature.

Police Chief William F. Quinn estimates that the ambulances, all manned by policemen, make approximately 3,000 runs a year. Newton has six Class VT wagon ambulances, one spare, for use while others are in repair, and one Class I ambulance.

The difference between the Class I and the Class V ambulances is size and equipment. Eventually Newton will need more Class I ambulances and will be reimbursed through the State on a 50 percent basis. The estimated cost of such an ambulance is between $24,000-30,000 depending on the type and amount of equipment desired.

According to Lois Pines, state representative, "Newton did not apply for a free ambulance from the state in time to be considered for the program." However, Representative Pines said that "if the program continues, then additional funds may be forthcoming... but the HEW grant may be in potential jeopardy."

In addition to mandating what type of equipment will be on the ambulances, the law now determines the amount of training ambulance drivers and attendants must have. By July Newton will have 27 certified and registered emergency medical technicians trained in an 81 hour emergency medical service course. Under the law, three attendants per ambulance are required.

At one time drivers and attendants were only required to take a 24 hour regular first aid course which according to Chief Quinn "every patrolman receives prior to going out on the street."

By July 1, 1976 the law directs the city to train an additional 24 people. Presently there are 36 new people being trained by the police department. Also, Chief Quinn stated these people will must spend 16-20 hours in an emergency room.

The one aldermanic vote against the expenditure came from Alderman Richard Bullwinkle who said, "I am not against good services for the city...but against the state coming to the city and saying you will do this....(without) saying what created the problem and how bad or good is the service...I want base line date data...I want to know if there are alternatives."

According to Representative Pines, there was "blatantly inadequate care throughout the state...people were dying in great numbers...(without) receiving adequate care." She sees this as a "critical piece of legislation." Mrs. Pines states that the "first five minutes after a heart attack are the most critical and if attendants are not prepared to provide heart rescue...you may race to the hospital... but the patient might not make it."

Her statement has been supported by various doctors in the city including Dr. Charles Lipson who is presently serving on the Mayor's advisory committee investigating emergency medical service. The other members of the committee are Dr. John Athans, Fire Chief Frederick Perkins, Chief Quinn and Gene Blumenricht, chairman.

. . and ended in tragedy

By ELEANOR SIEGEL

Shortly after my interview with Dr. Charles Lipson for this article, I lost my childhood friend and beloved cousin, Samuel Mirsky, age 40.

He was arriving for a visit with my family and me while we were spending the past holiday weekend in New Jersey when he suffered a heart attack.

I spent the last moments of his life desperately trying to get an ambulance. While he lay on the road in front of my parents' house, the fire department told me that no ambulances were "available."

Never have I been so helpless.

I finally succeeded in getting help. But the attendants were ill-trained and the ambulance ill-equipped. Anyone in this situation would have wanted what we wanted, speed, excellent equipment and well-trained personnel.

My cousin's life is over, but I hope that

Adonna—emphasis on pride in the dance

By RICHARD WILLIAMS
of the Graphic staff

If you're planning an Armenian wedding, you may want to make it authentic by asking Adonna Agnew to perform.

She is one of Boston's most renowned belly dancers, having performed for the king of Saudi Arabia and in the Hatch Shell on the Esplanade.

Six months ago, Adonna opened her third belly dancing studio in Piccadilly Square, where she and her staff teach the art.

Adonna majored in business at Burdett College in Lynn, where she became a market research analyst. On the side, she took ballet lessons at a dance studio which now teaches belly dancing.

In the 10 years since then, she has studied belly dancing from Moroccan, Armenian, Israeli, and Turkish men and women in Boston, New York, Washington, France, and Greece, which she enjoyed the most.

Virgainia Staples of 145 Langley Rd., Newton Centre, started taking lessons in Adonna's Newton studio after seeing her perform on television.

"I really like it," said the Newton Junior College student.

She was interested in taking lessons four years ago, but the only teacher she could find was $10 a lesson.

In the basement in the rear of Piccadilly Square, she figures it only costs her about $2 a lesson, since $35 a month pays for up to 5 lessons a week.

Virginia can tell that her body has become a lot looser since she began lessons five months ago.

After she had finished her class at 6:30 on Wednesday evening, she said, "When I came here I felt draggy, but now I feel I could keep going all night."

Adonna, who added the "A" in front of her name for a stage name, says that some of the women originally take lessons to limber up and lose weight, but stay in the class because they become involved in the music and come for the good time.

The ethnic music is the soul of the dance, which hooked Adonna when she was growing up in a Greek neighborhood in Arlington.

She loves to perform in Mideastern restaurants where the audience enjoys and respects the dance.

She makes an absolute distinction between belly dancing and "the exotic dancing you see on Washington Street in Boston."

One girl who had studied with Adonna and was performing with girls from other studios wrote to Adonna and said, "The girls from this school lack the one thing you stressed . . . class.

"They played up the sex bit.

"You instilled in us (Adonna's pupils) a sense of pride in the dance."

Learning the dance also instills pride in the dancers.

Adonna, speaking without any Greek accent, claimed that within two months women can get the feeling they dance on their own.

"All of a sudden you become a little bit of an exhibitionist," she explained, taking pride that she changed from an intorvert into an extrovert since she began dancing.

She and her dance troupe of 40 women often perform benefit shows for muscular distrophy, retarded children, and what she calls her "baby" charity, spina bifida, a muscular disease for which little research has been done.

In Newton, she has performed at the Court hearing set on revaluation next week

City Solicitor Howard Levine will go to court next Wednesday on a motion for a delay in the implementation in of revaluation in Newton.

The hearing, originally scheduled for May 28, was postponed at the request of Richard Gelerman, attorney for the 21 taxpayers that filed suit to force revaluation here in 1972.

Gelerman said he wanted to consult with his clients and determine their positions on any delay in the implementation of revaluation.

Levine will appear in Superior Court in Barnstable next Wednesday before Judge Henry Chmielinski, who originally ordered Newton be revalued by July 1, 1975 .

The judge will hear the city's motion for an extension.

Meanwhile, two Newton state representatives have filed six bills on revaluation in the House of Representatives.

Rep. Peter F. Harrington and Rep. Richard J. McGrath met with House Speaker David Bartley this week for permission to file the bills.

Harrington said the legislation was separated into six bills because "of the complexity of the situation."

The bills are:

—An act to equalize assessments in the Commonwealth and to prohibit new assessments from taking effect until all cities and towns go to new, equalized values as have been ordered by the courts in the Sudbury decision in December, 1974.

—A bill to prohibit the use of more than one method of assessment in any one community.

Harrington claims that two assessment formulas, one for commercial and one for residential, were used in Newton and says that this is illegal.

"I hope this legislation will clear up any question."

—A bill to change the law to require all municipalities to set valuation at one-third of full and fair cash value.

McGrath said this will "revive the elderly and other tax abatements allowed by state statute."

—A bill to require all persons engaged in the business of making appraisals or valuations of real property to be licensed by the State Tax Commission.

Harrington said this bill is designed to "eliminate the problem we had in Newton where inexperienced people were taken off the unemployment rolls and set to work assessing Newton homes."

According to Cole-Layer-Trumble, the firm that revalued Newton, the people sent dor door-to-door were called "listers" and it was their job to record data and measurements of houses on a standard form. The "listers" did not do the actual assessing work.

The final two proposals, Harrington said, would define the standards to be used in the assessment of residential property and provide and appeal procedure for taxpayers which would include notice and publication of assessments, notice of right to appeal, an explanation of the method of assessment, and an opportunity to review work sheets and other data collected and used in determining new valuations.

"We have found that the many inequities that have come to light in Newton are not unique to our city," Harrington stated. "Other communities have tried to achieve 100 percent valuation and have faced similar difficulties.

"We have talked with our colleagues in the Legislature and we find there is a broad base of support for our proposals.

"We hope that there will be a public hearing in June on these matters."

Dukakis to speed up use of Home Rule

Gov. Michael Dukakis said recently his administration would make a major effort to accelerate implementation of municipal home rule in the Commonwealth.

"There has been little progress in the implementation of the Home Rule Amendment since its adoption in 1966" the governor said in a policy statement distributed to his Cabinet secretaries.

"To rectify the situation, the Governor's Local Government Advisory Committee, which consists of 18 city and town officials, is forming a subcommittee to "develop a specific program for encouraging" communities to utilize home rule.

Dukakis urged the Cabinet "to support and cooperate with" the subcommittee in recommending a package of legislative reforms, developing a community education program, recommending administrative reforms, and in other steps to improve home rule.

In his statement the Governor also instructed his Cabinet secretaries to encourage agencies within their jurisdiction "to cooperate fully with the state's municipalities and assist them whereever possible." Dukakis noted that the Local Government Advisory Committee "has expressed concern" about the relationship between local governments and state administrative agencies.

Bank, neighbors agree to meeting

The Newton-Waltham Bank will negotiate with the the Newton Corner Neighborhood Association at a meeting Wednesday, June 4, to ional parking space. discuss the bank's plan for addit

At the aldermanic Land Use Committee meeting Tuesday night, members of the neighborhood and bank representative Anthony Medaglia reviewed a plan that would give the bank approximately 70 parking spaces on land that is now zoned for residential and business use.

The land on Baldwin Street opposite Underwood School would have to have at least a 15-foot wide path from the school to the parking lot of the Newton Corner Library.

Tony Pruckner from the neighborhood opposed any zoning change because it would be a precedent for other ambitious land owners to create parking lots .

He also opposed the plan because the bank is asking for 20 spaces to lease to the Gateway Center to make money to pay for the development of the lot.

The June 4 meeting will be at 8 p.m. in the Eliot Church on Centre Street in Newton Corner.

Local woman wins against flashing 'walk'

The persistence of an Auburndale woman has resulted in the statewide prohibition of the white flashing "walk" pedestrian traffic signal.

Mrs. Maralynn Johnson, 8 Weir St., crusaded for more than a year to have the dangerous device banned.

She was successful first in Newton, when she convinced the Board of Aldermen of the danger of having pedestrians told to proceed when there there would be vehicular traffic turning into their path.

Mrs. Johnson felt that the intent of the flashing walk — to tell pedestrians to proceed while watching for turning cars — was not clear and would never be understood.

Unfavorable experience in some other communities, notably Waltham, brought other crusaders to Mrs. Johnson's side in her efforts to have the white flashing walk banned in Massachusetts.

Mrs. Johnson is the creator of a new traffic signal that uses three boxes instead of the present two. The new device, which incorporates a "start" instruction into the walk-don't walk cycle, has been approved for trial by the city of Newton, but the trial has been delayed by state and federal red tape.

Brookline police assist in arrest for burglary

Police arrested two Jamaica Plain men Monday for breaking and entering in Newton after receiving a call from Brookline police to watch for the car they were driving.

At 6:05 p.m. Brookline police reported that a Blue Oldsmobile had been seen leaving an attempted break in Brookline.

Almost immediately Sgt. Kenneth B. Donovan reported seeing the car with the matching license plate parked in front of 564 Dedham St., Newton Centre.

Officers Harold J. Travers, Jr., and Paul F. Ginnetty reported seeing the car in front of the same house 15 minutes earlier while passing the house and saw two men at the door.

When approached by police, both men began walking away from the house on separate sides of the street.

Meanwhile, Travers saw a garage window broken and blood nearby.

The two men arrested for breaking and entering in the daytime were Herbert Hinton, Jr., 29, of 42 Walden St., Jamaica Plain, and Gregory M. Young, 27, of 974 Parker St., Jamaica Plain.

They were also with larceny of a moto r vehicle . The car they were driving was from Bos allegedly stolen ton earlier in the day.

2 Newton men arrested for robbery after party

Persistent and patient searching by Officer James I. Norcross for a house described by a robbery victim led to the arrest of two Newton men Saturday morning.

Arrested for unarmed robbery were Robert K. Woetzel, 44, of 286 Central St., Auburndale, and Abdo N. F. Ballester, 35, also of 286 Central St., Auburndale.

e n

Stephen Denman of Roxbury who was robbed of a diamond ring of unknown value and $30 cash, told police he was picked up by the alleged robbers outside a Boston bar at about 2:30 a.m.

At the home of the two men in Auburndale Denman told police that they smoked marijuana, and left the house at about 4:50 a.m.

While driving along Commonwealth Avenue in Newton, one of the men Denman had been partying with grabbed Denamn's throat while the driver lifted the $30 from his left pocket and took his ring.

Near Boston College Denman pleaded with the men to slow down, and he jumped from the car.

Boston College secu rity guard Frank Levias assisted Denman at first, then called Newton police.

Officer Norcross took Denman in the police cruiser to look for the house he had been at, the location of which Denman could only ink fence. describe as being near a highway with a chainl

After about 45 minutes of cruising along streets near the Massachusetts Turnpike, starting at Newton Corner, Norcross spotted the house in Auburndale that met Denman's description.

Denman asserted that that was the house, and the arrests followed shortly.

Consolidation of departments held for further elaboration

Details of Ald. Terry Morris' reorganization of the Housing Authority, Redevelopment Authority, and planning functions were called for by the aldermanic City Planning Committee this week before it would approve an act Morris wants to file with the state legislature.

Morris' plan would abolish the two authorities and the Planning Department and Planning Board, replacing it with a Department of Community Development.

The new department would be responsible for all planning functions needed by the city and would contain a citizen board of nine members that would assume the duties of the Planning Board.

The Community Development Department would serve as the present Planning Department, but would also perform the planning duties of the Housing Authority and the Redevelopment Authority.

To take over the managerial aspects of both authorities with respect to housing, there would be a Housing Services Committee or Commission to oversee the continuing, day-to-day running of the developments.

Planning Director Charles Thomas called Morris' plan "a conceptually sound idea, compatible with the (city) charter."

He pointed out that revenue-sharing from the federal government has changed radically in the past year or two, with the "block grant" (allowing the community more freedom in spending) replacing the older specific grants (such as for redevelopment).

"The only necessity for the Redevelopment Authority will be financial (as a recipient of funding). The only function of the Housing Authority is now to hire the architect and get reimbursed by the state," Thomas said.

Reaction from the Housing Authority was generally favorable to the idea, but a letter from Chairman James Miller calls the proposal "overly specific." Miller's letter notes, however, that the Authority would "be pleased" to participate in an interagency study effort aimed at developing a revised proposal.

Cecil Cadwell, chairman of the Newton Redevelopment Authority, commented in a letter than the plan needs further work. Cadwell's particular concerns were that citizen participation be ensured' that the job security of employees with tenure not be affected, and that the consolidation not affect any ongoing project. - .

City Planning Committee Chairman David Jackson asked Morris to submit the city ordinance that would follow enactment of the act by the state legislature, but commented that Morris should aim for submission to the legislature in December, not June as Morris had hoped.

Jackson will give the ordinance and act to various other committees of the Board of Aldermen and then call a "large, general meeting" on the proposal.

Magoo's appealing license suspension

Magoo's Saloon, 1391 Washington St., West Newton, has appealed its two-week license suspension by the Newton Licensing Board to the state Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission.

The ABCC will hear the appeal June 3 and has up to 30 days to return its decision on the suspension, ordered for the alleged serving of alcohol to minors.

Magoo's license was suspended effective May 24 by the Licensing Board, but the suspension was stayed until the appeal to the ABCC is decided.

Judge Franklin Flaschner continued without a finding until July 18 a complaint filed against two waitresses for alleugedly serving the minors.

Although Magoo's has been the scene of several disturbances in the past, Magoo's lawyer, Marshall Krasnow, said this week that he feels sure that "the situation is under control now."

Another establishment, in Newton Corner, recently had its license suspended for three days for serving a minor.

Teenage drinking topic for Youth Commission

The problem of teenage drinking has been tackled head-on by the Youth Commission, which held a special meeting last week to look for solutions.

At the meeting were Mayor Theodore Mann, 14 liquor-store proprietors' and several high school students.

Prevention of the purchase of liquor and resale to minors would go a long way toward solving the problem, people present agreed. Signs warning of criminal liability for such resale should be prominently posted in the retail stores was the unanimous opinion.

The identification cards available at City Hall, which do not have a picture, are unacceptable to retail dealers, they said, who accept only a driver's license.

The high school thought students said they the legal drinking age should be raised to 21. It was lowered by state referendum in 1972 from that age to 18.

Youth Commission member Joe DeNucci felt that more education about alcohol is needed in the schools.

According to Lt. Charles Feeley of the Newton police' a member of the Youth Commission advisory board, a reasonable estimate is that maximum of 5 percent of junior high and high school young people drink alcoholic beverages more than once a week.

Different views of comprehensive plan

What appeared to be an unbridgeable gap between opinions had closed considerably by the end of a City Planning Committee meeting this week, but Planning Director Charles Thomas and Planning Board Chairman Stanley Miller still approached comprehensive planning from different points of view.

Miller was presenting the reaction of the Planning Board to the "Newton Plan," Thomas' plan for getting the charter-mandated comprehensive plan done.

Miller started out by saying, "There has been no dearth of good planning in Newton, but there has been a dearth of good planning carried out."

Instead of spending years in gathering data, Miller believes that the mayor's office should propose a series of specific objectives — for example, one might be that 3 percent of housing should be multifamily.

Unless the mayor and the Board of Aldermen can develop a one-page or half-page list of objectives, no sense in "There's planning," Miller said.

"Action steps," Miller said, should then be agreed on.

About land-use planning, Miller said, "There should be very little permissive use — people should know what they can do. There should be no discretion in the amount of land for apartments."

Citizen input should be heavy at the beginning and heavy at the end, Miller said, but should not be obtained by hearings in the middle of the comprehensive planning process.

Planning Director Thomas disagreed on some points with Miller, specifically on the opinion that objectives should be announced before "the needs of the community" are known and the Planning Department "finds out what's what."

Thomas' vision of the comprehensive planning process includes several years of data gathering' followed by more time in putting the information together.

Snags develop in best-laid plans, however, and two studies that were due last year, one on housing and one on population, have been stuck for a year because of lack of Planning Department staff and other commitments of the department.

Miller wants action all along the way; Thomas sees comprehhensive planning as a cyclical process that never ends.

Although the two men were closer at the end of the discussion than at the beginning, Thomas said, "We are fundamentally different in approach — we have to do the inventories and learn the character of the city first."

Miller said, "I think top management should develop goals, then develop the action steps to implement them."

Miller's Planning Board is responsible for making recommendations on the comprehensive plan. The Newton Plan is only a plan for making the comprehensive plan.

School Committee

Student scholarship granted

The School Committee approved giving 39 high school students scholarships worth $16,000, and voted to remove pay telephones from four elementary schools.

At its meeting Tuesday night at Bigelow Junior High School, the eight members, with the mayor absent, appproved the recommendations from the two high schools for the Scovell Trust Fund Scholarship Awards.

Anthony J. Temmallo of the Newton North ment heads the 15-teacher committee English depart to review students' applications.

He told the School Committee that the 26 students from North were all in financial need, as far as the review committee could determine from confi dential records submitted.

Those 26 students, not named at the meeting, will receive $10,700 in scholarships .

Robert S. Carey from South High's English department said from his school 13 students will receive a total of $5,350.

Chairwoman Eleanor Rosenblum explained that the trust fund was found four years a go by a graduate student who was looking for scholarship funds at the Middlesex County Probate Court .

No one at the School Committee meeting knew exactly who Scovell was, except that he lived in Newton, had several children, and wanted to see not only the brilliant but the hard-working students encouraged to continue learning.

The School Committee voted to remove the pay telephones in Oak Hill, Memorial, Mason-Rice, and Spaulding Schoolsafter a motion by Alvin Mandell.

During the past year, the phones have cost the the taxpayers $508 to maintain, since they were not used enough to cover the basic fee charged by the phone company.

The phones at the junior and senior high schools are used enough so the phone company does not assess a service charge.

Paul Ash a candidate for Ward 7 School Committee seat

Paul B. Ash, 23 John St., Newton Centre, has announced his candidacy for the Newton School Committee seat in Ward 7.

In making his announcement Ash said:

"For many week I have been

receiving letters and telephone calls urging me to run for School Committee. I see it as my duty now to help provide the highest quality education for all Newton students without increasing the ever-rising school budget.

"I would like to give the Newton taxpayers a School Committee member who is willing to listen to and do his best to solve the various educational problems in the community.

"As an educator and as a proud resident of Newton, I want to see the best education possible for our youth. Presently, I am disappointed in the educational system in the city because many of the present School Committee members are unresponsive to community needs."

Ash is a chemistry teacher in the Dover-Sherborn Regional High School. He has held many advisory positions within the school and is currently negotiations chairman and president of the Dover-Sherborn Teachers' Association.

"An ideal School Committee member is someone who understands the workings of education at all levels," Ash observed.

"As a classroom teacher, I have worked closely with students and parents," he said, "and I have first-hand knowledge of the rising costs of classroom materials and I know of ways to keep these costs down."

"I am in full support of the extremely valuable Chapter 766 program for students with special needs," Ash went on to say, "an area with which I am very familiar. Our city must continue to take further strides in meeting the needs of all students."

"As president of the Dover-Sherborn Teachers' Association"' Ash said, "I have worked closely with my fellow teachers, the administration and the School Committees of both Dover and Sherborn.

"These experiences have enabled me to see other sides of important issues. A good School Committee member should be knowledgeable in all of these educational areas."

Ash has expressed a desire to reduce the school budget "without hindering the excellence of education.

"When 7,100 people, that is, more than 30 percent of property owners in the city, appeal their property appraisals, something has to be done," Ash said. "Quality education does not mean spiraling taxes. There are many areas in the school budget that can be cut without affecting the high quality of education in the classroom."

Ash also expressed a desire to solicit more community involvement in important issues.

"Many of the members of the present School Committee are so autocratic that they totally ignore some important community issues," he explained. "They have even been known to take a vote on a motion first, and then let the public speak to the motion.

"The community should be involved at all levels of the

No minor matter

Ever since the state lawmakers decided that if a kid was old enough to fight he was old enough to drink, problems have been created for local authorities.

It used to be that 21-year-olds bought booze for 18-year-olds. Now the latter are buying for kids two to four years their junior.

Incredible as it may seem, teenagers who obviously aren't yet 18 have been having no trouble whatsoever buying beer and liquor. It's true that the lower drinking age has made it more difficult for the person behind the counter to tell a customer's age. It therefore is increasingly important that whenever in doubt, proof of age be demanded.

Infractions of the law pertaining to the sale or delivery of alcoholic beverages to minors constitute serious offenses. Penalties for violations are spelled out under sections of Chapter 138 of the general laws. A minor who falsifies his age can be fined anywhere from $10 to $100. A minor who uses an altered identification card or uses someone else's can be fined up to $200 and be imprisoned up to three months. A minor carrying liquor can be fined up to $50, and if in an automobile the driver can have his license taken away. Package stores selling to minors are liable to fines as well as license revocation.

An incredible court ruling

With all the criminals who are free on technicalities in courtrooms across Massachusetts and throughout the UNited States, it seems incredible that a 28-year-old mother should be faced wit the prospect of going to prison on Friday because she killed her boy friend in self defense in the cellar of her home in order to save her life and the lives of her two children.

In upholding the conviction of Mrs. Roberta Shaffer, the Massachusetts Supreme Court rendered a decision which makes absolutely no sense at all and flies in the face of long accepted and established law that a man's home is "his castle and fortress."

The court ignored the time-honored principle that a man has a right to defend himself against injury and violence in his own home. Judge Benjamin N. Cardozo, later a member of the U.S. Supreme Court in 1914, wrote: "It is not now and never has been the law that a man assaulted in his own dwelling is bound to retreat."

The Massachusetts Supreme Court, in a shocking ruling, found against Mrs. Shaffer because she didn't retreat. The court held that she should have run out of the cellar. Mrs. Shaffer says there was no way she could have run out of the cellar with her two children and escaped alive.

Apparently, there is no claim that Mrs. Shaffer didn't tell the truth. What she did wrong, in the eyes of the court, was stand her ground, take a rifle from the wall in her cellar and shoot it.

This pathetic young woman needs help. She should get it in the form of a commutation from Governor Dukakis of her "indeterminate sentence" of six months to five years. She has a daughter Evie, who suffers from cystic fibrosis, an incurable disease, must take 60 pills a day, sleep in a mist tent and undergo at least an hour of therapy a day.

The cause of justice will not be misserved if this young mother is allowed to stay home and take care of her ailing 10 year-old daughter who probably will not live to be 20. The cross Mrs. Shaffer bears is heavy enough. If you agree, drop a note to Governor Dukakis and urge the commutation of her sentence.

Detente, Shriver and Siberian polecats

Commentary by John D. Lofton Jr.

WASHINGTON — Lost in the recent flap over who Gov. George Wallace feels the United States should have sided with in World War II, were some real pearls of wisdom as to what our foreign policy should be as regards the Soviet Union.

In his interview with a group of foreign journalists a couple of months ago — which for some reason the Washington Post just found out about and stuck on its front page — Wallace declared:

'Too bad George wasn't president back in the old days.'

"My foreign policy, if I were the President, would be based on the fact that you can't trust a Communist. You never have been able to trust 'em. I don't believe in confrontation. I believe in negotiation and I believe in detente. But while I'm detenting, as they say, I wouldn't turn my back on them."

Amen.

A common American view notwithstanding, from the Russian point of view, Soviet-American detente does not signify an end to the adversary relationship between our two countries. People like Sargent Shriver, who returned from a trip to the U.S.S.R. peddling the line that the Russians have done "little or nothing in the way of propagandizing to exploit American setbacks" in foreign policy, simply don't know what they're taling about.

For example, in broadcasts in Arabic to the Middle East, the Soviets are saying that the United States, which was unable to save its allies in South Vietnam, cannot save Israel from an ultimate defeat by the Arabs.

is message is also reportedly being distributed to the rest of the world by the Russian news agency Tass, and is being told to visitors to the Soviet Embassy in Washington.

Anyone who watches the Soviets closely and studies what they say about detente, knows that they rarely miss an opportunity to give Uncle Sam the shaft. As Prof. Vladimir Petrov of George Washington University's Institute for Sino-Soviet Studies notes in his study "U.S.-Soviet Detente: Past and Future" ("published by the American Enterprise Institute):

"A great many people, including some at the upper rungs of the U.S. Government, feel that since we have largely abandoned crusading against Communism, the Soviets must somehow reciprocate by accommodating our interests. The fact is that this principle of reciprocity has never been acknowledged in Moscow; on the contrary, Soviet leaders have repeatedly stressed that detente does not mean an end to the struggle between the two political systems."

Indeed. And while President Ford may not envision detente as a license for the Russians to fish in troubled waters, the evidence clearly shows the Russians disagree.

In a revealing article in a current Moscow periodical, A.I. Sobolev, chief of the Department of History of the International Communist Movement at the Institute of Marxism-Leninism, candidly admits that detente — or peaceful coexistence, as the Soviets call it — is, in the final analysis, only a tactic in the battle to Communize the world. He writes:

"Peaceful coexistence is a specific but essentially basic form of the class struggle in the world arena between ascendant socialism and a capitalism which is going through a period of acute crisis, a leading form of solving the chief contradiction of the epoch."

Peaceful coexistence "is a specific and highly effective form of the class antagonism and historic rivalry between world socialism and world capitalism. This policy is an integral part of the world revolutionary process."

Whatever there is to say bad about the Cold War, there was at least a certain intellectual honesty about it. We knew where the Russians stood and they knew where we stood. During the Cold War, the Russians were out to bury us and we were out to stop them. Now, with detente, the Soviets are still out to bury us, but with our government's insistence that we give them trade, aid, longterm credits and sophisticated computer technology, we are out to help them bury us.

It doesn't make much sense, does it?

But one should not despair. As its supporters are quick to point out, detente is not a totally one-way street, beneficial only to the Soviet Union.

The United States also benefits. And so we do. An Interior Department press release tells how soon, in compliance with the U.S.-U.S.S.R Environmental Protection Agreement of 1972, the Russians will allow a group of American scientists to come to Russia to study the Siberian polecat.

Charles Bronson's hangup

By Norton Mockridge

NEW YORK — Once, many years ago, I used to visit my dentist almost every week. Even though he kept telling me there was nothing wrong with my teeth. And there wasn't too much wrong with my eyes, either; I was – I blush to admit it – enamored of his beautiful blonde assistant.

(After a while I discovered that it was cheaper to tell her of my admiration and take her out to dinner then it was to pay the dentist for all the unnecessary calls, but that's another story.)

I've never mentioned that whole nutty episode until now – I thought it was too kookie to hang out for all the world to see – but today I learned that Charles Bronson did pretty much the same thing!

Seems that Charles, who's coming up next in "Breakout" and "Hard Times," does quite a bit of painting for relaxation. (Canvas, not walls.) Anyway, he got so interested that he bought a gallery in Beverly Hills and put on a show for three prominent painters. On the sly, he slipped in a few of his own paintings and, much to his surprise, they sold immediately!

Then, again to his surprise, he found he MISSED his painting. He was told that one of them had been bought by a dentist and was hanging in the doctor's office. So, he began going to the dentist, just to look at his painting.

The dentist assured Charles that his teeth were in fine condition, but still the actor kept dropping in. Finally, the dentist caught on and sold the painting back to Bronson. Then the actor tracked down the other paintings he'd sold and, after a lot of bargaining, bought them back, too.

"Those canvasses," he told me, "are graphic expressions of people and places that represented some of the frustrations of my early years. And now I don't want them exhibited anywhere but in my own home."

When I consider what it cost Bronson to buy back the paintings, I'm glad that what drew me to the dentist's office was a goil, not an oil!

Dora Elizabeth Hayes of Scotia, N.Y., sends me a newspaper clipping that tells about a woman driver who was arrested after her car struck a truck. The clipping said: "She was arraigned yesterday in city police court on charges of driving while intoxicated, no insurance, and failure to keep tight."

Seems unfair, doesn't it? Nobody can stay tight forever!

There was an actor at La Scala the other night who smiled when somebody asked if he'd just got divorced.

"It's true," he said, "and I'm happy, happy, happy. My wife got the car, the house and custody of our four kids. I didn't get stuck with anything!"

One of my best grafiti spies, Rita Faber, of Hawthorne, N.J., has come up with a pretty package for May:

"The meek shall inherit the dearth.

Crime does not pay (as well as politics).

This license plate was made by a former member of the White House staff.

Boycott Gripes.

America is suffering from a degeneration gap!

Telephone, electric and gas companies are public futilities.

Movies aren't better than ever—it's just that real life is WORSE than ever!"

Washington Window

Credibility, legitimacy, authority

By Arnold B. Sawislak, Washington correspondent for United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) — During the late 1960's, a number of American social scientists began agonizing about the loss of credibility, legitimacy and authority by the national government.

What they were saying in their special jargon was that an increasing number of Americans (1) didn't believe what their government said was true, (2) didn't consider its actions to be legal, right or representative of their wishes and (3) didn't feel a need to do what the government asked or order them to do.

This obviously was a serious business. Many concluded that they were witnessing the collapse of viable government in the United States. But it didn't happen in the 1960's and it didn't happen in the 1970's, when some even worse things occurred. And, while some of the academics still hold that the nation is going to hell, there isn't anything like the chorus of doomsaying now that we heard a few years back.

Perhaps the social scientists who foresaw the abyss for this country were wrong —not about what was clearly taking place but what it would lead to. They followed the trend lines leading downward to sure anarchy and chaos, but overlooked the possibility that what they were observing was change, not disintegration.

Thus, it is possible that the decline in the government's credibility might have leveled off at a plateau of healthy skepticism about the statements and promises of those who hold or seek power. The feeling that government had cheated them might stop at a point where the public would demand that their leaders follow the rules and listen to the people.

And what appeared to be the most serious development, a growing disrespect for governmental authority, might just turn out to be a resurgence of two qualities that are supposed to be a priceless part of the American character — independent judgment and free choice.

None of this is to say that this country has reached some state of Nirvana in which all problems will be solved and the future will be safe and happy. It just means that there has been some change and it might not be so bad.

The occasion for examining this possibility is the aftermath of the Mayaguez affair. It appears from the inexact measure of media and random public opinion that Americans largely approved of President Ford's action in using military force to free the boat and its crew.

It will take the testimony of scientific public opinion polling to verify the impression, but it seemed that the President probably had the majority support of his constituents.

But that did not keep those who disagreed with Ford's action from speaking out in the most explicit terms. Some people, to judge by letters to newspapers here, frankly doubted the government's statement that the ship was peacefully plying the sea lanes and was set upon for no reason by "pirates."

Others sharply criticized the use of the Air Force and Marines without exhausting all diplomatic avenues, including intercession by the United Nations. And some questioned the loss of life and the efficiency of the military action itself.

These dissenters might be wrong, but if they are right they are doing the majority a greater service than themselves.

It is necessary to look no farther back in history than 11 years to illustrate the point: The vote on the Gulf of Tonkin resolution that committed U.S. military might to Vietnam in August of 1964 was 414 to 0 in the House and 88 to 2 in the Senate.

Clarification

To the Editor:

A letter appearing in your paper May 15, re Fire Department Memorial Services necessitates a reply from this department to clarify some observations made by the writer. We are most appreciative that he has taken the time and effort to graciously exalt in print the merit and meaning of the occasion. Most emphatically we agree with the writer that a larger citizen response should be in evidence. However, we do take exception to two points; viz:

a. Combined Fire and Police Memorial Service: Firemen's Memorial Sunday is a day observed by all Fire Departments throughout the country. A common bond is thus established among the nation's fire fighters in commemorating deceased fire fighters. in order to pay proper respects to our own, It is a ceremony that' cannot be shared jointly with others.

b. The author writes "the honor guard march Falstaffianly, their uniforms shabby and unpressed, their paraded attention irregular." To this extent we would remind the letter writer that although we are considered a quasi-military organization our training program does not incorporate, nor does time permit, military close order drills, parade formation, color guard rituals, etc.

We are concerned full time with fire suppression, fire prevention, fire related training, etc. These firefighters respond, usually in significant numbers and always on their time off, for the express purpose of observing this day in commemoration of department members of the fire service.

Many are veterans of military training long forgotten since the end of World War II. Under the circumstances we believe they conduct themselves with dignity, pride and acceptable bearing on this solemn occasion.

A real original

To the Editor:

Thursday evening, May 22, was a night to remember. Twenty-one young men and women, students at Newton North High School, under the able and unique guidance of Henry Lasker, had their original musical compositions performed.

Gary Good and Raymond Smith performed these works with their respective musical groups, and those of us who were in the audience at Newton North were impressed by a program that was varied and remarkable. I doubt that any other high school in the country has a music department that can compare with that of Newton North.

These young people displayed their talents, and talent they have, as did the members of the orchestra, band, chorus, and soloists who performed the compositions.

The hard work that went into this effort is a testament to what our young people are capable of accomplishing with motivation and guidance. Thank you, Mr. Lasker.

Revaluation proves need for reform

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter as a concerned resident and property owner in the City of Newton. Although I was a candidate for State Representative in 1974, I am not a candidate for any municipal office in an upcoming election.

The current 100 percent valuation of property in Newton has spotlighted the need for reform of the state and local tax system in Massachusetts.

If tax reform is characterized by shifting the tax burden from the poor to the rich, Massachusetts has not had tax reform. At best, there has been an occasional shift of the burden between the poor and middle class. Because the property tax is so regressive and so full of inequities, property tax relief and reform is desperately needed.

Aside from the fact that determining value can never be an entirely objective process, what troubles me about revaluation is that it shifts the tax burden from the business community to the residential community. For example, prior to the court-ordered revaluation, the properties of the utility companies have always been assessed at 100 percent valuation. That value is determined by the Department of Corporations and Taxation. They are currently taxed at the present tax rate of $150.40 on full value of their property. Revaluation would make their present 100 percent assessment taxed at a much lower rate, $47.50. This means that the utility companies would be paying less than one third of what they are now paying. A property-tax classification system would allow residential property to be taxed at lower rates than commercial and industrial properties. In order to have a property tax classification system in Massachusetts the State Constitution must be amended. That, along with the much needed Graduated Income Tax, has been rejected by the voters in past state elections. I believe that the lack of popular support reflects, in part, a lack of understanding of the tax system by citizens.

To tax all kinds of personal and real property alike, according to its full value and at uniform rates, is to ignore wide differences in the ability of various classes of property-owners to pay taxes. Property tax classification would obligate owners of certain properties to contribute greater to the support of government in relation to their greater ability to do so.

Also, I believe that property-tax relief programs or "circuit breakers" would relieve the burden of the property-tax on low and middle-income families. The "circuit breaker" concept is that no one should pay more than a certain percentage of their income for property taxes. This would be especially helpful to our elderly residents who live on fixed incomes and pensions.

Not until the people of Massachusetts educate themselves to understand the issues involved in such reforms will the prospects of meaningful change be realized.

'People to people'

To the Editor:

I was pleased to read Eleanor Siegel's enthusiastic review of the Newton North High School trip to Soviet Russia. However, all the students interviewed neglected to mention one item to which I would like to call attention.

Since "people to people" contact was the goal of the trip, the art teachers prepared a portfolio of student art work and the music department prepared a gift of music - also from our children. A lot of young people and teachers participated in this effort to present another view of our city, and I don't think their efforts should be unnoticed.

Cuts in social services

To the Editor:

I am writing to register my protest against proposed budget cuts in social services, assistance payments and medical assistance.

My particular interest is in cuts to day care programs and counseling services, but I am appalled at the proposed general cuts or unincreased funding of all programs. My letter is not meant as a personal plea for help, but to present my own particular situation as an example of the very great need of people in situations like mine.

As a single parent who has always been the sole support of my particular family (my daughter and myself), I am very conscious of the absolute necessity for day care services to working parents.

I receive no support payments from my ex-husband; and my daughter and I live in a small, one-bedroom apartment. I have been receiving subsidy assistance from the Newton Housing Authority since October, 1974, but when I reported to them (as I understand many people don't even bother to do) my cost of living increase in pay (approximately $59 per month), they raised by rent from $71 to $130.

This means they took all of my raise plus some, since may raise of $59 was before taxes and their increase was not. In addition, this means that none of my cost of living increase can be spent on rising food prices, my biggest monthly expense aside from rent. And from all the literature published on food stamps, my income is too high to qualify for them.

When I asked the Newton Housing Authority if I could appeal the decision, I was told that I was one of the highest income people in that particular bracket of rent subsidy. Since I earn only $6,909 before taxes, I was rather surprised to hear that.

Please think for a minute how well you would be able to support two members of your family on that amount per year. It means that, effective September, when I receive the automatic yearly raise given all secretaries who work for the Newton school system, I am sure to lose my rent subsidy completely.

I was, therefore, further dismayed to attend a meeting of my daughter's after school day care program and hear that day care funds were to be cut or not increased and there will almost definitely be an increased case load each year.

I currently receive a full scholarship for my child to attend this very necessary program while I work full time. If I lose that scholarship, the charge for day care will be $25 per week, an incredible amount of money to someone like myself.

Since I understand welfare services are also to be cut, especially to employable people under 40, where does someone like myself go for help?

During the 1973-74 school year, my daughter and I went weekly to the Newton Guidance Clinic for counseling services. We were charged $1 per weekly session, very reasonable despite the fact that the service was negligible. This year, when we returned to them, I was informed that the service would now be $7 per session.

I'm not very adept at percentages, but I believe that represents a 700 percent increase. They agreed, however, to come down to 500 percent, $5 per session.

In addition, they could not provide a male counselor which was recommended by the previous counselor and others involved. Further, when we requested a group session, recommended by my daughter's teacher, we were told there wasn't one available at the time, only one for boys. Why not one for boys and girls?

They agreed to work on arranging a male counselor and to call "next week." At least a month or more later, I received a letter stating again they had no male and again offering a female.

Since my daughter resisted the idea of a female counselor, there seemed little value in forcing her to take part in something she resisted. At this point, I gave up and sought my own help. I was fortunate to be able to arrange for a male counselor at the rate of $3.50 per session. That really digs into my budget, and I hear counseling services are to be cut!

What about families who cannot afford the special help without which they cannot survive?

Since it hardly seems fair to penalize people because they don't earn enough money to support their families or because they cannot find jobs they need, I hope you will reconsider the proposed cuts or decreased budgets in social services, assistance payments and medical assistance.

The truth about heroes

To the Editor:

The sudden surge of editorial columns by syndicated columnists on the Newton Graphic editorial page improves the paper and gives it real life, but I've got some cotton to pick with Virginia Payette's column of May 22.

She doesn't like the fact that some Yale prof took some wild slams at our historical heroes like Benjamin Franklin (a dirty old man for chasing ladies in the French court) and old George (who was really one crummy general) and Nathan Hale (who never said anything more exciting than "but dey ordered me to do it"). And a whole bunch of heroes we revere were put down.

Well, if there's one thing I don't like, it's a putdown, unless it happens to be the truth. Virginia prefers tantasy, heroes and glamor.

Maybe old George was a lousy general who could have won the war hands down, and I don't doubt for a second he made some bad mistakes, but the truth of what he was and what he wasn't doesn't frighten me one iota.

And maybe Nathan Hale shouted wildly, "All's fair in love and war," or "but they made me do it," instead of "Give me liberty or give me death." Whatever's the truth is the truth and I don't like building heroes for the sake of building heroes if they ain't really heroes. After all, we fought for liberty and we won, and that's where it's at.

Well, it seems columnist Virginia likes heroes and doesn't like some old Ivy League prof pointing out the truth about George and Nathan and Paul Revere and Ben. She wants them to be glamorous and false and she wants us all to live in historical castles in the sky. Maybe she even wishes the truth about Richard Nixon was never revealed because it won't make good reading in generations to come.

I have no doubt that Ben Franklin chased a few ladies in the French court when he was ambassador to that country. Maybe he fell in love a few times. Good old Ben. That's the way I see 'im and he's still my hero.

And maybe George could have won the war hands down, but lost battles because he was stupid. I have no doubt that in part this was true, but he stuck it out, stupid or not, and gave his all to the end until he won. He's still my hero.

And maybe Paul never made it to Concord or Lexington, but he rode as far and as hard as he could and got the message across one way or another to a lot of people that the "British were coming."

And like the prof said, Nathan Hale didn't say what he said, but he fought for something important.

Protest

Dear Mayor Mann,

We would like to go on record in protest of the revaluation as done by the Cole-Layer-Trumble Company.

There are so very many variations of assessments of houses in the same neighborhood of approximately the same size and condition, that you wonder how they can possibly justify their figures.

We believe that in view of all these discrepancies, we have a legitimate reason for going back to the Court to fight acceptance of the revaluations.

We do hope that you, as our elected representative in this matter, will consider protesting these figures in the interest of all Newton Citizens.

It seems as though single dwellings have been hit the hardest, causing great financial hardships at this time because of Mass unemployment, inflation, and the heavy tax burden throughout our City and State. The Newton School Committee is not innocent when it comes to tightening their belts as far as their budget is concerned. Many of our Senior Citizens will suffer needlessly because of this revaluation; also our churches and synagogues.

You have a moral responsibility to all Newton residents. Please review and give this problem your undivided attention, and may the good Lord bless you with the grace to do what is right.

Mofenson to fight cut in funding for Community Service Center

Rep. David J. Mofenson (D-Newton), House chairman of the Committee on Human Services and Elderly Affairs, said that he will meet shortly with the Commissioner of Youth Services, Joseph Leavey, to try to restore delinquency-prevention funding for Newton which has been cut from the 1976 fiscal-year budget.

As of June 30, 1975, all state grants to cities and towns for delinquency prevention programs are scheduled to be terminated. Newton stands to lose over $21,000.

In last year's Department of Youth Services budget of $16 million, $1.13 million was granted to cities, towns, and private agencies to develop and provide community-based programs for teenagers. This money supported 47 programs in 35 communities including Newton. Programs receiving support include drop-in centers, job banks, alternative schools, education and recreation counseling, and the hiring of youth coordinators. Despite an increase in next year's budget to $17.1 million there is no appropriation for delinquency prevention grants.

"I strongly believe that these cuts are a grave mistake," Rep. Mofenson said. "Whatever short-term benefits might accrue to this budgetary consideration, they will surely be lost in long-run costs to the youth of Newton."

"There are many areas where the budget can be cut, but this is definitely not one of them," he said. "For the past eight years delinquency-prevention funds have provided a wide variety of services to young persons in Newton. Thousands of teenagers have been served by the Newton Community Service Centers. The termination of the major funding source of these programs will likely result in greater costs to the city and state due to increased delinquency and youth problems."

The Newton Community Service Centers, Inc. through the City of Newton has been the recipient of grant monies from DYS for seven years. This grant is the backbone of the adolescent services for the Community Center. The Adolescent Project served a combined total of over 4700 teenagers and approximately 3000 adults. Services included free employment aid, job counseling, drug-abuse treatment, telephone counselling and referral, group counseling, specialized workshops, alternative housing, outreach counseling, and social and recreational programs.

How can you help them "find themselves"?

If you can help your young people feel there's a law of good governing their lives, you're giving them something to hold to.

And there is such a law. It's rooted in God, divine Principle, and His love for each of His children.

Perhaps you could offer your teen-agers the opportunity to attend a Christian Science Sunday School. They can learn more about the Bible and Christ Jesus' teachings, and how to experience God's law of good. Anyone up to age 20 is welcome.

Community spirit

To the Editor:

With the awakening of spring, so too has neighborhood spirit flourished. On May 10, Community Ventures Inc. held its annual Spring Carnival complete with pony rides. Everyone enjoyed a fun day and due to the combined efforts of many people, Community Ventures realized a profit of $465 to benefit the children of Newton Corner Area.

A large "thanks" must be extended to Andy Marshall and the residents of Waterston Rd. who each year allow the street to be closed. A special "thanks" to "Fat" Pellegrini who donated his bus and drove parents and children to and from the Carnival from the Lincoln-Elliot School. "Thanks" to Bob Jackson, principal of Lincoln-Elliot School; Mrs. Cam Nadeau, Principal of Underwood School; Margaret Adams; April Bartleson; Ben Caira; Lee Capuzzo; Lois Coyle; Jackie D'Angelo; Yana Desimone; Frieda Farina; Marilyn Flanagan; Jessica Fucci; Ellen Leary; Janet, Gordon, and Duncan Marshall; Allison McGowan; Mary Mullen; Pat & Jack O'Connor; Ollie Pasquarosa; Sylvia Roderick; Theresa Sauro; Irma Selling; Tom Skinner; David Teplow; Iris Tolbert; Charlotte Wall and the Eugene O'Connor Stables, in Littleton.

POT ROAST

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Police burned nearly 900 pounds of marijuana —valued at $300,000 —in a bonfire at a public dump.

The weed was discovered growing on a 20-acre plot 50 miles outside the Argentine capital. Several arrests were made and police were searching for further suspects.

decision-making process when the community will be directly affected by the decisions.

"For example, if and when schools are closed in Newton due to declining enrollment, parents should be involved. The guidelines from the Citizens Advisory Committee on Declining Enrollment is not enough. The School Committee should not be allowed to close a school without soliciting the parents as to how the closing will affect the community, not just the tax rate."

Regarding the possible closing of schools due to declining enrollment, Ash has stated that he supports the neighborhood school concept. He said he feels the neighborhood school is the "heart of the community," and it must be preserved until there are "no practical ways to keep it open."

He also believes that the small amount of money that can be saved by closing a school is "insignificant" when compared to the ill-effect it would have on the community.

Ash attended Newton schools and is a graduate of Newton South High School. He received his bachelor of science degree in chemistry at Worcester Polytechnic Insti he was tute where elected to "Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities."

He later received his MA in teaching at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

Ash is married to the former Beverly Stone of Newton.

Metco budget

that we're going to be making a profit."

He said the present Newton formula gives the city "clearly more than it costs us, which is clearly wrong."

Fink said when Newton was only accepting a small number of Boston students, there was not much cost to the community.

But now "If the students were not here, there is no doubt that we could reduce our staff" by a proportional amount, Fink said.

Committeman Alvin Mandell defended the $675,000 request. He reminded the Committee that the reimbursement does not include the debt payment on the schools and feels the charge is a balance for Newton's loss on the state's reimbursement to the city on the "Cherry Sheet."

Regal's remarks about profit-making also stirred up strong disagreement from Committee members Manuel Beckwith and Gerard Byrne.

According to Mrs. Jones, the state will not approve the budget until August, and if it is not appproved, the School Committee has said before there will be no Metco program.

. . . and ended in tragedy

anyone reading this interview will think in personal terms about the kind of emergency medical service we want in our city. . .

Anyone watching the television show "Emergency" has seen the model type of emergency service envisioned by Dr. Charles Lipson, who has written for the mayor's advisory committee on medical emergency services.

The other members of the committee are Gene Blumenricht, chairman, Fire Chief Frederick Perkins, Police Chief William F. Quinn and Dr. John Athans.

They are wrestling with the "multiple problems, both financial and philosophical" according to Dr. Lipson, of implementing an ideal emergency medical service.

Under Dr. Lipson's plan "as many people as possible would be trained as first responders at the 81-hour level and they would get to the scene as fast as possible...they would not transport anyone, but call an ambulance if needed."

In Seattle, 75,000 people were trained to do cardiac pulmonary resusitation. Of these people, a percentage included high school students. The city found a sharp decline in the number of persons dying from heart attacks.

If an ambulance were needed, the first responders would call for one. The ambulance that would be sent would be a Class I ambulance with attendants who were paramedics trained with 200-400 hours of training.

Dr. Lipson predicts that a "full advance life support system in Newton would probably save 1-3 lives a month from heart attack alone.

In the kind of emergency service Dr. Lipson envisions, the dispatcher would be trained in an 81 hour course. By virtue of training and experience, the dispatcher could conceivably determine, on the spot, if an ambulance were needed. Dr. Lipson also spoke hopefully of a mobile intensive care unit, if "this works out." This could include voice communication and electrocardiogram equipment. With the voice equipment, the doctor and paramedic could discuss what is going on.

Proper equipment, as well as trained attendants, is vital to such a life support system. Until the new law, Newton ambulances were lacking even spinal boards to protect victims of broken necks and patient survived, he could have become now, the city spends $50-100,000 a year.

Although there were respirators on the wagon ambulances, Dr. Lipson said "many older respirators don't work well...the new ones work better and can be taken into someone's living room." The respirators are presently being replaced.

While the equipment is being replaced, it is clear that even more lives could be saved with the addition of such equipment as a defibrillator, to start a patients heart beating.

Previously, said Dr. Lipson, the thinking was that speed could save lives. However, new studies are showing that attention on the scene could save even more lives. In Newton alone, sources close to the police department say that there are 100 sudden deaths a year.

According to Dr. Lipson, a patient may be revived in the first 3-4 minutes of death with damage. Proper care can also reduce the amount of damage done to a patients' heart in the first minutes of a heart attack. "Heart damage progresses in the coronary victim for 3-4 days...but the greatest damage occurs early.

The basic ambulance cost is $24,000; however, with the addition of radio telemetry and equipment such as a defibrillator, the cost could rise to $30,000. Dr. Lipson said that national figures show that the cost of running such an emergency service would be in the vicinity of $300,000 per year including three ambulance and a program of continuing education. Right now, the city spends $50-100'000 a year.

However, he added, that it is his personal conviction the city could recoup much of this money by charging for the service.

In addition to concerning himself about the mechanics of a life support system, Dr. Lipson is engaging in preliminary discussion with someone in the school department about teaching Cardiac Pulmonary Rescusitation to high school students ....possibly as part of their requirement for graduation. He said it would take "very little investment" and the Charles River Medical District Medical Society would most likely cooperate in such a program.

More immediately Dr. Lipson and a group of doctors have subcontracted with the Massachusetts Bay Community College to begin teaching an emergency medical service course as of Jan. 1, 1976. Students taking the course would be entitled to five college credits. He hopes to offer the certificate course, paramedic materials and an A.A. degree course for those who want to take the entire offering. "I hope to turn this into a community resource for Eastern Massachusetts'" said Dr. Lipson.

In talking about a model emergency medical services Dr. Lipson stressed that "in no way should this be construed that the police are doing a bad job...they are doing an excellent job.

"However, they were trained by old standards...by those standards they are doing a superb job...now we have different standards."

The new standards that Dr. Lipson is speaking about may be as someone described them "pie in the sky." But when you are waiting for emergency medical service for someone you care about, then you too will hope this can become a concrete plan, meticulously carried out.

Assisting

Molly Campbell was recently named assistant director of the Open College, a continuing education program for adult women at Pine Manor Junior College in Chestnut Hill.

Sen. Birch Bayh speaks here Friday

Indiana Senator Birch Bayh, chief Congressional sponsor of voting rights for 18-year-olds and the Equal Rights Amendment, will deliver a major policy address on "The New Internationalism" at Bigelow Junior High School in Newton Friday, May 30, at 8:30 p.m.

Bayh's appearance is part of the series "Presidential Politics '76: the Issues and the Candidates" sponsored by Citizens for Participation in Political Action (CPPAX), the Massachusetts new politics organization. Though Bayh is not a declared candidate for the presidency, he is frequently mentioned as a potential contender for the Democratic nomination. He was a candidate briefly in 1971, until his wife's illness caused him to withdraw.

As chairman of the Senate's subcommittee on constitutional amendments, Bayh has been a leader in the movement to reform the federal system through structural changes.

Bayh's speech at the Bigelow school is the fifth in CPPAX's Presidential Politics series which is designed to expose Massachusetts voters to potential candidates well in advance of the primary election. Next on the schedule is Georgia State Senator Julian Bond who will speak at Boston University's Morse Auditorium on Sunday, June 22.

Tickets to Senator Bayh's speech are available for $2 at the door. Following Senator Bayh's speech, there will be an opportunity for questions from the floor. Bigelow Junior High is at 42 Vernon St. in Newton Corner at the intersection of Park and Vernon Streets.

Bellotti will be guest at party

The Massachusetts Chapter of Americans for Democratic Action has announced that Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti will be the featured guest at its annual fundraising event Friday evening, June 6 at the home of Alan and Nancy Korman, 35 Wykeham Rd., West Newton. The Trafford String Trio will provide the musical entertainment.

Mrs. Korman, Vice President of the Massachusetts ADA was an active leader in the campaigns of Congressman Robert Drinan, and Newton native Paul Guzzi, secretary of state.

Drinan wants law to prohibit American aid to Arab boycott

Cong. Robert F. Drinan (D.-Mass.) today commended the Department of Commerce for instituting proceedings against five U.S. exporters in connection with the Arab boycott against Israel and renewed his call for stronger measures.

The Congressman's remarks followed an announcement issued by the Commerce Department that five companies had been charged with failing to report requests to participate in the boycott' as required by regulations issued pursuant to the Export Administration Act of 1969. Forty-four other companies were issued warnings stipulating that future violations of the reporting requirements would result in the initiation of formal proceedings.

"The Commerce Department deserves some credit for finally acting to enforce its regulations which require the reporting of boycott-related requests," Drinan observed. "Unfortunately, neither these regulations nor the statutory provisions on which they are based prevent American firms from complying with boycott requests in response to economic blackmail. Under present law, American companies are merely discouraged, not prohibited, from taking action or furnishing information which has the effect of supporting an economic boycott. It is not enough that companies are required to report requests that they engage in activities which support economic boycotts; compliance with all such requests must they engage in activities which support economic boycotts; compliance with all such requests must be prohibited by law."

Drinan said that H. R. 5913, the Foreign Discriminatory Commercial Practices Act of 1975, which he recently introduced, would prohibit American firms from furnishing information to assist a boycotter in carrying out restrictive trade practices. It would also prohibit exporters from refusing to do business with anyone, in response to foreign pressure, on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin. Finally, the bill would strengthen the present reporting provisions under which the Commerce Department took action on May 21.

"Twenty-seven members of the House have joined me to date in sponsoring the Foreign Discriminatory Commercial Practices Act," Drinan said. I am pressing for prompt hearings on this bill by the House Committee on International Relations. The action taken by the Commerce Department yesterday, while significant, addresses only a secondary aspect of participation of American firms in the Arab boycott. The enactment of the Foreign Discriminatory Commercial Practices Act would confront the entire scope of the problem and effectively prevent the participation of American businesses in this or any other trade boycott in the future."

Logue to testify before unemployment commission

Edward J. Logue, former president and chief executive officer of the Urban Development Corporation of New York State, and former director of the Boston Redevelopment Authority from 1967 to 1970, will testify before the Special Legislative Commission Studying Unemployment in Massachusetts.

State Sen. Jack Backman, commission chairman, announced Logue's appearance June 2 at 10:30 a.m. in Gardner Auditorium of the State House, when the fifth commission hearing will be held.

Sen. Backman, in announcing Logue's appearance, said, "Ed Logue has always been a controversial personage because of his dynamic drive for getting projects accomplished. I believe he will be able to give our commission a great deal of information on the problems and accomplishments of the Urban Development Corporation of New York State.

"The Urban Development Corporation of New York," continued Backman, "was created because the ordinary operations of both public and private enterprises were not producing needed housing and community development. The corporation was to provide housing, particularly for low-income families, increase job opportunities and upgrade blighted and deteriorating areas throughout the state. The Urban Development Corporation has been in existence since 1968. I believe it will be extremely interesting to learn how this corporation has fulfilled its goals.

"Massachusetts is experiencing all of the same needs in job opportunities, housing and community development which prompted New York State to create the Urban Development Corporation. I believe we may be able to profit from the experiences of New York State. Ed Logue is just the man to help us. He has broad experience in development corporations as well as knowledge of the Massachusetts scene. The June 2 hearing will be an extremely interesting and important one," Backman concluded.

Area health plan being developed

Six Newton residents have been named to a special subcommittee charged to develop an overall health plan for the Newton-Weston-Wellesley area.

Announcement of the appointments was made by Helen Meltzer of Newton Centre, chairman of the Area 523 Health Planning Committee which serves the three communities. The 523 Committee is a branch of the Health Planning Council for Greater Boston (HPCGB), a Newton-based comprehensive health planning agency.

Nell Gottlieb of West Newton was named by the 523 group to chair the Health Plan Development Subcommittee. Other subcommittee members are Ruth Grabel of West Newton; Jeffrey Kelly of Waban, Edward Kovar of Newton; Charles Lipson, M.D., of Newton Lower Falls; and Mrs. Meltzer.

Allan Mann named chairman of Columbia exchange program

Allan Mann, a 45-year-old Newton business executive, has recently been named chairman of the state-wide Partners of the Americas program. As chairman, he is responsible for the people-to-people exchange program between Massachusetts and Colombia, South America.

"This year we plan to have both baseball and basketball clinics in the department of Antioquia, Colombia, but my own special project will be to find a boat to serve as a 'floating hospital' for the 70,000 Colombians who live and work along the Cauca River in northern Colombia," Mann said.

This international exchange program, which began under the late President Kennedy, promotes cultural, technological, and medical exchanges between people, institutions, and businesses.

Mann became interested in Colombia while on a business trip and began helping several fledgling Colombian businesses as a volunteer in the coating of fabrics.

For several years students from Colombia have been living in his home, and he has hosted several receptions for Colombian visitors.

He is the founder, president, and recently chairman of the Board of Directors for INCOPA Industries, a manufacturing company that plasticizes textiles.

Nolan 2 hitter leads Reds

Gary Nolan has "a new lease on life" and the Cincinnati Reds have fresh hopes that they can beat the Los Angeles Dodgers in the National League's Western Division race.

Although only 27 years old, Nolan is trying to pitch his way back to stardom after more than two years of frustration. He developed a sore arm just before the 1972 All-Star game and in the last two seasons pitched a total of 16 innings for Cincinnati and Indianapolis.

Nolan says the turning point was when he underwent surgery last fall which relieved the constant pain caused by a calcium spur in his right shoulder.

"I'm still young and I have to look to the future," he said at the start of this season.

Battle of the bulge rages on . . .

RUTH LENSON

This is the time of year when figures come out of hiding and again it's the battle of the bulge, the bumps and the lumps.

As the swim season approaches, it becomes obvious that showing off the body is more important than that second helping of potatoes and devil's food cake. One step onto the bathroom scale can cause the curtains of gloom to descend—but, cheer up—this is the time for action!!

Helena Rubinstein, noted beauty expert, offers four exercises aimed at toning up your body in preparation for fun in the sun. These exercises should be repeated two or three times a day.

1. For arms, shoulders, chest: After your shower in the morning, grasp the towel behind you, stretching on the diagonal--left arm up, right arm down. Pull hand back and forth as you rub your back and then reverse to the opposite diagonal. Try repeating this exercise 6 times each side.

2. If you're planning on wearing a bikini or (heaven!) the Strings, you'll want the tiniest waist possible. This is for you: Place your feet firmly about 18 inches apart. Stand straight, stomach in and take a deep breath. Now, stretch as far as you can to the right side, curving your left arm over your head. Reach and stretch hard with the arm. Reverse to the other side. Repeat 6 or 8 times each side. (Unless you put some "oomph" into this exercise, you'll be disappointed in results!)

3. The lovliest figure, when it slumps or is S-shaped is unattractive. So, to become posture-perfect while at the same time firming up your thighs, the following exercises will make you sore at first, but will be worth the strain. Keeping your back perfectly straight, one foot a little in front of the other, lower yourself from the hips. When you rise, come straight up, full weight on the ball of the feet, letting the thighs do the work. (This is the technique to use when picking something up from the floor—in fact, scatter some playing cards on the floor and practice, practice, practice.)

4. Tired at the end of the day? Would you believe an exercise that is a "relaxer?" Here it is and it will do wonders for your back muscles as well as your posture. Lie flat on the floor, feet raised on a low chair or hassock, arms stretched above the head. Lift your hips off the floor, then very slowly return spine, small of back, finally hips to the floor. Try doing this 10 times and then rest.

Perhaps you're saying to yourself that the above exercises are fine for the person who is at home all day—how about the 9-5 individual? You've been thought of too, and by a most professional "fitness" expert, Bonnie Pruden who has wirtten a wonderful book, "How to Keep Your Family Fit and Healthy", Readers' Digest Press. In her book she presents an exercise program that is the first of its kind—geared to a family of three generations. It is unique in that it is structured not only for the entire family, but also for each individual—exercises to be done by couples together, or fathers and sons, mothers and daughters, grandparents and grandchildren. They take into account the particular lifestyle of the participants—such factors as age, occupation, health, abilities, likes and dislikes.

"Begin by assessing your own working conditions: Look over your daily schedule and find ways to be physical. How, where, and in what position are most of your hours spent? At a desk, behind a counter, etc.? In many classes you will be sitting or standing still. Sitting compresses the blood vessels in the seat and thighs, rounds the shoulders, softens the abdomen. The standers are particularly prone to the pooling of blood in the legs and abnormal strain on the back. Circulation will be slowed for every sitter or stander unless some corrective action is taken OFTEN DURING THE DAY.

Try to walk briskly at least one mile a day morning and evening. You will soon learn that the evening mile doesn't tire, but refreshes you. A two mile walk each day will burn up two pounds of fat a month, and that's 24 a year.

When you have a lull at the office and feel tense, try this. Sitting on your chair, place both hands on the arms (if it's one that tips backward, be sure to grasp well forward). Keeping the same seated position, push your body up so that your arms straighten and your seat is suspended about a foot above the seat of the chair; your thighs should be parallel with the floor and your feet should clear the floor by a foot. Then lower yourself slowly back into the chair. Aside from doing a fine strengthening job on your back and abdominals, this exercise releases the tension in your shoulders.

Deep knee bends flush the blood back up into the body, which is especially important if you have a tendency towards varicose veins. Put your hands on the edge of a desk for balance, keep your legs close together, and do five; slowly, week, by week, increase the number to twenty-five.

The last suggestion is for the TV enthusiast. There are at least three commercials in every half-hour segment; that's at least three minutes when you have time to exercise. Instead of heading for the kitchen for a snack, get down on the floor and do a couple of pushups. You can make it harder for yourself if you put your feet up on the chair. Then tuck your feet under the chair and do five bent-knee situps. Finish off by sitting down again and extending both legs straight out in front; hold them there until the commercial is over.

According to my calendar, if you begin your exercise regimen about now, you'll be slim, hale and happy—ready to take on the best lit three-way mirror any fitting room has to offer in the swimwear department!

Question: I bught lamb shanks last week and attempted to make a sort of baked lamb shanks and potatoes. The dish was not too successful, and I would appreciate a good recipe as soon as possible, please.

Mrs. T.E., Roslindale

Answer: Lamb shanks are reasonably priced and most delicious in the following recipe wherein the shanks and barley simmer to tenderness along with stewed tomatoes, liquid hot pepper sauce and peas. When served, the dish is pointed up with a mixture of cream of celery soup, milk and chedder cheese

INFLATION FIGHTER'S
LAMB SHANKS

4 lamb shanks
3 tablespoons cooking oil
1 cup barley
1 can (15 oz.) stewed tomatoes, undrained
4 cups water
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon EACH: LIQUID HOT PEPPER SAUCE, PEPPER

¼ teaspoon EACH: liquid hot pepper sauce, pepper
1 can (8½ oz.) condensed cream of celery soup
¼ cup EACH: milk, grated cheddar cheese

In large electric skillet or regular skillet over medium heat, borwn shanks in hot oil; drain off any fat. To skillet, add the barley, tomatoes, water, salt hot pepper sauce and pepper. Cover and cook about 1 hour or until liquid is absorbed and shanks are tender. Stir in peas and heat thoroughly. Meanwhile, heat together the celery soup, milk and cheese until cheese is melted and sauce bubbly. Serve over cooked shanks and barley.

Question: Some time ago, I had a most unusual recipe. It was for a coffee cake that had a soft filling and a lemony flavor. The cake was topped with fresh strawberries and whenever I made it, my family and guests adored the rich dessert. Now that strawberries are on the market, do you think you could find a recipe that is like the one I described? Thank you very much.

Mrs. D. W., Dedham

Answer: I searched and searched and have come up with a tender, light-textured coffeecake with the creamy rich flavor of lemon cheesecake and on top of it all, a layer of fresh strawberries glazed with strawberry preserves. Hope you and your family enjoy:

A BERRY CHEESY
QUICK COFFEE CAKE

3 cups all purpose flour
1 pkg. (3¾ oz.) instant lemon pudding mix
¼ cup sugar
2 tablespoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1½ cups milk
½ cup oil
FLUFFY CHEESE FILLING
Sliced strawberries
Strawberry preserves

Stir together dry ingredients. Combine milk and oil; add all at once to flour mixture, stirring only until flour is moistened. Spread half the batter over bottom of greased 9-inch square baking pan. Pour FLUFFY CHEESE FILLING OVER. Spoon remaining batter over filling. Bake in preheated 375 degree oven 45-50 minutes, or until golden brown Cool slightly. Place sliced strawberries on top and drizzle with strawberry preserves to glaze.

FLUFFY CHEESE FILLING

1 pkg. fluffy white frosting mix
2 pkgs (3 oz. ea.) cream cheese, softened.

Prepare frosting mix according to package directions. Blend in cream cheese.

Note: If self-rising flour is used, omit baking powder and salt.

There was much excitement at Burlington Mall recently when preliminary cook-offs for the National Chicken Cooking Contest to be held in San Antonio, Texas in July, were held.

Winner of the first prize was a twenty-four year old sportswear fashion designer who claimed she had never entered a cooking contest before this one. Anne Lipman "put together" the recipe and tried it out on her boyfriend who declared it a winner—which it was. Her recipe for chicken breasts with savory brown rice and sunflower seed stuffing may ultimately win for her the $10,000 first prize at the National cookoff.

Second prize winner at the cook-off was Mrs. Ruth Kepnes of Hyannis, for "Chicken Luv"; runners-up were Mrs Joan Roy of Nabnasset for a "Bicentennial Barbecued Chicken" and Mrs. Dolores Riccio of Jamaica Plain for "Southern Fried Chicken, Sicilian Style".

We'll try to include not only the winners but runners up in this "fingerlickin' good" chicken contest. Surprise the family and guests with something new!

Cramer unveils video innovation

Cramer Electronics, Inc., distributor of electronic components and video equipment to industry, has announced its appointment as the first franchised dealer in Boston for the Advent, Inc. video beam projection color television system.

In making the announcement, Daniel Mulhern, Cramer Video Division general manager, said, "the Advent system marks a milestone in television technology. We are proud to be chosen to represent such a fine product, especially in its 'home' area."

The Advent video beam projection system produces a high-quality color picture 10 times that of the largest (25" diagonal) conventional television set. The picture is about five and two-thirds ft. wide and 4-¼ ft. high. Unlike conventional "direct view" television sets which produce an image on the face of a picture tube, the Advent system beams a picture from a special projection tube to a separate screen at a distance across a room.

Projection of the image by three color beams in a coordinated manner produces the color image.

Cramer Electronics has 40 divisions located throughout the United States, Canada, Puerto Rico, Italy and England.

Alan S. Cohen given rare award by BUSM

Alan S. Cohen, MD of Winston Road, Newton Centre, chief of medicine and director of the Thorndike Memorial Laboratory at Boston City Hospital (BCH), received the Distinguished Alumnus Award of the Boston University School of Medicine (BUSM) Alumni Association at the 100th annual meeting of the alumni group recently.

The award recognizes "the occasional alumnus who achieves major distinction in the field of medicine," according to Martin B. Levene, M.D., Newton Centre, outgoing president of the Alumni Association, who made the presentation. Levene pointed to the award's having been made only 21 times in the association's 100-year history as evidence of its significance.

A member of Phi Beta Kappa and a magna cum laude graduate of Harvard College, Cohen was president of Alpha Omega Alpha and class valedictorian at the School of Medicine, where he graduated m.agna cum laude in 1952. He taught for two years at Harvard Medical School before going to BUSM in 1960. He was appointed professor of medicine in 1968 and named Conrad Wesselhoeft Professor of Medicine in 1972.

Cohen is internationally famous for his research in anyloidosis, a rare and frequently fatal disease of the connective tissues that tends to accompany other diseases, particularly in elderly people.

He became chief of medicine at BCH and director of that hospital's famed Thorndike Memorial Laboratory were in 1973. He is on the executive committee of the American Rheumatism Association and is a member of the board of directors, the governing committee, and the medical administrative committee of the Arthritis Foundation. He has edited several monographs in his field and is the author or coauthor of more than 270 scholarly papers.

South nine qualifies for tourney

By MARK COOPER
Sports Correspondent

The Newton South baseball team qualified for the Eastern Mass. state tournament by dramatically sweeping their last three games of the season, beating Lincoln-Sudbury 7-4, Bedford 2-0, and Weston 4-2.

Juniors Phil Small and Bruce Jennings led a baianced South hitting attack as the Lion's overcame an early 3-0 deficit to whip Lincoln-Sudbury 7-4. Small ripped two extra basehits and Jennings blasted a tremendous homerun to lift the Lions past Lincoln.

In the last of the first inning trailing by three runs, Jennings ripped a homerun that ignited a three run Lion outburst that knotted the score at three.

Lincoln-Sudbury went into the lead briefly again at 4-3 but the Lions exploded for four runs to wrap up the game in thier half of the sixth inning. Small, Peter Castellanos, and Mike Malkasian sparked South to the victory and starting pitcher Chandler Bosworth hung on for the crucial Lion win.

South's next game versus Bedford was the biggest contest for the Lions this year as they had to beat this excellent ballclub in order to gain entrance into the State Tourney.

Ace South hurler Tom Irvine pitched a superb game firing a one hitter at Bedford and simultaneously raising his personal won-lost record to 5-0 to go along with an incredible 0.92 earned run average. The 2-0 victory was also achieved with timely hitting from Mike Malkasian and especially first baseman Jerry Bamel who had two hits and scored a run.

Tallying in the second inning, when Mike Malkasian laid down a beautiful squeeze bunt to score Dave Meinhart the Lion's rode a slim 1-0 lead going into the last half of the fifth inning when Bumel connected for a tremendous double that scored the Lion's insurance run and made the score 2-0. The game ended on this note and the Lions now prepared for their final regular season game against Weston High.

Top Weston

Understandably tight because of the importance of the game the Lions made three costly errors in the first inning and Weston jumped to a quick 1-0 lead.

Starting pitcher Chandler Bosworth, a hard luck hurler all year long, helped his own cause by ripping a single with two outs in the top of the third inning. After Peter Castellano's walked, Bosworth stole third, and both he and Castellanos scored on Captain Mike Malkasians clutch triple to right field. The Lions did no more scoring in the third but their defense had settled down and Bosworth continued to pitch well.

In the sixth inning John Bamel once again led the Lion attack with some excellent timely hitting. After Glenn Mackenzie reached base on an error Bamel ripped a double scoring Mackenzie with what proved to be the winning run. Yet Bamel wasn't through, and when Dave Meinhart's hustle down the first base line . . . resulted in a costly throwing error on his ground ball, the senior first baseman, scored all the way from second base. Although Weston scored a run later in the game it proved to be much too little and certainly much too late as the Lions had closed out their season on a successful note.

Because of their strong finish Newton South's baseball season has not yet concluded and the Lions will open the Eastern Mass. Baseball tournament Friday against a so far undetermined opponent.

All are urged to attend the game.

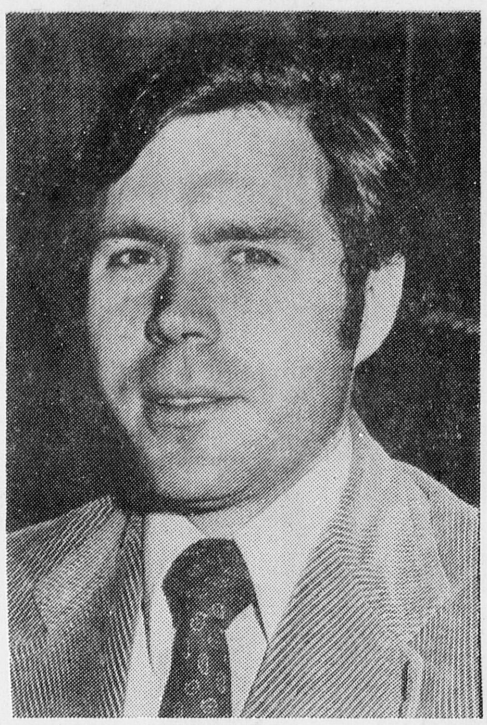
Newton's Jim Logan named new Boston Bolts' General Manager

OSTON Bolts of the National Lacrosse League today announced a management realignment that includes the naming of a new chairman, president and general manager.

William H. Brine Jr. of Weston will succeed James Herscot as board chairman and Peter Brine of Wellesley will serve as the team's president.



James A. Logan
Bolts' General Manager

Arnold London will remain as Treasurer.

Herscot, who will retain his interest in the team, said he stepped down from his former position as board chairman and president in order to devote more time to his other business interests. He is president of Corr-Pak Products, Inc. and vice president of Interstate Container, Corp., of Lowell.

The Brine brothers were both among the team's original founders.

It was also announced that James A. Logan will be the team's general manager.

Logan was manager of the W.H. Brine Co. Lacrosse and Soccer Division and is coach of the Brine Lacrosse Club in the U.S. Club Lacrosse Association (USCLA).

Logan succeeds acting general manager Rowe Barrett who is returning to Toronto to complete negotiations for the sale of his printing business. Barrett will remain with the Bolts in a scouting capacity.

Logan, 27, was an all New York State lacrosse player for Hobart College, (Geneva, N.Y.) and was team captain in 1968. He was recently named coach of the North All Stars for the USCLA North-South All Star Game to be played June 27 in Baltimore.

Logan was born in North Tonawanda, N.Y., near an Indian reservation where he first saw and played box lacrosse. After graduating from Hobart he returned to nearby Niagara Falls to coach lacrosse and soccer at the Deveaux School.

Logan and his wife, Susan, live in Newton Highlands.

US in drivers seat in golf's Walker Cup

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (UPI) — The United States Walker Cup team was in the driver's seat today, holding a commanding 8-4 lead over Great Britain and Ireland on the final day of their amateur golf match.

But the pressure still was on for Jerry Pate, the 21-year-old U.S. amateur champion. The University of Alabama senior is out to restore his battered pride after two defeats in Wednesday' s singles and foursomes.

Pate's indignities were made even harder to take in the knowledge that he had lost against a last-minute substitute, Mark James, who would not have played but for an accident to a teammate.

The U.S. non-playing captain, Dr. Ed Updegraff, has shown faith in Pate's ability by retaining him for the second half of the match on the 6,914-yard St. Andrews' Old Course.

Updegraff also has retained Dick Siderowf as Pate's foursomes partner but has dropped the 37-year-old Westport, Conn., stockbroker in the singles alongside Jay Haas, who scrambled to an uneasy win Wednesday.

The United States, with 21 wins in the previous 24 Walker Cup encounters, looked a good bet to improve on the 14-10 victory they gained in recapturing the trophy at Brookline, Mass., two years ago.

Wednesday's 8-4 lead was paced by the play of Gary Koch and Vinnie Giles, whose 5 and 4 foursomes victory over George MacGregor and Ian Hutcheon was the largest winning margin of the day.

GROWING WITH JERRY BAKER

BROTHERHOOD GARDENING

For too many years, gardeners have planted traditional vegetables.— radishes, corn, carrots and lettuce — in the same soil. They sowed them in straight rows and kept them separated from one another. The yield grew poorer each year because the plants eventually sucked all nutrients from the surrounding soil. To prevent this, straight-line planting should be avoided, and vegetables (flowers and fruits too) should not be kept apart. Vegetables, fruits and flowers can be mixed, whenever and wherever interplanting is mutually beneficial.

I call this method of interplanting vegetables, fruits and flowers "brotherhood gardening" because the plants mutually help one another. Technically, it's termed "symbiosis," defined by Webster as: "the living together in intimate association or even close union of two dissimilar organisms in a mutually beneficial relationship." Thus, one plant throws off waste or surplus that another needs as nourishment; or supplies ingredients that protect the other from insects and disease.

The bad habit of straight-line planting should also be replaced by contour planting. This prevents excessive water run-off which erodes soil, food and valuable trace elements.

Symbiosis, contour planting and proper feeding are the main factors in developing an abundant happy garden where vegetables, fruits, and flowers live in harmony. Fortify your garden with a nutritious diet. I suggest a serving of "barnyard tea" each year in late Fall. It's brewed by mixing 50 lbs. of cow manure, 2.5 lbs. of garden food and 50 lbs. of Lawn & Garden Gypsum with liberal quantities of composted leaves and cuttings (or 100 lbs. of peat moss) for every 100 sq. ft. of grounds. Allow this concoction to lie all winter, and in early May spade it into the soil.

More nutrition education needed

"While it's obvious very much has been accomplished in the field of nutrition research and education, it's amazing how much still must be done, especially in educating a general public subject to countless pressures and influences," said Elaine Robin, area director of Weight Watchers for Eastern Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

The comment came after attending a special two-day nutritional conference in New York sponsored by Weight Watchers International at which recognized experts on various aspects of nutirtion explained the advances made so far, and the many areas still under study.

"We examined a broad range of problem areas contributing to obesity in today's over-fed North American society," Mrs. Robin said. "For example, it's almost overwhelming to realize that there are some twelve thousand food items in the supermarket vying for the shoppers' attention. The unfortunate part is that all too many shoppers don't understand the nutritional value of most foods."

A panel of medical experts in various aspects of nutrition agreed that "obesity is a self-inflicted disease," as voiced by Dr. William H. Sebrell, medical director of Weight Watchers International.

Canadian nutrition specialist Dr. Zak Sabry, along with Dr. Jules Hirsch (professor and senior physician at Rockefeller University and Hospital) and Dr. George Christakis (clinical professor and epidemiology and public health at the University of Miami Medical School), described current research in nutrition and its grelation to obesity. They agreed that "no one is doomed to be fat" if he learns and follows proper and nutritional eating methods.

TRAIN GUARDS

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Police with guard dogs have begun regular duty aboard commuter trains serving the Argentine capital, following a series of incidents involving unruly passengers.

The State Railroad Enterprise announced it had requested the police to "guarantee the tranquility and safety of the people who use the trains and the railroad personnel" against "patotas," gangs of young men who have assaulted and harassed passengers and conductors.

Roasting Poultry Foil Wrapped

Poultry cooked wrapped in aluminum foil can be very tender and juicy with shorter cooking time. . .and they are self basting. In addition, foil permits the use of higher temperatures and therefore results in still shorter cooking time.

Truss a seasoned bird and generously wrap in foil. Place in pre-heated 450°F oven.

Roast to an internal temperature of 185°F.

North nine are also tourney bound!

Top Waltham and Weymouth North

By RON MACLEAN
Sports Correspondent

NEWTON — The Newton North baseball team earned a spot in the Eastern Mass. baseball tournament as they ended their regular season with a 2-1 week. The Tigers lost to Cambridge Latin 8-7 last Monday, bested Waltham 4-1 on Wednesday and defeated Weymouth North 5-1 on Friday.

Ed Aucoin's pitching made the difference as the Tigers defeated Weymouth North at Weymouth, 5-1.

Aucoin fired a three-hitter and yielded the sole run in the seventh. He had a no-hitter going until Rich Castagnozzi doubled in the seventh.

Steve Dibenedetto put Newton ahead 1-0 in the fourth when he tripled home Bob Cunningham. The Tigers scored what proved to be the winning run when they tallied four in the sixth. Two singles and a walk loaded the bases for Aucoin, who walked to bring in a run.

Jim Visakis also walked for the second run of the inning and Dibenedetto doubled home two more.

Dibenedetto led the hitting attack with three hits and three runs batted in. Aucoin and John Kreider had the other runs batted in in the contest.

Newton North 4
Waltham 1

Steve Dibenedetto's pitching and Bob Vena's hitting led the Tigers over the league champion Waltham at Nipper Maher Park.

Dibenedetto was in complete control after giving up a first inning run on two hits. Bob Kelley led off with a single for Waltham, and catcher Mike Gaudet doubled him home.

Through the final six innings, Dibenedetto yielded only four hits. At one point through the second and third innings, he struck out five men in a row.

Vona went three for three on the night, and drove home the tying run in the third inning. Vona came up with the bases loaded and nobody out and ripped a single to tie the game at 1-1.

Jack Ryan scored the eventual winning run coming in on a Dave Poirer error. The Hawk catcher tried to pick Ryan off at third, but the throw was wild and Ryan scored.

Newton picked up twl insurance runs in the seventh. Vona led off with a double and Bob Kinsella reached on a two base error to put runners on second and third.

After Rich Hunt went out, shortstop Bob Cunningham lined a double to left scoring Vona and Kinsella. Jim Visakis continued the rally with a two-out single, but Cunningham was picked off third to end the threat.

Dibenedetto put the Hawks down in order in the seventh to end the game.

Vona led the hitting attack with three hits and an rbi. Ryan had two hits and a run scored.

Dibenedetto became the first Newton pitcher this year to pitch a complete game without a walk. He struck out six and was throwing popups, as Waltham flied out seven times.

Cambridge Latin 8
Newton North 7

Cambridge Latin scored three runs in the seventh for a come from behind victory at Lincoln Park.

Newton scored first with a run in the second inning. Bob Kinsella led off with a triple and scored when Cambridge pitcher Jim Wilson fired a wild pitch.

The Cantabs jumped on Newton starter Matt Berry for four runs in the third inning. Henry Morris tripled, and came home on a sacrifice fly.

Paul Bentubo reached on a two base error. Tony Campo tripled him home, and he scored on a Bob Pierce single. Pierce stole second, and scored on a Paul Nickerson single.

Trailing 4-1, the Tigers tied the game in the fourth. Bob Vona walked and went to second on a fielder's choice. Rich Hunt singled to load the bases.

Bob Cunningham was next up, and he lined a single to right for a run. After two strikeouts, Steve Dibenedetto reached on an error for two runs and a 4-4 tie.

Newton moved ahead with three more in the fifth. Vona tripled to start the fifth, and after a Cunningham walk, scored on a Steve Cononico single.

A balk scored Cunningham, and Cononico came around when Jim Visakis reached on a error.

John Kreider replaced Visakis in the sixth for defensive reasons but Cambridge pecked away.

After getting a run in the sixth, the Cantabs won it with three in the seventh. A walk and a single put runners on first and second, and Pierce doubled them home. Pitcher Nickerson won his own game with a single to center, scoring Pierce.

"Good Sport" winners

The Newton Jaycees have announced the final scores of The "Good Sports" Competition Locals held at Newton North High School Field on May 17. The first two finishers in each class will compete in the District Finals to be held at the same field this Saturday, May 31 at 8 a.m.

Jaycee "Good Sports" is an open invitational track and field event for non-professional athletes. The events are basketball foul shooting; 100 yard dash; obstacle course; street hockey goal shooting; shot put; softball throw for distance; football-soccerball kick for distance; and an 880 meter run.

Four classes are established, and the results looked this way:

MEN UNDER 30

Fred Yaitanes, a teacher at Newton North High School, repeated as winner of the Newton event again this year. Fred won 6 of the 8 events and tied for 1st with Wes Gardner in the 100 yard dash. He shot 18 of 20 from the basketball free-throw line, threw a distance of 46 feet in the shot put and ran a 2.179 in the 880.

Wes Gardner, a tax consultant, finished second in this class. Wes tied Fred Yaitanes with a 10.9 in the 100 yard dash and edged Fred out in the football kick for distance by a fraction of an inch.

Both Yaitanes and Gardner will compete in the District Finals this Saturday. Peter Hantzis, a graduate student at Northeastern University, finished a very close third in a field of 32 entrants in this class.

MEN OVER 30

Nick Pasquarosa won this class. He finished third last year when there was no age division in the men's class, so, in effect, he has been the best male over 30 years old for 2 years running. Nick turned in the best time of the day in the 880 with a dazzling 2.14 and tied Jim Blackburn with the best 100 yard dash time of the day at 10.3. In overall men's scores, Nick won 4 of the 8 events.

James Blackburn, a guidance Counsellor from Marblehead High School, finished second in the class. He tied Nick Pasquarosa with the best 100 yard dash of the day and followed him closely in all other events.

Both Pasquarosa and Blackburn will compete this Saturday in the Districts. One of Newton's finest, Police Officer Ray Fairweather, finished a very respectable third while another officer, John Salemme, finished tenth in a field of 24.

WOMEN UNDER 30

Diane Fidurko of Needham won her class by taking all 8 events including a surprising 12.5 in the 100 yard dash and a 3.08 in the 880. Diane finished second to Mimi Clarke in last year's locals. Her 19.7 in the obstacle course was faster than 36 of the men's scores.

Patty Dautch, a tennis instructor from the Mt. Auburn Tennis Center, took second place after the official scoring over Geraldine Brown who had been announced as second-place finisher at the event. Because of this scoring error, all three women will be invited to compete this Saturday. There were 14 entrants in this class.

WOMEN OVER 30

Marilyn Sicurella, a homemaker and part-time teacher, won this class, which had only 3 competitiors. Marilyn took all 8 events and had a 13.0 100 yard dash' which was second only to Diane Fidurko's 12.5 for all women.

Judy Dowdson, a Newton school teacher, finished second and will also compete Saturday. Lynne Smith, a Wellesley homemaker, finished a close third in the small field.

TEAM COMPETITION

For the first time this year, a "Good Sports" Team Competition was held. Newton hosted the only Team Event in the State with the Mass. Jaycees and WBZ fielding a squad against a team comprised of Governor Michael Dukakis, Secretary of State Paul Guzzi, Secretary Jack Buckly, Rep. Carol Amick and Jamie Hoyt.

The teams competed in 5 events with the Governor's team taking 3 of the 5. The losing squad included Jaycee State President Chuck Sukala and WBZ personalities Len Berman, Tony Pepper, Dick Pace and Radio General Manager Bill Cusack.

Highlights of the event were Governor Dukakis' 43 yard punt and Dick Pace's 82 yard softball throw.

After the competition, a "Good Sports" Team Trophy, sponsored by MacDonald's of Newton, was presented to the Governor. Inscribed with the names of the winning team members, the trophy will be kept at the State House and competed for again next year. In Stanley Cup style, next year's winning team will be inscribed and they will keep it for a year. Next year more teams will vie for the trophy.

Newton Jaycee's "Good Sports" Chairman Bob Alkon reported that Newton's event had the largest field of competitors in the State (73). He was quick to point out that while winning this event was rewarding for the competitors, the principal aim of the whole "Good Sports" program was to get people interested in physical fitness and to make them aware of just how much fun track and field and healthy, competitive exercise can be. Alkon said: "Whether a person came in first place or last place out here today, every entrant won something; the unofficial title of "Good Sport for 1975."

Openings remain for womens' sport clinic

FRANKLIN — Openings are still available for the women's World Cup Sports Clinics which will be conducted at Dean Junior College on July 27 - August 2 and August 3 - August 9. The first week will be devoted to field hockey and basketball, while the second-week period will concentrate on soccer.

Directing the clinics will be Ms Dottie Potter, Head Coach of Basketball and Field Hockey at Springfield College. Miss Potter stated, "With the increase in popularity and interest focused on women's sports, there is a definite need for girls to become more proficient in athletics. Students attending such as these, which will be staffed by experts in each field, will have a distinct advantage in competing against other teams." The clinics are open to girls of all ages, including those at the college level. MS Potter also noted that next year, for the first time, regional and national women's field hockey tournaments will be sponsored by the NCAA.

Staff members include Pamela Hickson, a native of Framingham, who teaches at Newton High School and Debbie Fields of Weston. Both Ms Hickson and Ms Fields have been members of the U.S. Field Hockey Team, as has been Ms Potter. Ms. Fields has also played on the Boston Women's Field Hockey Team.

Instructors for the basketball and soccer clinics will include well-known coaches from high schools and colleges, many of whom have had championship teams.

World Cup Sports, directed by George Beim, has previously run successful soccer clinics at Dean for two years and in the midwest. Clinics will also be conducted for men in beginning, intermediate and advanced soccer (August 10-16, 17-23) and basketball (August 3-9).

Further information may be obtained through contacting E. Gilman Taylor at Dean Junior College.

Number of local residents are chairpersons for Channel 2 auction

As the tenth annual Channel 2 Auction draws near, chairmen have been busy lining up their teams in preparation for this television extravaganza which will be on the air May 30 through June 7. During the eight-day marathon, over 2000 volunteers will be involved in the actual Auction week production.

Thousands of manhours are contributed by these volunteers will be involved in the actual Auction week production.

Thousands of manhours are contributed by these volunteers while they process the myriads of donated items, load and unload tables, model clothes, take and confirm bids, prepare and serve scrumptious meals, mark Quickie Boards and just have fun at the Auction's 10th Birthday Celebration.

This year's Auction will feature such exciting gifts as a Datsun, a Pacer, trips to Columbia, Bermuda, and much, much, more.

During the 1974 Auction, over 4000 indispensable volunteers, including Auction Week personnel, helped WGBH realize over $600,000 of gross revenue which went towards the actual running costs of the station, thereby enabling Channel 2 to continue originating and producing programs the public has come to enjoy, such favorites as Masterpiece Theatre, Evening at the Pops, Romagnoli's Table, and Crockett's Victory Garden.

Local residents who have volunteered to serve as Auction Week chairmen are: Mrs. Joan Rueppel, who is involved with the Art Preview, and Mrs. Gina Voudouris, chairperson in charge of Bid Runners. Working with Mrs. Voudouris are Joan O'Connell, Polly Freese, Pauline Kontos, Janet MacQuillan, and Carol deLemos, all of Needham, as is Diane Rodenhiser, a Confirmer.

From Westwood, Joy Sudduth is in charge of Confirmers, with Jill Dew, Barbara Friedman and Ronald Sudduth serving as chairpersons. Jeannette Murphy and Mary Lou Tschirch will work as part of the Call-Back Confirming team.

A large number of women from Westwood will serve as Bid-Runners. The Auction Week chairperson, Alice Mae Powell has four captains from Westwood, as follows.

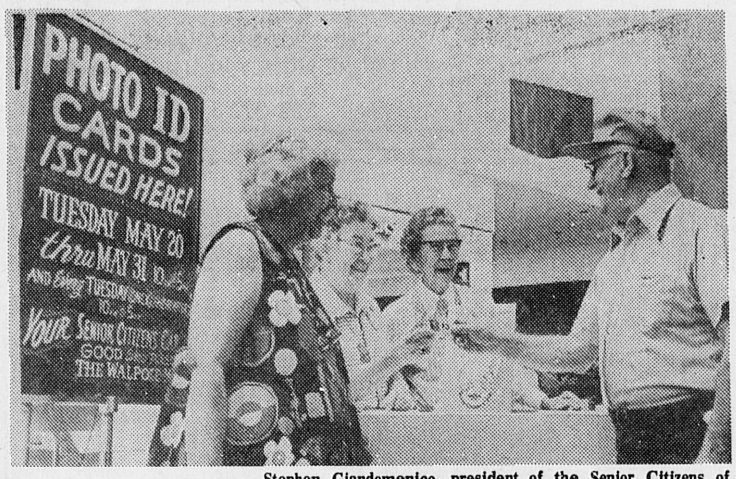
Elaine Steeger, whose team consists of Ann Berkland, Polly MacKinnon, Karen O'Toole, Arlene Brown, Ethel Hutnyan, Carol McIntyre, Cynthia Estes, Denise McKelvey, Nicole Coffin, Margreta MacMullan, Eleanor Hochanadeo, Barbara Otria, Sharon Orenstein and Karen Schapiro, the latter two of Norwood.

Evelyn Eklund is team captain for Ginny Lyons, Marion Stunpzner, Shirley Miller, Penny Miller, Alice Hildebrandt, Louise Weafer, Jackie Sullivan, Dottie Will, and Jane Dixon.

Sue Lemkau's team includes Susan Berlandi, Jane Duffy, Pam Ilg, Jan Cloherty, Marie Reid, Susan Riordan, Doris Gould and Becky Parry.

Ann Lowell of Westwood is also a captain, and Betsy Regan of Westwood will also be a volunteer.

Volunteers in other areas from Dedham include Helen Black, Mary Dohery, Jane Gould and Joan Struzziery.



Stephen Giandomenico, president of the Senior Citizens of Walpole, receives the first senior citizens i.d. card issued at the Walpole Mall from Anne Ahern. At the left looking on are Louise D'Espinosa and Edith Shufelt. Registration for the Walpole Mall Senior Citizens Club will continue through May 31 and on every Tuesday thereafter from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. participating merchants will honor card bearers with a 10 per cent discount on all regularly priced merchandise, every Tuesday. Memorial Day is May 30 in New Hampshire

After you celebrate Memorial Day on Monday, May 26, here in Massachusetts, you can celebrate it again on Friday, May 30, in New Hampshire, the only New England state that will not observe it as a Monday holiday.

According to the Mass. Division of the American Automobile Association, if you're planning a trip to or through New Hampshire on Friday, May 30, you will find most gasoline stations open and pumping gas. Some businesses and retail stores will be open, but state and city offices, schools, and banks will be closed.

BOOK BANNED

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — The Argentine Writers Society has asked the government to cancel a decree that resulted in the banning of a book by Cuban independence hero Jose Marti.

Marti was killed in 1895 while helping lead the Cuban struggle for independence from Spain. The Writers Society said the ban on Marti's book, "Cuba, Our America and the United States." is an attack on freedom of expression.

$7.50 for either Complete Flag Kit

Please add $1.00 for postage and handling on mail orders.

The Transcript Newspapers offers at cost as a patriotic public service two magnificent home flag kits . . . either the 50-star Old Glory or our nation's traditional First Flag, the 13-star Betsy Ross — both 3 x 5 foot in size with double sewn stripes. Both kits are complete with a 6-foot baked-on gilt finish 2-piece steel pole and matching 5-inch wing spread Eagle top ornament — 2-way heavy rust resistant stamped steel bracket with screws — full color flag history brochure, mounting instructions — all carefully packed in a 2-piece storage carton. Order either or both kits today — for yourself, for gifts.

Stop by the Transcript Newspapers Office, 420 Washington St., Dedham, Mass. or mail in the coupon to get one or both of these fine flag kits.

"The shot heard 'round the world" was fired April 19th, 1776 as the "Embattled Farmers" defended their beloved country against the British Red Coats at Concord and Lexington. Many of us can say at least part of Longfellow's "Ride of Paul Revere" telling the story of that gallant horseman — who was "ready to ride and spread the alarm to every middlesex, village and farm" the night of April 18th. As we look back over 200 years of history, let all of us dedicate ourselves to the task of solving our great country's problems and continuing its growth and development as the world's greatest success story.

To show our resolve and our firm belief in America, let's all fly the flag — every day. If you will . . . especially during our 200th Birthday — but certainly on every national holiday during this tremendously important event. Transcript Newspapers, as part of its Bicentennial Celebration, will make these fine quality home flag kits available as a patriotic and historical public service right through 1976.

"Although we are not statutorily obliged to hold a public hearing, I believe that it is vital to allow the citizens of Massachusetts and interested groups a chance to closely examine and discuss my budget with me," Guzzi said.

"During my first four months in office, much of my work has been toward opening the governmental process to people. This open hearing is another step in that direction," Guzzi said.

Patients' bill of rights legislation revived by Pines, Backman

Legislation sponsored by State Rep. Lois G. Pines (D-Newtonnd State Sen. Jack H. Backman (D-Brookline) to establish a bill of rights for patients in hospitals, clinics, and nursing homes has been given a favorable report by the Health Care Committee.

The committee's draft is based on several bills including H.4057, co-sponsored by Rep. Lois Pines and Alanna Cline of Newton and the Massachusetts Consumer Council, and S.641, sponsored by Sen. Jack Backman.

The bill will require compliance by all state-licensed facilities providing health care, such as, hospitals, clinics, infirmaries located in towns, homes for the care of unwed mothers, convalescent and nursing homes, rest homes and charitable homes for the aged. It would also include state, county, municipal and other subdivisional facilities subject to state licensure, as well as the soldiers homes.

Every patient shall have seventeen specified rights including the following:

— the right to emergency care without reference to financial resources.

— the right to know exactly what is being paid for regardless of the source of payment;

— the right to make fully informed choices as a responsible adult regarding treatment and follow-up care, and the consequent right to know all material facts about the affliction, treatment and diagnostic procedures, their alternatives, risks, discomfort and indignity, and information in his records.

— the right to dignity as a human being and unprejudiced treatment.

— the right to confidentiality, except where precluded by federal law.

— the right to refuse, limit or terminate treatment to the extent provided by law and to be informed of the medical consequences of such action.

"In general, this bill gives the health consumer the same protections he has from consumer law affecting other products and services," added Ms. Cline, a drafter of the measure.

Ms. Alanna Cline stated, "The bill does not seek to interfere in the physician-patient relationship, but rather to formalize professional standards of information disclosure and conduct, to shift the power and burden of choice to the consumer, and thus to equalize the consumer-provider relationship. Giving greater information to patients may reduce the frequency of malpractice suits, improve the trust between patient and provider, and generally improve the quality of health services by giving the patient a more participatory role in his care."

"This bill only applies to physical health problems. Although the rights of mental health patients is an equally important problem, it is sufficiently different to warrant totally separate legislation," stated Rep. Pines.

Backman added, "This legislation would require standards of conduct, but specific modes of compliance would remain at the discretion of the health care provider. This bill imposes a duty on the health-care provider to recognize and observe the rights of patients as opposed to requiring patients to request the observance of their rights. I am pleased, after several years of effort on this bill, tosee that we are closer than ever before to assuring patients these basic rights."

The bill has been endorsed enthusiastically by the Americans for Democratic Action and the Massachusetts Consumer Council, a co-sponsor.

"SHOPPING AT CAPITOL IS LIKE A RAISE IN PAY"

Sports Spice

Commentary by Herb Ralby

C's fishing trip ended like playoffs

Kevin Stacom had never fished before in his life when he made the 10 hour drive from Boston to the wilds of Ontario with teammates John Havlicek and Don Nelson for a fishing weekend . . . The first time the rookie guard cast his line he came up with a bass and the next time a three-pound trout . . . "Boy, this is easy," he said . . . But he spoke too much . . . He didn't catch another fish all weekend . . . This just wasn't a Celtics year . . . Havlicek and Nelson couldn't catch any more fish than they had success with the Washington Bullets in the semi-final playoff round . . . But it was a good way to unwind after the hectic season and playoffs . . . Paul Silas and other NBA player reps were in Rio de Janeiro over the past weekend with their wives for the annual Players' Association meeting . . . And in another week, he'll be off to the Philippines on a State Department good-will tour with other NBA players . . . Former Patriot and New York Jets glue-fingered pass catcher, Jimmy Colclough, has taken over the operation of Bachelors III lounge by himself now and the Park Square spot has become a meeting place for sports figures to "rap" . . . Ten days from now the Bruins will converge from several different directions on Quebec City . . . The occasion is the June 11 wedding there of sophomore center Andre Savard . . . Wonder what Ron Stewart, the new coach of the New York Rangers, thinks about Bernie Parent now . . . Stewart and Parent were teammates on the Bruins back in the middle 1960s and the veteran winger who had been obtained from Toronto was one of the players who rode the rookie netminder unmercifully, including the insinuation that Parent came up "sick" when he was scheduled to face bullet shooters like Bobby Hull and the old Black Hawks . . . Bernie has long since proved them to be "all wet" . . . Wonderland Dog track president Ed Gallagher, the former Boston College and Red Sox pitcher, is on the mend at Deaconess Hospital after a little ticker trouble . . . Hearing from some of his old friends would cheer him up considerably . . . And while on the subject of the Gallaghers, Ed Jr., now a teacher and coach at Belmont Hill School "recruited" 14 year old George Klapes of Brookline and the Greek youngster has shown such great potential hockey that he played on the varsity as an eighth grader last winter . . . He is a defenseman who controls the game much the same way the Bruins' Bobby Orr did when he was only a 14-year-older playing with the bigger boys . . . He is also considered a top prospect in baseball as a first baseman.

—o—

Jimmy Anderson a Springfield player for years and more recently the first coach of the Washington Caps last year, is the lead man in line for the vacant coaching berth in Springfield for Eddie Shore next season . . . But a snag may arise if Shore signs a working agreement with the two NHL teams with whom he is currently negotiating and they insist upon putting their own man in there . . . If the New York Rangers deal with Washington for the Caps' first choice in the annual amateur draft this week, they will tab Wayne Dillon, already a pro with the Toronto Toros in the WHL . . . The Rangers believe they can lure the 20-year-old forward who signed with Toronto as an underage player two years ago, into the NHL when he becomes a free agent . . . If Philadelphia, not the Rangers, gets to deal with Washington for that first pick, they'll tab Pat Price, another under-age player with Vancouver in the WHL, who reportedly is available because of the huge contract he commands . . . He's a good, strong defenseman whom the Flyers feel would fit right into their system . . . On the subject of the draft, the basketball one is Thursday, the Celtics priority is a power forward . . . To be more specific, a Paul Silas, Don Nelson, or Tom Heinsohn is considered a power forward . . . John Havlicek is a quick forward . . . Next the Celtics will go for a back-up center, a mobile big man.

On Thursday Weeks did a complete turn around and lost to Bigelow 140-91.

USLTA junior tennis tournament held

During the Memorial Day weekend the Charles River Tennis and Health Club hosted a U.S. Lawn Tennis Association sanctioned junior tennis tournament.

Ninety-six youngsters competed in four age groups: boys 16 and under; boys 14 and under; girls 16 and under; and girls 14 and under. There were 23 Newton residents among the participants. They were: Deborah Pechet, Celia Moffie, Judy Elovitz, Rony Sebok, Judy Koffman, Michelle Rosen, Julie Rosen, Laura Joslin, Esther Shir, Wendy Shahon, Nancy Wasserman, Betsy Richmond, June Ferestein, Wendy Markoff, Richard Winer, Greg Volpe, Eric Carlson, John Simon, Michael Cooper, Daniel Stone, Robert Simons, Ricky Macdonald and Robert Lipson.

Club manager George Volpe and tournament chairwomen Jean MacDonald, Joanne Boardman, Jane Simon and Anna Sibok spent several weeks organizing the event and spent many hours to help achieve a smooth-running and successful tournament.

Rittenberg playing well

Steve Rittenberg, a former Newton High baseball player, is currently a reserve outfielder on the Mass Bay Community College baseball team. In only spot appearances, Rittenberg has shown Coach Dick Maloney that he can hit with authority and will be a going concern for next year's team. In only 14 official trips to the plate Rittenberg has collected seven hits, including three doubles and a home run, scored seven runs and driven home four.

These are impressive statistics but the freshman from Newton is a reserve on a team with a 22-3 record; a 17th ranking in the National Junior College Baseball Poll; a team batting average of .326 (sixth highest among all junior colleges); the No. 1 junior college hitter (Arlington's John Valeri currently hitting .620) and a nationally ranked pitcher with 1.8 strike outs per inning (No. Reading's Steve Hartery). In short this is a talent laden club and Steve will have to wait his turn.

2 robberies yield $250

Police are investigating two similar armed robberies over the Memorial Day weekend at Cumberland Farms in West Newton and CVS in Newtonville.

Cumberland Farms, 69 Waltham St., West Newton, was robbed of $75 at about 7:30 p.m. Sunday a young male weighing about 180 pounds entered the store with his right arm under his shirt.

According to police, the man told the clerk, he had a gun under his shirt.

"Hand over the money," the robber said, according to police .

The clerk said, "You've got to be kidding," at which point the thief tried to grab the clerk with his left hand as the clerk ran to the back of the store.

The robber then punched open the cash register and ran out the door in the direction of the cemetery nearby. police assisted in the search, but no Waltham one was found.

CVS, 304 Walnut St., Newtonville, was robbed of $174 Monday, at 2:16 p.m.

A man keeping his right hand in his shirt said to the clerk "I'm sick, give me the money."

The clerk never saw a gun. The thief left in the direction of Newton Highlands, and it was not known if he had a car.

Mr. John P. Cunniff newly appointed Boston Regional Director for HOMERICA, a division of Homequity, Inc.

BOSTON — A merger between New England Area Consultants, Inc., and HOMERICA, a division of Homequity, Inc., was announced recently by John Huggins, president of the parent company.

HOMERICA is a leading executive home relocation service in the U.S. with headquarters in Wilton, Conn., and regional offices in New York City, Chicago, Houston and Los Angeles. John P. Cunniff, founder of New England Area Consultants, Inc., in 1969, and who has served as its president since then, will direct all operations for HOMERICA in the Greater Boston area.

Before founding NEAC, Mr. Cunniff was an executive for Ford Motor Company in Somerville, Mass.

"The HOMERICA operation will be expanded throughout the New England area as needs require," said Mr. Cunniff.

"I'm pleased to be able to tell all our clients that James Bradley of Woburn, my chief assistant for the past several years will continue to service them as in the past," Mr. Cunniff said.

From riches to jail

LOS ANGELES (UPI) - Two years ago they were wealthy, pampered top executives of a multibillion-dollar financial conglomerate that was the marvel of Wall Street. Today they are, or soon will be, inmates in federal penitentiaries.

Fourteen former executives who pleaded guilty to directing the $2 billion Equity Funding swindle —believed to be the biggest corporate fraud in U.S. business history —have begun serving prison terms.

Stanley Goldblum — cofounder and president of the company and reputed mastermind of the massive and audacious fraud — was to report to the maximum security federal prison at McNeil Island, Wash., Tuesday to begin an eight-year term. The warden reported he checked in five days early last Thursday.

Former executive vice presidents Fred Levin and Samuel B. Lovell surrendered Tuesday at Terminal Island federal prison here to begin five-year sentences.

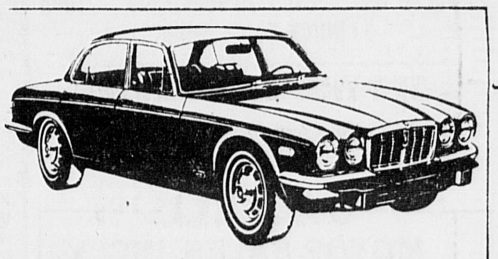
Nine other former executives are scheduled to report this week to Terminal Island or to the federal prison camp at Lompoc, Calif. Most were sentenced to two or three years. Two were allowed to serve shorter sentences under a "work-furlough" program, holding jobs during the day and reporting to the county jail to be locked up at night.

The imprisonment of the former Equity Funding executives on charges of fraud, conspiracy and securities laws violations does not come close to ending the complex case.

Although the warden at McNeill Island noted that Goldblum could be paroled at any time, he has also been sentenced to a 5-to-8-year term in New Jersey, where officials said they would re-imprison him if he is paroled by federal officials. Levin has aleady pleaded guilty to charges in Illinois and was sentenced to 2- years, and Goldblum and otl rs face possible trial there.

Civil suits demanding billions of dollars in damages are pending in federal and state courts involving some of the nation's richest corporations, federal and state governments and regulatory agencies, hundreds of prominent law firms and thousands of individuals. The attorney general of Illinois has called the main action in federal court here "the legal battle of the century." Lawyers expect it to take years.

Investigators have said the fraud was so massive, and the corporation's books were falsified so thoroughly and for so long, that it may be impossible ever to determine its true financial history.



Why this may be the best time in years to buy a Jaguar XJ6L or XJ12L

The Jaguar XJ Series luxury sedans are undeniably opulent Yet they handle like sports cars, in the legendary Jaguar manner Car & Driver said: it may just be the best sedan available anywhere in the world." Right now we have a limited number of brand-new 1974 XJs in stock at their original relative low 1974 prices. Truly an uncommon opportunity to purchase your Jaguar. We invite you to inspect them soon.

Doctors, employes, rally for hospital

NEW YORK (UPI) — Doctors and employes at Brooklyn Eye and Ear Hospital knew what they had to do Tuesday to keep the financially troubled hospital open. They decided to work without pay.

The hospital is faced with a $1.2 million operating deficit and an immediate $100,000 cash need.

"We're living from hand to mouth," said hospital president Dr. Abner Rosenberg. "What we need is about 15 angels to drop some gold bars on us."

Kitchen workers did their best Monday by scraping together $17.11 to pay for the day's bread bill.

And while the 110-bed facility's clinic was crowded to near capacity, about 100 doctors and staff members met in the cafeteria Tuesday and overwhelmingly agreed to keep the hospital running.

The rest of the hospital's residents and employes were elsewhere —either performing surgery or tending to the sick in the wards —but there appeared to be near unanimity among the entire 300-member staff.

"There's an absolutely wonderful rapport between employes, residents and the administration," said Dr. William Rand, the resident opthalmic surgeon, who is leading the ad hoc effort to solicit contributions and maintain staff morale.

Many of the 85 attending physicians are considering donating their surgical fees for the week. Anesthesiologists are expected to take similar action.

Rand said $8,000 in donations had already been made by hospital employes and area residents, and he fingered a pile of about 75 unopened letters sent since the facility's dollar crisis became general knowledge Friday.

Nearly every letter contained a brief message of sympathy and a contribution ranging from $1 to $50.

Man charged with assault on cartoonist Bill Mauldin

CHICAGO (UPI) — Attorney Thomas D. Flanagan, 37, surrendered to police Tuesday and was charged with assaulting Pulitzer Prize-winning cartoonist Bill Mauldin, who was attacked while photographing illegally parked cars at a party for Mayor Richard J. Daley's son.

Mauldin suffered a broken nose in the attack.

Flanagan, apparently a former business associate of the mayor's son, was charged with simple battery in connection with the assault.

Flanagan's lawyer, Sherman C. Magidson, promptly filed a counter-complaint and an arrest warrant was issued charging Mauldin with battery. Police said it probably would be a couple of days before the warrant is processed. Magidson refused to elaborate on the complaint against Mauldin.

Mauldin, contacted at a Chicago hotel where he lives, said, "If papers are to be served, I await service. This whole thing is now in the hands of the law."

Mauldin was attacked on a street outside a cocktail party for John P. Daley and his fiancee, Mary Lou Briatta. The party was hosted by Flanagan's brother, James, 38, president and co-owner of the Heil and Heil insurance and real estate agency, for which John Daley once worked. Thomas Flanagan was listed as secretary of the Heil and Heil office in Evanston.

Heil and Heil was the target of a Cook County grand jury investigation last year after it was learned that Mayor Daley had ordered a massive switch of city insurance to Heil and Heil, where John Daley worked at the time.

The younger Daley received about $150,000 in broker's commissions as a result of the switch.

Mauldin said he was visiting a Sun-Times executive at a nearby apartment when he was told about 20 cars double-parked outside the party. Police began to tag and tow the illegally parked cars, he said, and he decided to photograph the scene. Suddenly, Mauldin said, a number of "personnel" appeared and started to remove the cars.

He said one of the drivers climbed out of a station wagon, walked up to him and said, "I'll give you something to take a picture of." Mauldin's wife said the man slugged him in the face, kneed him in the groin and threw his camera in his face before fleeing in a taxi.

Norwalk schools to open

NORWALK, Conn. (UPI) — Norwalk school officials planned to open elementary schools for four-hour sessions today, using substitutes and volunteer parents to conduct classes.

A teachers strike had closed schools since Thursday. Negotiators for teachers met with the Board of Education for nearly three hours Tuesday and rejected at the table another contract offer by the board.

The board offered teachers two one-year contracts, in effect breaking in half the two-year contract rejected by the Common Council two weeks ago.

Each one-year pact contained the same salary schedule as in the two-year package as a unit, which called for a 5.9 per cent increase the first year and 6.1 per cent the second.

Bruce Mellion, president-elect of the Norwalk Federation of Teachers, said the NFT wants assurance from the council that it will not reject an agreement if the union accepts one and returns to work.

"We will not return to work until the council passes a resolution on nonrejection," he said after the meeting. "We want a two-year package to go down as an entire unit. We really cannot leave something of this magnitude to a probability of what the council may or may not do."

Asked why the board made its offer of two pacts, Robert Aldrich, president of the board, answered, "To distinctly separate the issues involved in this year's contract and the issues in next year's contract."

Aldrich said he believed the council would approve the first year contract and, on that basis, the teachers should return to work.

City officials said Tuesday they would seek contempt citations against NFT leaders for refusing to allow teachers to return to their jobs.

Corporation Counsel Arthur Goldblatt said a hearing on the request to cite the leaders for failure to obey an injunction will be held Thursday in Stamford Superior Court.

Capt. Donahue retiring after 33 years

Captain Richard F. Donahue, commanding officer of the uniform branch of the Newton Police Department will retire as of July 1 after 33 years of service.

Donahue entered police service in 1942, left for military duty with the U.S. Air Force Engineers, and returned to the Newton force after three years. He was promoted to sergeant March 31, 1949, to lieutenant May 25, 1958, and captain March 22, 1966.

A native of Newton, he graduated from St. Charles High School in Waltham.

Before entering police service he worked as a decorator for Grover Cronin Company, as a production manager at Raytheon, and as a welder at the Fore River Ship Yard.

Shortly after joining the Newton force he enlisted in the U.S. Air Force and was assigned to the Air Force Engineers attaining the rank of Technical Sergeant.

Upon his return to police service, he was a patrol officer in West Newton, was promoted to sergeant saw service throughout the city. When promoted to Lieutenant, he became a platoon commander, than as captain he commanded the Newton Traffic Bureau and spearheaded a number of safety drives. In 1967 his traffic analysis in regard to child pedestrian accidents indicated that television and group teaching techniques created a temporary tunnel vision in the thirty-six young people involved.

As a result a series of new programs were introduced to broaden the peripheral vision of the youngsters. This included mobiles hung in classrooms to attract the eyes of the young people. Changes were also made in the bicycle safety clinics to improve the ability of youngsters to look more and see more.

For a time Capt. Donahue supervised the women crossing supervisors and meter maids.

Chief William F. Quinn later assigned him to command the uniform division of the department responsible for all patrol operations and uniform personnel.

During this time, he had participated as the chief's department representative at the National Guard Seminar on Domestic Emergency. He served as an advisor of the early release program with the Department of Corrections.

He also was the coordinator for the Home Security Systems, Coordinator Radio Water; a network of privately owned radio cars and the Police Department. Donahue also lectured at both the Newton Police Academy and the Newton In-Services Programs.

While captain, he was co-author of the Newton Police Rules and Regulations update.

During his years as a sergeant to captain, he was also a coach and later manager of the Newton Police Softball Team.

He is married to the former Mary Corcoran of Waltham and in addition to his sons they have granddaughters Rachel and Gail and a daughter-in-law the former Deborah Bickford.

The Captain and Mary Donahue are taking up residence in Tuftenboro, N.H. where they intend to work on a part-time basis and entertain their grandchildren, when accompanied by their parents.

Chief Quinn at the captain's last staff meeting stated, "No one has done more for the Newton Police or worked with more zeal than Captain Donahue."

"No man commanded more respect than the captain and that he will be missed," the chief said.

Resource recovery region has support of state agencies

The prospect of a west suburban regional resource-recovery facility has gotten brighter in the past month with the promise of financial support from the state and indications of interest from at least 26 communities.

The Newton-Waltham Regional Refuse Disposal District committee, which was responsible for the creation of the two-city refuse disposal agreement to provide a short-term disposal solution' has been working toward the goal of interesting other communities in a large-scale recovery facility aided by state funds.

The short-term solution now being implemented is the construction of a transfer-haul station at the Newton incinerator, which is under orders to be closed. Both cities will haul their rubbish to the transfer-haul station, from which SCA Disposal Services, the contractor for the construction and the rubbish disposal, will haul it to a landfill site in Amesbury.

The state Bureau of Solid Waste Management has given its blessing to the Newton-Waltham committee in the form of $98,567 pledged for the planning of a regional recovery system, and has applied to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency for a $100,000 grant.

The EPA awarded the Newton-Waltham planning committee a $112,000 grant two years ago to fund the effort to establish a joint disposal plan.

Representatives of west suburban communities met earlier this month and will have a second meeting June 11 at Belmont to establish an organizational framework within which the group can work toward getting together as a resource-recovery region.

Another meeting is tentatively scheduled for June 25 to hear Secretary for Environmental Affairs Evelyn Murphy explain the Dukakis administration's position on a statewide resource-recovery system and what financial assistance will be available.

Newcomer wins 6th for Twins

The last time anyone heard from a pitcher named Jim Hughes, he was a hard-luck righthander for the old Brooklyn Dodgers with an affinity for throwing high hard ones in the late innings to people like Joe Adcock and Stan Musial.

Well, the Minnesota Twins have come up with the baseball's "latest" Jim Hughes and like his sometimes-maligned predecessor of the 1950s, he throws right-handed. There, however, the similarity ends— at least off the Minnesota rookie's pitching performance thus far this season.

Hughes, who wouldn't even be in the Twins' starting rotation now had it not been for assorted injuries to other frontliners Dave Goltz, Joe Decker and Vic Albury, won his sixth game in seven decisions Wednesday night, hurling Minnesota to a 5-2 victory over the Detroit Tigers. In addition to striking out seven, the 23-year-old palm ball specialist stranded Bill Freehan and Ron LeFlore in the fourth and fifth innings after each had smacked one-out triples.

"He was brought through the minor leagues the right way—a step at a time," said Twins Manager Frank Quilici. "He picked up a palm ball and Cal Ermer (manager of the Tacoma farm club) told us to keep him throwing it. The thing that's made him so effective is his ability to change speeds."

"The change-up helped me but I don't think it's made me," said Hughes, who was given his key support by Tony Oliva's two-run tie-breaking single in the seventh inning.

'Y' holds 98th annual meeting

At the 98th meeting held May 21 at the YMCA on Church Street, the members elected the clerk and treasurer, ten new directors, re-elected two trustees and heard a favorable report on a feasibility study of a five-court indoor tennis complex.

Vice President Cooper Eastman presided.

The meeting opened with Clerk Eldred M. Peterson reading, from the Annual Report, a moving tribute to the late President Robert G. Hennemuth. Rev. T.C. Whitehouse, a board member and local minister, gave the invocation and later the benediction.

John G. Appleton, associate executive of the Northeast Region of YMCAs brought greetings and Auxiliary President Mrs. Peter Martin gave a report and presentation of camperships.

Charles E. Smith, past president and chairman of the Nominating Committee, presented the slate of officers. Executive Director Chester L. Mosher, welcomed the electees, recognized two retiring directors, introduced his staff and awarded a 25-year commemorative plate to Associate Director Leonard D. Garfield.

Sidney A. Marston, later elected president in an organizational meeting of the board, presided on completion of the business. Other officers elected: Cooper Eastman, vice president; Eldred Peterson, clerk; Murray Both, treasurer and Walter H. Phillips, assistant treasurer.

New directors elected are: Mrs. Raymond Acheson, A. Robert Bush, Adelbert J. Gascon, Aaron Levine, Richard B. Osterberg, Stewart E. Savage Jr., William C. Swartley, Walter F. Tennant, W. Frederick Uehlein and G. Parker Wahn.

Mrs. R. Emerson Sylvester announced the awarding for the Auxiliary of the Alex and Lola Miller Scholarship to Scott Chisholm of 20 Oakland street, Newton.

Local architect and widely recognized tennis complex authority, Axel Kaufman, displayed slides from Centers country-wide and reviewed a marketing study of tennis in the west suburban area. A discussion period revealed the depth of interest in the expansion of Y facilities.

NO RECOURSE

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — An Argentine court has ruled that a person who crosses a street outside a marked pedestrian crossing zone has no legal recourse if struck by a vehicle.

The court overturned a judge's ruling granting damages to Segismundo Haar, 73, who was struck by a pickup truck driven by Ignacio Zaraboso.

"The pedestrian who crosses (the street) outside the marked zone is the only person legally responsible for the accident," the court said, setting aside the damage payment.

The city document noted Gloss' donation of 250,000 books over the past quarter-century to worthy causes and to the public and his role in helping preserve from demolition the historic Sears Crescent building alongside City Hall Plaza.

Gloss was dubbed "Boston's lively literary landmark," and shop and proprietor were saluted "for their valued contributions to Boston's reknown as the Athens of America."

Gov. Dukakis commented in a statement, "We owe a debt of thanks to those, like George Gloss, who help maintain that climate of intellectual curiosity that is essential to the maintenance of democracy and freedom."

Sabres wing jumps to WHA

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — Buffalo Sabres winger Rick Dudley jumped to the World Hockey Association Wednesday, the day after his NHL team lost the Stanley Cup to the Philadelphia Flyers.

A spokesman for the Sabres said Dudley had signed a five-year contract with the WHA Cincinnati Stingers.

Piglet, played by Ranu Muhkergee, and Winnie-the-Pooh, played by David Marcioni, discuss how to catch a Heffalump.

Horace Mann pupils stage an original 'Winnie-the-Pooh'

A sparkling and original production of "Winnie-the-Pooh" was put on in April by the second and third grades of the Horace Mann School.

The show was written and directed by Vicki Patterson, Horace Mann teacher, with the musical accompaniment being played by Lois Lemons, music specialist.

The opening number was 'They're Changing Guard at Buckingham Palace' with the guards being played by Richard Antonellis, Eric Moschella, Darrell Newton and Colin Ryan. Christopher Robin and Alice were played by Tony Tomaino and Sophia Ahmed.

In the first play, "Pooh and the Honey Tree," Ana Frega played Pooh, William Doherty was Christopher Robin, and Gloria Kincaid was the narrator. The bees were Julie McKie, Donna Lawrence, Diane Stone, David Russell, Patty Proia and Karen Richards.

The next number, "Pooh Gets STuck in a Tight Place," starred Kim Civetti as Pooh Bear, Penelope Angier as Rabbit, Joey Rubin as the narrator, and Normand Rousseau as Christopher Robin. Friends and Relations were Bruce Cole, Joey Reynolds and John Borelli.

In "Eeyore Loses a Tail," Diane Whalen was the narrator with Kathleen Doherty playing the part of Pooh, Andy Armsby as Owl, Carmen Thomas as Eeyore and Nino Campagnore as Christopher Robin. Marguerita Mezzetti played the part of Kanga, Marissa DeSantis was Roo and Carol Higgins was Rabbitt.

The next play was "Pooh and Piglet Catch a Heffalump." Pooh was played by David Marcioni, Ranu Muhkergee was Piglet, Chris Guzzi was Christopher Robin, and Joseph King was the narrator.

The last play was "Eeyore's Birthday." The parts were well taken by Steven Baughman as Pooh, Shari Ross as Eeyore, Merryn Hearn as Piglet, and Sylvia DeSantis, Doria Tambourini, Marjorie Brody and Sharon Cullins as Friends and Relations.

Was it successful? One young member of the audience said it all when, after the finale, she sighed, "I didn't want it to end. I wished it would go on forever!"

Beginnings' 'Guys and Dolls on Eliot Church stage June 5-7

The members of Beginnings will present their third production of the year, "Guys and Dolls," June 5, 6 and 7. Show time is 8 p.m. on the stage of the Eliot Congregational Church, 474 Centre St., Newton Corner.

The theater-arts workshop, like most Beginnings programs, was developed by the kids themselves with staff and volunteer support. It was developed not only as a way to have fun but, equally important, as a way to offer something of value to the entire Newton community.

Each play is chosen for specific reasons. "West Side Story," the first production, was chosen because many Beginnings members identified with the teenage gangs. The next play, "The Other Side of the Tracks," was chosen for similar reasons. "Gypsy" was produced to give the girls of Beginnings a chance for the major roles, while "Guys and Dolls" was picked because the boys really liked the chance to play gamblers and hoods.

Under the direction of Peter Sklar and choreographer Linda Bickelmann, rehearsals for "Guys and Dolls" are currently running seven days a week.

The members also take responsibility for stage crew and scenery design. With the help of Judy Daneilson, telephone booths, a New York skyline, and a Salvation Army hall are being built.

The entire play is now coming to life under the hands of Newton teenagers and they want to offer it to the citizens of Newton. Tickets will be available at the door or by calling 332-2942.

The three performances of "Guys and Dolls," mark the conclusion of the first full year of a drug prevention program which was rated number one in the area. Through the area offices of the Massachusetts Division of Drug Rehabilitation, the National Institute for Drug Abuse awarded Beginnings a special funding grant to develop the theater-arts workshop. Drug prevention agencies from all over the state have come to see the plays, and several programs are now using the workshop as a model for developing their own theater programs.

Beginnings was begun in 1969 in an effort to offer alternative social and recreational patterns to teenagers who otherwise might be involved with drugs, crime, and alcohol. Beginnings does and can serve almost every young person in Newton who feels bored with his or her life. Now in its sixth year, Beginnings has established itself as an ongoing program as well as a program which can document both its need and its success. It is funded by federal, state and local agencies as well as private citizens.

Power failure interrupts drama festival finals

More than 700 theatre aficionados were left in the dark after an electrical power failure caused cancellation of the finals of the New England Theatre Conference's 22nd annual Drama Festival for community theatres Sunday at Brandeis University.

The Newton Country Players' production of Tom Stoppard's farce, "The Real Inspector Hound," had been selected one of four finalists late that afternoon, and had actually completed their evening performance before the termination of visibility. The original field of 28 contestants had been narrowed to 11 and then to the final four.

Other finalists include the productions of "The Madwoman of Chaillot" by The Sudbury Players, "Jacques Brel Is Alive And Living In Paris" by Arlington Friends of the Drama, and "Feiffer's People" by the Associated Theatre Groups of Winchester. The re-scheduled date of the finals was undetermined at press time.

Selections were made by Ms. Norma Springford of the Canadian Guild of Drama Adjudicators and at stake was the "Best Production" award. The winning entry was to be chosen by guest judge Elliot Norton, drama critic for the Boston Herald American. Host group was the Garrett Players of Lawrence.

The gathering, largest to witness the finals since their inception, remained patiently in their seats, singing tunes such as "There's No Business Like Show Business," hopefully awaiting the resumption of performances. However, after a wait of 90 minutes during the eclipse, and with emergency power waning, departed in organized fashion from the Spingold Theatre upon request.

"Inspector Hound," is directed by Danny Kosow of Chestnut Hill, the Players' director-in-residence for the past five years and the recipient of the "Best Director" award at the NETC Festival in 1972.

Featured in the "Inspector Hound" cast are Pat Pellows, Arnold Felton, Mikki Krassin, Kosow, Ed Urban, John Deming, Sandy Deming, George MacIver and Eric L. Andler.

Working on production are James Sloane, stage manager; Adrienne Lowenthal, set design; Larry Levison, lighting and sound effects; Mikki Krassin, Sandy Deming and Jane Yoffe, set decor; Daniel Kosow, publicity; Eric Andler, Margaret Annis, Linday Annis, Ed Bruce, John Deming, Harry Freedman, Cheryl Kaplan, Dave Levitan, Jay Massimo, Marcia Massimo, Renee Massimo, George MacIver, Anne Neumann, Linda Pandolfe, Lee Pinkofsky, Allyn Pinkofsky, Skip Portney and Jack Summers, production crew.

The Newton Country Players are a non-profit, philanthropic association comprised of local residents who, as an avocation, are actively engaged in the development, expansion and assistance of theatre activity on community and educational levels. The theatre provides an opportunity for valuable experience and participation in a creative art; also, a demonstration of what can be accomplished through a cooperative volunteer effort.

Cinderella story of Evita Peron

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Evita Peron's death of cancer in 1952 at the age of 33 closed a chapter in her Cinderella story but the saga was far from over.

Maria Eva "Evita" Duarte was a blonde 26-year-old actress from a poor family when she married 50-year-old widower Juan D. peron in 1945.

By the time of her death she had achieved prominence greater than any woman in Latin American history.

Evita's fiery oratory helped Peron with election to the Argentine presidency in 1946. As first lady, she organized massive charity efforts and personally dispensed handouts to the needy.

Grief-stricken mourners lined up for days to pay final respects to Evita. Her body was carefully preserved and put on permanent display at Labor Confederation headquarters in Buenos Aires.

Peron, who had remarried in 1961, returned to Argentina in 1973 and was elected president again, with his third wife as vice president. He died in office last July 1 and was succeeded by his widow.

President Maria Estela Peron recently approved plans for construction of a national shrine in Buenos Aires to house the remains of Peron, Evita and other figures of Argentine history.

When Peron was overthrown in September, 1955, his opponents removed Evita's body and had it secretly buried in Rome under a false name.

The whereabouts of Evita's body was a mystery for 16 years, until the military government then in power had her remains returned to the exiled Peron in Madrid as a good-will gesture in 1971.

PEANUT PROBLEMS

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — Weed problems cost Texas peanut farmers $6 million last year, the Texas A&M University Agricultural Experiment Station reports.

Weeds caused lower yields, lower quality and higher expenditures for control efforts, the station reported.

Dr. Morris Merkle of the station said two species of nutsedge grass, in particular, are becoming problems in peanut farms thoughout Texas.

"Vernman is the only chemical effective against nutsedge that has Environmental Protection Agency clearance for use in peanuts," Merkle said.
